HOYNE SEIZES CRIME FORT

SLEUTHS RAID BURR OAK INN AND ARREST 32

Climb Over Train to Foil Lookout Racing to Sound Alarm.

BULLETIN.

At 2 o'clock this morning it was reported that four confessions had been obtained at the state's attorney's office to the effect that Burr Oak has been in the grip of a graft and crime syndicate which provided for the protection of disorderly houses, gambling houses and saloons in which "most anything went." The confessions are reported to have been made by officials of the village.

Burr Oak inn, a veritable fortress of crime, was raided yesterday. This roadhouse in the outskirts of Chicago, described as the rendezvous of criminals, the haven of gunmen, giving evidence of mysterious murders, fortified like a frontier blockhouse, peopled with disorderly women and their cadets, payoff station for corrupt officials, honeycombed with subterranean passages, the town magistrate holding court behind the bar, burial permits signed in blank by the village clerk always on hand—lovely Burr Oak inn was raided yesterday in a display of military maneuvering that would have done credit to Geronimo.

SEIZE 30 MEN, 2 WOMEN.

Fifteen detectives of the state's attorney's office, led by Assistant State's Attorney Prystalski, surrounded the fortress while pursuing an investigation of municipal graft, said to be unparalleled, and arrested thirty men and two women. Among them were:

"JUDGE" HENRY WOLSKE, local magistrate, accused of tending bar in the Burr Oak inn, selling drinks to speculative "suckers," aiding in their robbery, and then holding court with the bar as his legal throne, dismissing the "defendants."

OSCAR LIONBORG, village marshal, accused of participating in false arrests and of "chasing suckers out of town."

PETER MACHALAC, village president and saloonkeeper, accused of complicity in village corruption.

WILLIAM PETERS, village clerk, whose name was found signed to blank burial permits, suggesting the possibility of unexplained deaths.

TRUSTEES ARE ARRESTED.

In addition there were taken into custody twenty-eight others, including all the village trustees. These are the Burr Oak trustees locked in the county jail last night for safe keeping: P. M. Peters, Frank Filk, Charles Price, John Szymakiewicz, Stanley Pasinski, and Frank Sieroslawski.

Among some of the notorious characters were these: Fred Reese, John King, nephew of "Patsy" King, old time racetrack gambler, and Jack Moore.

Both the proprietors of the Burr Oak inn, Joseph Barnes and Sam "Kinky Haired Jew" Harris, who have been in the county jail before, were taken. Jack Moore is the manager of the inn.

AUTO THIEVES' HANGOUT.

The investigation of conditions in Burr Oak, which is a village of about 700, has been under way at the direction of Mr. Hoyne since the discovery that the inn was used a as hangout for members of the automobile thieves' trust.

It was in the inn that Lemuel Nutter, alleged "brains" of the gang, was arrested after a stiff gunfight.

Nutter fled on the approach of detectives and was found in one of the underground passages. Barnes and Harris were both arrested, but released when Nutter died in the county jail.

Barnes and Harris were arrested earlier in the year when "Peggy" O'Dea, a West Harrison street saloonkeeper, was mysteriously slain in an early morning battle in the inn.

RACE TO ALARM FAILS.

Mr. Hoyne placed the investigation in the hands of Assistant State's Attorneys Irwin Walker and Ernest Buehler. Inquiry was quietly set on foot and yesterday was set for the raid. In eight automobiles the detectives drove to the village, which technically is at One Hundred and Nineteenth and Wood streets, just over the city limits.

The detectives had come within a mile of the village when Joseph Barnes, one of the proprietors of the inn, raced past them in a small car.

The inn is a long, low structure and is surrounded by a high fence. Barnes raced for the inn, but he had failed to take into consideration the railroad

U. S. PLANS TO INSURE LIVES OF ALL SOLDIERS

CAR MEN REJECT BUSBY'S OFFER OF 2 CENTS MORE

Company Turns Down 50 Cent Maximum and Shorter Day.

Hope of an immediate amicable settlement of a new controversy between the street car company and its operating employés, brought about by demands of the latter for increased wages and shorter hours, went glimmering yesterday.

At a meeting with a committee representing the car men's union, President Leonard A. Busby of the Chicago Surface lines rejected their demands for a wage increase from 27 cents to 36 cents an hour, with a gradual raise to 50 cents an hour at the end of the first year of the agreement they wanted the company officials to sign. An offer of an increase of 2 cents an hour was made by Mr. Busby as a counter proposal.

Demands for a basic eight hour working day, to supplant the present ten hour day, were flatly refused.

Following a brief discussion of the counter proposal with Mr. Busby the committee went to the union headquarters at 138 North La Salle street, where the company's offer was discussed until late at night.

Arbitration Next Step.

"I am not at liberty to express an opinion of the new proposition at present," said William Quinlan, president of the union. "Our committee was not authorized to accept any offer other than one in accordance with our demands. We can do nothing but present the company's offer to the general membership of the union at a meeting on Tuesday night."

"We have no further offer to make," is the ultimatum contained in Mr. Busby's proposal.

If the union refuses to accept the company's offer on Tuesday, which seems probable, the controversy probably will be submitted to arbitration.

Controversy in Figures.

The following table shows in a nutshell the wage phase of the controversy:

For trainmen in passenger service (the majority of the company operating employés):

	Pres. rate.	Company offer.	Men's demands.
First three months..........	27c	29c	36c
Second three months........	29c	31c	40c
Second six months..........	30c	32c	45c
Second year....................	32c	34c	50c
Third year......................	33c	35c	50c
Fourth year....................	34c	36c	50c
Fifth year......................	36c	38c	50c

A straight increase of 2 cents is offered to car repairers, shop mechanics, and all other operating employés of the company, a number of whom demanded raises amounting to more than 20 per cent.

Stress is laid on the fact that the country is at war and that success of its arms depends largely on freedom from industrial strife in the proposal made by Mr. Busby.

No Increase in Profits.

"We are called upon to make a new contract under extremely difficult conditions," reads the offer. "You are confronted by the high cost of living, and the company is confronted by the high cost of operation."

Then it is pointed out that the 5 cent rate of fare cannot be "marked up" as other commodities are. Following this the statement of Mr. Busby continues:

"We are engaged in raising an army of 2,000,000 men. A few days ago in this city the labor representatives of Great Britain stated that for every soldier at the front at least five additional men were required to supply him with arms, ammunition, food, and clothing. An army of 2,000,000 men in the field means that upward of 10,000,000 others will be taken away from their usual work and employed in carrying on the war.

"The reduction of our working hours at a time when the country is mobilizing its full man power for the great conflict is, in our opinion, unwise and wholly unwarranted."

Opinion Lowers Prices.

Regarding the high cost of living, the statement says:

"Public opinion is being aroused, and since you presented your contract two weeks ago there has been a marked decrease in prices.

Here Mr. Busby gives figures showing a decrease in the price of flour, wheat, and potatoes.

"We have undoubtedly seen the worst of this situation," continues the statement, "and should look forward with confidence to a decline of the present prices to some reasonable basis under governmental direction. Were we to attempt to meet this situation by constant wage increases, which, frankly, we cannot do, the relief for you would only be temprary, and fr this cmpany, and all other companies similarly situated, the result would be bankruptcy."

The proposal points out that the company's net earnings are materially less than those of last year.

$4,000 POLICIES AS SUBSTITUTE FOR PENSIONS

Death or Serious Hurt May Be Paid For by New System.

THE COST OF PENSIONS

The total of disbursement for pensions by the United States from July 1, 1790, to July 1, 1916, is $5,054,630,727.

Of this amount $4,765,075,020 was paid on claims growing out of the civil war.

The greatest amount paid in any one year was $176,714,907 in 1913, nearly fifty years after the close of the war.

The cost for 1916-17 is estimated at $160,000,000.

On a basis of 250,000 casualties during the present war the payment at $4,000 each for both killed and wounded would amount to $1,000,000,000.

Washington, D. C., June 2.—Plans for issuing $4,000 free government insurance on the life of every American soldier and sailor during the war in lieu of pension arrangements will be taken up next week by the council of national defense. The plan also would provide insurance for partial or total disability. A report prepared by Assistant Secretary Sweet of the commerce department urges that the insurance be provided through legislation before American troops are sent to France.

LENGTHY INVESTIGATION.

The defense council took up the question some weeks ago and turned the whole subject over to the department of commerce for investigation.

The plans prepared provide for a flat insurance of $4,000 on the life of every officer and private in the military and naval service to be paid to his beneficiaries without premiums. A government insurance bureau would handle the subject and there would be provision for a system of insurance by which officers and men desiring to do so could take out amounts higher than the $4,000 free policy by paying premiums at peace rates.

COMPANIES READY TO AGREE.

Insurance companies, it is said, are ready to approve the scheme if assured the government will not continue in the insurance business after the war. War hazards are so great that few companies are anxious to insure soldiers and sailors except at high premiums, officials have been told, although many companies who have on their lists men now in the military and naval service have not advanced their premium rates.

At the end of the war the government, it is suggested, could turn over to insurance companies its premium war business, dropping the flat $4,000 policies on all who leave the service, but continuing it on men who remain in the army or navy.

AID TO ARMY MORALE.

One argument advanced for the insurance plan is that it would improve the morale of the troops, since many would go into battle much more willingly if assured their dependents would be cared for if they were killed. In case of death the insurance would be paid in installments whose amount would be determined by a government board.

Government officials are convinced the best way to dispose of the pension problem is to meet it beforehand. The history of the pension system since the civil war has shown many abuses which it is hoped to avoid by providing insurance before men are killed.

The success of the government war risk insurance bureau, which has paid out large sums for ship losses, is pointed to as an argument that the government itself can bear the risk.

Of course the $4,000 insurance given free would be a direct loss, but pensions, it is argued, would be much more costly in the long run.

Soldier Shoots at Auto Speeding in Fort Sheridan

Fort Sheridan was awakened last night when Private O. S. Kaoski of the Iowa engineers, fired upon an automobile load of persons who entered the main gate of the fort at a high speed, circled the grounds, and made off down the road.

The soldier had no time to make the three usual commands of "halt," but fired when the machine sped past him.

The incident remains an enigma.

GIVE THE BUTLER THE O. O.—MAY BE A BURGLAR

Count Swaboda, Late of Sing Sing, in Town with $80,000 Loot.

Chicago proved unlucky for Count Jacob Swaboda once. It may prove his jinx once more. The count is believed to be in the city. The police are looking for him. A reward of $2,000 has been offered for his arrest.

Swaboda is wanted for the theft of jewels valued at $80,205 from the residence of Frederick H. Allen, in Pelham Manor, N. Y., May 10. He had been released from Sing Sing penitentiary a week before the robbery. He obtained a position as butler in Mr. Allen's household and walked off with the valuables.

Genius of Burglary.

Swaboda is rated as a genius of burglary. His method always has been to hire out as a butler and rob the house of his employer. He has worked this trick in the homes of many wealthy and fashionable people. Among his victims are Edward Lowber Welch and Mrs. Elizabeth Cochrane of Philadelphia, Paul Caldi and Leopold Cahn of New York. From these residences alone he is credited with having stolen $300,000.

The burglar is said to be a genuine Hungarian count with a lineage which he traces back to Attila, "the Scourge of God," whose devastating career of European conquest was stopped at Chalons. He was awarded a medal by James G. Blaine, then secretary of state, for saving the lives of two men from drowning at Green Point Ferry, N. Y., in 1889. He was given a gold watch by the late Senator Leland Stanford for saving the life of his niece, Miss Lillian Stanford, in California. He served in the Spanish-American war with the Forty-seventh New York infantry.

Exits with $20,000 Jewels.

He was arrested in Chicago in 1906 for the Welch robbery. He had been engaged by Mr. Welch as second butler. He "butlered" long enough to learn where Mrs. Welch kept her jewels. Then he decamped with them. They were valued at $20,000.

Swaboda usually travels about the country in an expensive touring car, dresses fashionably, and lives at the best hotels. He has used the aliases of Albert Wound, Louis Halbert, Jack Sabode, and Louis Falter. He is 62 years old, but, it is said, readily passes for 40.

U. S. HAS UNDER CONSTRUCTION 700 NEW VESSELS

Washington, D. C., June 2.—In response to the senate's resolution of inquiry, Secretary Redfield notified congress today that on May 1 there were under construction in the United States 537 steel vessels, with tonnage of 2,039,000, and 167 wooden vessels, aggregating 214,700 tons. The figures are nearly double those of a year ago.

Lumber for 100 wooden ships has been ordered from members of the Southern Pine association by Maj. Gen. George W. Goethals, general manager of the shipping board's emergency fleet corporation. The price is $35 a thousand feet at the mills.

The orders call for approximately 140,000,000 feet, and delivery will be made as fast as the mills can cut the timber

"AS A SOLDIER AND A GENTLEMAN"

Registrars Told How to Treat the Young Men Who May "March to Battle for You."

SHERIFF'S OFFICE,
COOK COUNTY.
Chicago, June 2.

Dear Sir: Each man you will register on Tuesday may be, before the end of the year, marching to battle for you.

You should treat each one with great courtesy as a soldier and a gentleman.

I ask you to remember that this registration is not merely a legal duty.

This registration is itself an honor roll of those men whose age entitles them to be soldiers of the United States.

It is your duty to register their names.

It is their privilege to have the greatest opportunity to serve our country.

Very truly yours,
JOHN E. TRAEGER, Sheriff.

WOMAN KILLED WHEN MOTORS CRASH HEAD-ON

Mrs. Mary Hanson of 4439 Long avenue was killed and five others were hurt last night when the car driven by Mrs. Hanson's husband, Henry, collided with that of Llewellyn Thomas of 603 Addison avenue. The accident took place at Montrose boulevard and Lockwood avenue.

In Thomas' car were four other men, all of whom were injured. Hanson and Thomas were unhurt, but Charles Hanson, a son of the former, was bruised and cut.

Mrs. Hanson was taken to a physician's office nearby, but it was found she was past relief. The police declared the accident unavoidable.

Oliver W. Nouris of 1140 South Scoville avenue, who was injured on Friday night in the collision in which his mother was killed outright, died yesterday in the Oak Park hospital.

JANE ADDAMS AIDS LEAGUE AGAINST DRAFT

New York, June 2.—[Special.]—It became known today that Jane Addams of Hull house, Chicago, had cast her lot with the People's Council, an outgrowth of the peace conference held a few days ago. The council and the conference have not urged men to refuse to register, but they were responsible for many attacks on the whole idea of conscription.

Miss Addams was present at an informal gathering of some of the members of the council today. Louis P. Lochner, former secretary of the Ford peace trip, who is prominent in the affairs of the council, announced that Miss Addams had expressed herself as in entire sympathy with the movement.

The Second American Conference for Democracy and the Terms of Peace will be held in Chicago.

Cabinet of China Quits After Revolt Outbreak

PEKIN, June 2.—The cabinet of China has resigned after a revolutionary outbreak. There appears to be no immediate prospect of controlling the situation.

There have been persistent reports of trouble in China for the past week or more. The military governors of Anhui, Shantung, Fukien, Chili and Honan provinces were reported to have rebelled, insisting on the reinstatement of Quan Chi-jui as premier.

U. S. WORLD WAR ARMY SIGNS UP NEXT TUESDAY

Ten Million Men, from 21 to 30 Years, Inclusive, Must Register.

New York, June 2.—[Special.]—Both federal and state officials say the situation is well in hand and that no disorder is expected at the Tuesday registration.

They are to be prepared, however, and the entire New York National guard will be held under arms. Ten thousand men will be mobilized in New York City.

Orders for the mobilization of the men in their armories were sent from Albany today by Adjt. Gen. Stotesbury to Maj. Gen. O'Ryan.

CALL OF THE NATION.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., June 2.—[Special.]—Next Tuesday is registration day.

On that day the United States will take the first step toward getting into the war with Germany effectively.

On that day more than 10,000,000 men who are 21 years old and not yet 31, will register for the selective draft, which is destined to produce an army of 1,000,000, perhaps 2,000,000, fighters for the European trenches.

Germany is watching the American registration day. The spirit in which the young men of America turn out to do their bit for their country and to "make the world safe for democracy" will be either a bad or a good omen for Germany.

WHAT DAY IS FOR.

In impressive language President Wilson has set forth the meaning of registration day to the American nation in the hour of its need.

"It is nothing less than the day upon which the manhood of the country shall step forward in one solid rank in defense of the ideals to which this nation is consecrated," said the president in his proclamation setting June 5 as the time when young men of the country must register for the selective draft to the new national army.

"The power against which we are arrayed has sought to impose its will upon the world by force. To this end it has increased armament until it has changed the face of war.

WHOLE NATION ARMED.

"In the sense in which we have been wont to think of armies there are no armies in this struggle. There are entire nations armed.

"Thus, the men who remain to till the soil and man the factories are no less a part of the army than is in France than the men beneath the battle flags.

"It must be so with us.

"It is not an army that we must shape and train for war; it is a nation.

"To this end our people must draw close in one compact front against a common foe. But this cannot be if each man pursues a private purpose. All must pursue one purpose.

"The nation needs all men; but it needs each man, not in the field that will most pleasure him, but in the endeavor that will best serve the common good.

"To this end congress has provided that the nation shall be organized for war by selection and that each man shall be classified for service in the place to which it shall best serve the general good to call him."

MUST REGISTER.

So, on registration day, the young men of America must register for this selective service.

Registration does not mean that all who enroll will be summoned to fight in the new national army.

At least 500,000 of the 10,000,000 who, it is estimated, are eligible within the prescribed age limits of the law, will be drafted at once for this army. They will be the men best able physically to fight; those who have no fathers, mothers, wives, and children, or others solely dependent upon them for support.

Many skilled tradesmen, though physically able and eager to fight for their country, will be selected to fight behind the lines in factory and on farms; chosen to feed the armies and the people of the nations at war against Germany; assigned to make munitions for the armies in the field, and many other things upon which war depends.

DICKSON ISSUES STATE'S ORDERS FOR THE DRAFT

Illinois to Know How Many Register by Wednesday Noon

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., June 2.—[Special.]—Illinois will know the number of men that have been registered for the army shortly after noon of Wednesday, following the registration on Tuesday.

Elaborate arrangements have been made by the provost marshal general for Illinois, who is Adjt. Gen. Dickson, to receive and compile the returns. The orders from Washington, sent on through to sheriffs and mayors, is that the complete count in the subdivisions shall be reported by telegraph to Springfield before Wednesday noon. All of Tuesday night and Wednesday morning is granted to the precinct registrars to report to the sheriff or the mayor, as the case may be.

Col. James Rinanye of the adjutant general's staff is in charge of the organization. His headquarters are at the state arsenal, where the reports will be received and consolidated. The war department expects to receive a complete report from Illinois before Wednesday midnight.

Final Instruction Given.

Gen. Dickson, as provost marshal, issued a bulletin today covering the latest phases of the situation, as follows:

"The following is published for the information and guidance of all concerned.

"For all residents of Illinois—Penalty:

"Imprisonment for not more than one year is the penalty prescribed for violation of the provisions of the selective service law. This may apply to any individual in the state, male or female, in general, as follows:

"[A] To THE MAN REQUIRED TO REGISTER—For failure to do so.

"(B) To any officer or agent charged with any duty in connection with registration or exemption—for failure or neglect to perform his or her duty, or for fraud in its performance.

"(C) To any person (including classes (A) and (B) above)—for fraudulent statement or certificate as to fitness or liability of himself or any other person for service; or for evading or aiding another to evade the requirements of the law, or of the regulations thereunder.

"The man who fails to register, in addition to suffering the penalty, will be duly registered.

Cards of Absentees.

"Cards of absentees: Cards of absentees received by sheriffs and mayors may be sent to chief registrars as soon as received; they must be sent in time to reach home precincts on June 5.

"Unidentified cards—Cards of absentees and sick which do not identify the individual with a precinct by failing to give precinct number or home address will be assigned by the sheriff or mayor, as the case may be, to a precinct. The letter "X" will be used to designate such cards; it will be placed before the NUMBER OF PRECINCT on card prior to transmitting it to chief registrar, thus:

"'Precinct X-1' will show an unidentified absentee or sick person assigned to the First precinct of a certain ward, city, or township. A list of persons thus assigned showing precincts will be prepared for file with the records of the registration area.

How to Make Returns.

"Returns. Bear in mind that two returns are required: one by telegram on form 3, and the second by mail on form 2. By proper supervision and assistance of registrars the telegraphic report to the governor should reach this office early on the morning of June 6. It is expected that all such reports will be in by noon of that day. Anticipate your difficulties and prepare to overcome them.

"Copies of cards. In many places it will be possible to have the copies of cards made at the places of registration by unpaid volunteers. The copy must be an exact duplicate and include names of individuals and of registrar signing the original. The word "COPY" will be written over words "REGISTRATION CARD." Any competent person, male or female, may be used in copying and need not be sworn. Before deciding on this be sure that you prepare against confusion of copies with originals; if you fear confusion do not attempt the plan.

"FOR REGISTRARS. CARDS OF SICK AND ABSENTEES. Handle them at any convenient time during the day, give each its series number, and put it in its proper file.

"NATIONAL GUARD. Any man who is now a member of any recognized organization and has taken the 'Hay' oath will not be registered. All others of prescribed age who claim to belong must register—they are not national guard.

Details to Be Given.

"NAME. The first name must be written in full; the middle name, if any, need not be—an initial will do.

"DATE OF BIRTH. If the man does not know the exact month or day, he may say ABOUT SO AND SO.

"DEPENDENTS. To justify a statement that the individual registering has some one dependent upon him for support it must be a fact that he is now supporting the person and that the person has no other means of support. The only dependents are those given in question. A divorced wife to whom alimony is being paid is not a dependent.

"EXEMPTION CLAIM should be made now, but may be made later. Its purpose is to aid exemption boards and to give the provost marshal general an idea of the number to be drawn to obtain the first 500,000.

Exemption for Workers.

"SUMMARIZATION BLANK—Class all citizens under 'white' except those of African descent.

"OCCUPATIONAL EXEMPTIONS—This class will be determined by the answers to questions Nos. 7 and 12. A bulletin on this is being sent out from the provost marshal general's office to mayors and sheriffs.

"ERRATA—On page 22, registration regulations, relating to entries of group "C" on summarization blank, the references to columns is transposed—15 should read 16, and 16 should read 15."

Youth Warned Not to Dodge the Draft; May Get Prison Term and Army Service

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 2.—[Special.]—Attorney General Gregory issued a statement today reiterating a warning to young men of military age that it will do them no good to heed advice of disloyal citizens urging them not to register under the selective draft law next Tuesday.

Such evasion will lead only to imprisonment, the attorney general reminds those liable to the draft, and later to enforced registration and liability for military service just the same.

Approximately thirty arrests of persons who have conspired to interfere with registration have been made in the last few days. Other arrests are expected before Tuesday. But the movement against the anti-draft conspirators has been so forceful that it has had a remarkable effect in restraining what might otherwise have resulted in serious trouble on registration day.

Officials Are Ready.

Government agents are ready everywhere to handle any evidence of disloyalty or treasonable acts on registration day, but federal officials believe disloyalty will be negligible.

"It has come to the notice of the department," the attorney general said in his statement today, "that certain disloyal citizens, who are themselves beyond conscription, are suggesting to the young men of the country that it is better to suffer imprisonment under the terms of the conscription act than to register with the likelihood of being enlisted and compelled to serve at the front.

"Attention is called to the fact that under section 5 of this act parties convicted of the charge of evading registration are not only punished for the crime committed but are thereupon duly registered with all the liability for military service resulting therefrom."

Arrest Eleven in Ohio.

Cincinnati, O., June 2.—With the arrest of two men tonight who are accused of having anti-conscription literature in their possession, thirteen men are being held by United States government authorities on charges of treason. One other man is being held as a material witness.

One of the men arrested tonight is an Austrian subject. He is said to have told the police that he received the anti-conscription literature from the other man arrested tonight, and that he did not understand its meaning.

New York Police Busy.

New York, June 2.—Two women and a young man were arrested tonight on charges of circulating anti-conscription literature. The women described themselves as Martha Gruening, 28 years old, an author, and Rose Marie Stanier, 21 years old, a student. The young man said he was Alexis Sartorious, 19 years old.

Refusal by militia and naval men today to tell by whose orders they attended the anti-conscription meeting in Madison Square garden on Thursday night was upheld by United States Commissioner Hitchcock. The men declined on the ground that their orders were of a confidential nature.

FREE PLOT SUSPECTS.

Hinton G. Clabaugh, head of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice, announced late yesterday that all ten persons who were detained in connection with the alleged plot to prevent registration under the draft bill had been released. Two of these were women.

The release was decided upon after a conference between First Assistant District Attorney Joseph B. Fleming and Mr. Clabaugh. Both officials agreed that while all those being detained had committed a technical offense, it seemed best not to file any formal complaints until after June 5, the date set for the registration.

One Man Is Named.

Only one name of those detained was given out, that of Thomas Levish, 23 years old, 2811 North California avenue. The detention of all was the direct result of the activity of secret service men who mingled with the crowds at the overflow peace terms meeting held a week ago at Grant park. It is said that valuable information was obtained by Mr. Clabaugh's department as a result of these detentions, and it was admitted that Levish was the man whose pockets were stuffed with the stickers bearing the inscription "Do not register on June 5. Others are with you."

The release of these people is by no means a "whitewash" as far as they are concerned, according to government officials, as they will be subjected to a strict surveillance.

Pacifist Visits Clabaugh.

Dr. Cornelia De Bey, the well known pacifist, was a visitor at the office of Mr. Clabaugh during the day.

When asked if she had come to see Mr. Clabaugh of her own volition or at his request, she cheerfully admitted that he had sent for her.

"And I know what it is all about," said Dr. De Bey, before she had even seen Mr. Clabaugh. "He just wants to know my views as to this registration law. Although an avowed pacifist, I have advised all pacifists who come under this law to go and register on Tuesday next and to specify under the exemption clause that they are pacifists and are against taking up arms."

DRAFT IN 1780

Being Views of George Washington on Best Method to Raise an Army.

THE views of George Washington on the draft plan for raising an army are to be found in "The Writings of George Washington," a copy of which is in the public library. In a letter dated "Morristown, 25 May, 1780" and addressed to Philip Schuyler, John Mathews, and Nathaniel Peabody, a committee from congress, Washington wrote:

"The mode by Draught is, I am persuaded, the only efficacious one to obtain men. It appears to me certain that it is the only one to obtain them in time: nor can the period which you have appointed for bringing them into the field be delayed without defeating the object. I have little doubt that at any time, and much less at the present juncture, the powers of government exerted with confidence will be equal to the purpose of Draughting. The hopes of the people, elevated by the prospects before them, will induce a cheerful compliance with this and all the other measures of vigor, which have been recommended and which the exigency requires.

"Notwithstanding the extension of the Draught which I have taken the liberty to advise, occasional aids of militia will still be wanted, but in much less number in this case than in the other.

"I have entire confidence that the respective Legislatures will be fully impressed with the importance and delicacy of the present juncture and will second the views of the committee by the most speedy and vigorous efforts. With every sentiment of respect and esteem I am, etc."

The letter was written at a time when Washington's plans were being opposed by pacifists, then known as tories.

SERBIAN REVOLT IS CRUSHED OUT; HUNDREDS DIE

UDINE, June 2, via Paris.—Fragmentary news has been received here through neutral countries of widespread insurrectionary movements in Serbia. This news is now supplemented by the statements of Austrian prisoners captured in the recent Italian advance, giving details of the merciless methods of repression used to crush the uprising.

The insurgents were gradually surrounded by Austrian, German, and Bulgarian regiments, and all who fell into their hands, chiefly old men, women, and children, are declared to have been massacred. In spite of this procedure fierce resistance was offered for three weeks and heavy losses inflicted on the invaders, especially the Bulgarians.

The insurgents finally succumbed to superior numbers, and the Serbians were hanged by the thousands.

According to the prisoners the Bulgarians were guilty of such atrocities, especially against women and children, that even their Austro-German allies termed them barbaric.

GIRLS' STORIES LEAD TO ARREST OF CANDY MAN

Stories of two 16 year old girls, who, after a night's disappearance told a story of "spending the night with a friend," resulted in revelations that may cause prosecution of owners of a hotel and a café in Thirty-ninth street. Harold Chandler, owner of a confectionery shop at 3900 Ellis avenue, already is under arrest and the police are looking for George Tinkle, 850 East Thirty-ninth street.

Muriel Morton of 4530 Lake Park avenue and Alberta Barton of 1019 East Forty-second street, both 16 years old, were summoned before Lieut. Patrick McCauley yesterday after news of their whereabouts reached him. The girls said they went to Chandler's place Thursday night and there met Chandler and Tinkle. They went to a theater and later to the Ellis café at 326 East Thirty-ninth street. The Barton girl told of having several drinks. She said they danced and then went "somewhere."

City Prosecutor Weds.

It became known yesterday that William Schulze, 2531 North California avenue, a city prosecutor in the Hyde Park court, married Miss Rose Vogelsang, 3021 Davlin court, in Wheaton, Ill., last Monday.

DEFENSE BOARD PLANS TO CHECK RACE RIOT PERIL

Orders Inquiry at East St. Louis—Report on Naval Station.

State action to prevent repetition of the recent race riots in East St. Louis is expected as the result of the decision yesterday of the state council of defense to investigate the trouble. The council directed its labor committee to investigate.

The committee, composed of Dr. Frank Billings, John H. Harrison of Danville, and John H. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, will go to East St. Louis on Thursday or Friday.

"More trouble is brewing in East St. Louis," said Victor A. Olander, a member of the council, who, as secretary of the State Federation of Labor, investigated the riots several days ago. "Agents of the packing and other plants there are encouraging the immigration of southern Negroes, and these are now arriving in East St. Louis at the rate of 100 a day.

Cite Negroes' Threats.

"While it is true that the white workers became incensed at the rush of Negro rivalry for their jobs, they were not inflamed to the point of rioting until they began hearing such remarks as this from the Negroes:

"'Just wait until the folks here are called to war and then the white women will have to look out for themselves.'

"Statements of that kind precipitated the riots. I look for a repetition of them if the situation isn't dealt with immediately."

It was announced by Mr. Insull that five members of the Illinois directorate of the naval consulting board had been appointed to deal with engineering and inventions. They are Bion J. Arnold, former city traction expert; Peter Junkersfeld of the Commonwealth Edison company; R. W. Hunt, head of a concern bearing his name; F. W. Copeland of the Sullivan Machinery company, and William Hoskins, an analytical chemist.

Plan to Drill Men.

Another announcement by Mr. Insull was that the council had approved rules and plans for the establishment of a state volunteer training corps. The Chicago volunteer training corps is the first organization in that body to receive recognition from the council. Mr. Insull also stated that the council is making progress in the investigation of the coal situation.

Serious need of a hospital for contagious cases at the Great Lakes Naval Training station was pointed out by Dr. Billings in his report to the council after a survey of the station. Copies of the report with urgent recommendation for appropriations to meet the needs will be sent to President Wilson, Secretary Daniels, and members of congress.

Dr. Billings found ten cases of meningitis at the station. Eighty-one recruits, thirty of whom have died, have suffered from the disease in the last six months, the report points out.

Excerpts from Report.

Excerpts from a summary of the report, given out for publication, are as follows:

"The serious complaint Dr. Billings makes is that no adequate provision has ever been made for a contagious hospital. He says that Capt. Moffett, the commandant, requested an appropriation for one a year ago, but he understood no provision had been made. He thinks such provision should be made immediately.

"When the survey was made there were 513 patients in the general hospital, and Dr. Billings says that although the hospital building has but eighty beds, the overflow is well cared for in tents. Of course, the situation will be different if cold weather comes with the camp as crowded as it is now.

81 Cases of Meningitis.

"Specifically treating of the cases of meningitis, Dr. Billings says there were ten cases when he made his visit, and eighty-one recruits in all have suffered from it in the course of six months, thirty of whom have died, out of a total number of 20,000 who passed through the station."

Summing up, the report says that the original camp at the station is excellent in reference to grounds, buildings, drainage, water supp , etc., for 1,500 recruits, but for the present population of 8,200 it is inadequate.

THE NATION CALLS

Yonng Men, the Country's Strength in This Crisis, to Register for Duty Tuesday, June 5.

The following registration appeal was issued yesterday by the state council of defense:

It is the law of the nation that all males who are 21 and have not yet reached their thirty-first birthday and are now residing within the United States, must be registered for public service. By order of the national government Tuesday, June 5, 1917, has been fixed as registration day. That will be the only registration day; the duty of registering cannot be postponed to a later time.

Many persons have confused ideas of what registration means; they think it to be the same as an enlistment in the army. That is not true. The registration is for the purpose of getting a census of the men of the country who are liable to be called for any public service. That may mean service in the army, in the manufacturing plants, on the railroads, or on the farms. What the public service required of those between the ages of 21 and 31 years may be will be determined later.

The great majority of those who register will be exempt from military service at this time because of physical unfitness, because they are engaged in certain industries, because they have dependent wives or parents or relatives, and for other reasons. But such exemptions will be considered later on; registration is a universal requirement and June 5 is the only registration day.

The places of registration in Chicago will be the usual voting place in each precinct. Each man required by law to be registered is entitled to two hours off, without loss of pay, to obey the law. Employers should see that their men are given sufficient time in which to register and should advise and instruct them to perform their patriotic duty.

Any one who fails to comply with the registration requirement will incur heavy penalties.

There will be long terms of imprisonment for those who willfully refuse to obey the law. Failure or refusal to register will not exempt any one from the service which may be required of him. Any such person may first have to pay the penalty for failure to register, and then perform his public service afterward.

Therefore it should be remembered that it is the law for all to register. No one between the ages of 21 and 31 is exempt, except only those who are already members of the United States military or naval forces or of the Illinois national guard. It makes no difference whether a man of registration age is a native-born or naturalized citizen or an alien; he must register anyway.

The United States protects us and insures us freedom whether we are native born or alien born. The United States is in peril. Registration day is for the purpose of mustering the strength of the nation to withstand the danger threatening us. The men of 21 to 31 years of age are the nation's strength in this crisis and they should regard it a solemn obligation to enroll themselves for the national service.

Dog Routs Chic Stickup and Her Robber Pal

Two holdup artists, one of them a stylishly dressed woman, were frightened from the candy store of Nathan Ascher, 24 West Superior street, last night by the owner's dog, which charged them from a back room, where he was confined.

Ascher refused to elevate his hands when ordered at the point of a revolver to do so. A struggle ensued and Ascher was knocked down. This aroused the dog, which rushed to the rescue. Before fleeing the woman grabbed several dollars from the register.

Taxi Driver Takes His Crutches for Fare

Thomas Haggerty, who has only one leg and walks with crutches, last night hired a taxicab at 1732 South Lincoln street and was driven to Lake street and Hoyne avenue. There the driver, he declared, told him he owed a dollar. As Haggerty did not have a dollar, he said, the chauffeur took his crutches as pay. The police began a search for the driver.

U. S. JURY INDICTS REISWITZ AND 13 OTHERS FOR PLOT

Former German Consul Here Accused of Planning Indian Revolt.

Baron Kurt von Reiswitz, former German consul in Chicago, and thirteen others were indicted by the federal grand jury yesterday on charges of conspiring to foment a rebellion in India against the British empire. Nine of those indicted are Hindoos.

Return of the indictments gave the first intimation that Baron von Reiswitz was implicated in the plot, which has been under investigation by government secret agents for two months.

The former consul is now in Germany.

Two Under Arrest Here.

Two of the men indicted are under arrest in Chicago. They are Gustave H. Jacobsen and Albert Wehde. The latter was arrested in Honolulu and brought here. The others indicted are:

George Paul Boehm.
Heramba Lal Gupta.
Jodh Singh.
Dhirendra Nath Sen.
Jnanendra Nath Sanyal.
Chandra Kanta Chakraberty.
Ram Chandra.
Bhagwan Singh.
Samtokh Singh.
Gopal Singh.
Adolph Scholtz, alias Sterneck.

All the men except Reiswitz are under arrest. Scholtz is in custody in San Francisco. The others are held in New York and other cities. Judge Landis fixed the bonds at $25,000 in each case.

Baron Furnishes Funds.

Baron von Reiswitz is charged in the bill with having furnished $41,500 to three men, whose names are not specified, to finance an Indian rebellion.

The Hindoos involved were to go to India and incite an insurrection against the British government. All the expenses, according to the plans, were to be paid by Germany.

Full details of the conspiracy are set forth in the indictments, which read in this way:

"Said Gustav H. Jacobsen, on or about March 1, 1915, at Chicago, engaged the services of George Paul Boehm as a drillmaster for such of said subjects of said prince (the king of England) as should be incited to engage in the said rebellion.

"Said Gustav H. Jacobsen, on or about Aug. 8, 1915, at Chicago, paid to Heramba Lal Gupta the sum of $1,000 for the use of said Heramba Lal Gupta in paying his transportation and other charges in going from Chicago to India to incite said subjects to engage in said rebellion.

$20,000 Checks Given.

"Said Kurt von Reiswitz, on or about May 6, 1915, at Chicago, gave to one William Wilms a check for $20,000, the proceeds of which were to be used to incite said subjects to engage in said rebellion.

"Said Kurt von Reiswitz, on or about June 30, 1915, at Chicago, caused to be given to said Albert H. Wehde the sum of $20,000 for the use of said Albert H. Wehde in inciting said subjects to engage in said rebellion and in furnishing military training to said subjects and arms, munitions, supplies and money for carrying on and supporting said rebellion.

"Said Kurt von Reiswitz, on or about May 7, 1915, departed from Chicago to given to said George Paul Boehm the sum of $1,500 to be used by said George Paul Boehm in defraying his expenses in traveling from Chicago to India to engage in such rebellion.

Started to India.

"Said George Paul Boehm on or about May 7, 1915, departed fro mChicago to go to India to engage in such rebellion.

"Said Albert H. Wehde, on or about May 1, 1915, assembled at Chicago certain persons of military training, to-wit, said George Paul Boehm and said Scholtz, otherwise called Sterneck, and departed with those persons for India to engage in such rebellion."

There are two counts in the indictment. One charges violation of the neutrality existing between the British and American governments; the other conspiracy. On the first the penalty is a fine not exceeding $10,000 or imprisonment for two years or both. On the second the penalty is a maximum fine of $3,000 or imprisonment for three years or both.

Jacobson gave bonds in the sum of $25,000 before Commissioner Lewis F. Mason in the afternoon. Wehde's bond in the same sum given some time ago was allowed to stand.

FOOD AND FUEL PIRATES TO GET BULLET OR ROPE

"President Wilson has determined that America shall not be hungered by food robbers or frozen by fuel thieves at home while its sons are fighting for the country's life abroad," declared Senator James Hamilton Lewis, speaking at the luncheon of the Irish Fellowship club in the Hotel Sherman yesterday.

"The spirit of the present legislation," he added, "authorizes the president to seize all food or fuel monopolized for speculation and to have such food and fuel distributed through the agencies of government to the people, the consumers to pay a just price to the owners.

"Congress will declare it to be treason for any one in America willfully to hunger the soldiers or bring distress for want of necessities of life on the people.

"These men who would kill the soldiers and freeze the citizens for their profit will be hanged by law or shot by court martial.

"The president has determined that no such infamies on the republic in this war as was committed in the civil war or in the Spanish-American war by home pirates will be repeated."

Senator Lewis left last night for Washington to take up the revenue bill fight on the floor of the senate.

POWDER BURNS BLUR STORY OF FATAL SHOOTING

The Maxwell street police are investigating the death of Arthur Fredericks, 2133 Dayton street, who died at the county hospital last night an hour after he had been shot while in the saloon of Samuel Wolf, 1500 Polk street.

David Wolf, a son of the saloonkeeper, who is alleged to have shot Fredericks, and James R. Murray, 2136 Dayton street, the latter's companion, are being held.

After being shot in the left side Fredericks walked several blocks to the parish house of the Notre Dame de Chicago French Roman Catholic church, 1338 Oregon avenue. The Rev. Harris A. Darcha notified the police.

The wounded man was taken to the county hospital, where he died on the operating table.

Fredericks and Murray, according to David Wolf, entered the saloon and Fredericks threatened to shoot "everybody in the place," putting his hand to his hip pocket.

Wolf said he seized a revolver which was behind the bar and fired one shot, which struck Fredericks. The fact that Fredericks' coat was powder burned aroused police curiosity.

America Lends Another $100,000,000 to France

Washington, D. C., June 2.—The government advanced another $100,000,000 to France today, making the total loan to the French republic $200,000,000 and the total of loans to the allies $845,000,000.

WHOLE NATION, WITH HEAD UP, SET FOR DRAFT

Everything Is Ready for Registration Next Tuesday.

New York, June 2.—The machinery is ready and the holiday prepared for the young men of America to register for war next Tuesday.

Nation-wide reports to the United Press today shows that so prompt and hearty has been America's answer to President Wilson's first call to the colors under the new draft law that if registration were today instead of three days hence it would go through without a serious hitch.

Governors of many states have proclaimed June 5 a legal holiday. Thousands of great industrial organizations have agreed to give their laborers the day off with pay. Parades, speeches, and pageants will fill the land with the spirit of celebration.

All Parties to Work.

The national, state, city, county, village, ward, and precinct organizations of the Republican, Democratic, and Suffrage parties have been called to the colors to serve Uncle Sam in getting his young fighting men together.

Thousands of girls and women will put in the day at the registration booths, cheering the young men as they step up to register and pining honor badges and "registered" armlets on them as they come out.

Saloons will be closed, by order in some instances, out of patriotism in others, in many parts of the country.

Big Day for New York.

In New York registration day will be a festival. Police Commissioner Woods expects no trouble, but every precaution has been taken.

In the midst of parades, blaring bands, red fire, confetti, and massmeetings thousands of mounted and foot police, secret service men, and armed officers in motors will patrol the city.

Kansas was the first state ready for registration. Preparations there were complete last Saturday. Gov. Capper has proclaimed a holiday. Municipal receptions in honor of those registering have been prepared in every city.

Iowa Fair Sex to Be Busy.

In Iowa cities women and girls will present each registered youth with a copy of President Wilson's war message. Factory whistles will be blown at frequent intervals to remind men to register.

In Colorado Gov. Gunter issued a proclamation saying that "industrial necessity" prevents making registration day a holiday, but urges its patriotic observance throughout the commonwealth.

New England states and the rest of the east are equipped and ready for the draft.

In Pennsylvania Boy Scouts and girls and women defense leaguers will make house to house canvasses in Philadelphia and other towns to rout out the young men.

Keep Eyes Open in Detroit.

In Detroit special secret police will keep careful watch on 2,000 suspected anti-conscriptionists and I. W. W.'s of draft age.

Massmeetings are being held in Indiana cities to teach the young men the machinery of registration. Girls are making thousands of badges for them.

Gov. Ferguson of Texas has declared a state holiday. Every precaution has been taken to thwart race riots and anti-draft movements.

Legal Holiday in California.

It will be a legal holiday throughout California. The saloons have not been ordered closed, but they may do so.

Many Wisconsin cities have ordered their saloons closed. There will be big parades of railroad men throughout the state—men who recently voted to go on nation-wide strike.

POLICE COVER CITY WITH COPIES OF DRAFT BILL

Every Home to Be Visited and Circulars Left by Bluecoats.

Today and tomorrow give nonresidents of Chicago their last opportunity to register in conformity with the terms of the draft bill. Unless they register on either of the two days their cards will not reach their home boards of registration by June 5, and it is imperative that all cards be received on that day.

The city council chambers will be open today from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. to afford men between the ages of 21 and 31 their next to the last chance to register. This announcement was made yesterday afternoon by City Clerk Igoe. Ten registrars will be on duty in the chambers.

Delivery of a copy of the provisions of the draft bill and a notice containing information where to register was begun yesterday by members of the police department. The work must be finished by midnight tomorrow, and by that time every home in Chicago will have been visited by a policeman. Twenty thousand of the necessary circulars were sent to each police station in the city yesterday morning and the canvass of homes started at 12 o'clock noon.

Hundreds Visit City Hall.

The Saturday half-holiday brought hundreds of men to the council chambers. The total registration for the day was 1,520. Registration cards of 10,000 Chicagoans, now in other cities, had been received up to 11 o'clock yesterday morning by the board of registration. An equal number is expected before registration day, and a corps of stenographers and clerks will work today in the corporation counsel's office arranging transmission of the cards to the home precincts of the persons registering.

Among the visitors in the council chambers yesterday were Mayor Davis of Cleveland and a party of friends. Four of the group registered. They are on their way to St. Louis to attend the advertising men's convention, which opens today.

Pupils May Help.

High school pupils may be asked to help copy the registration cards within the five days after June 5. Dennis J. Egan, chief clerk of the board of registration, has decided to seek the cooperation of Superintendent of Schools Shoop in the matter.

Many cards from persons suffering from contagious diseases were received by the city clerk. The patients were registered by superintendents of hospitals and physicians from the health department, deputized registrars for this purpose.

Holiday at City Hall.

Registration day will be a holiday for city employés, if a resolution to be introduced in the council tomorrow by Ald. John Toman is approved. A move is also contemplated to order the saloons closed during the day. Mayor Thompson was asked whether he would issue such a proclamation, but he declared the subject was one to arise in the council.

"Will you suggest it?" he was asked.

"No, let them do it if they want to," was his reply.

TESTIMONY AT INQUEST ENDS 'KOHL MYSTERY'

Coroner's Jury Decides Theater Man Died of Heart Disease.

Oconomowoc, Wis., June 2.—[Special.]—Six jurors today heard all the evidence surrounding the death of Charles E. Kohl, wealthy theatrical man, in Waldheim sanitarium here last Monday, and decided that heart failure induced by overexertion caused his demise.

Expectation of sensational testimony crowded the Municipal court room, where Coroner Schaefel held the inquest, to its capacity. District Attorney Morris Tuller of Waukesha questioned the witnesses. His interrogations did not convey any intimation that possible domestic trouble led to the attack by Kohl upon his wife.

Martha Erdman, personal maid of Mrs. Kohl, was the first witness called at the morning session. She told briefly of the organization of the service in the Kohl household, and then in answer to questions by Mr. Tuller told what happened last Sunday night, the evening previous to Mr. Kohl's appearance on the streets of Oconomowoc and his wild declarations that he had been shot, stabbed, bitten, and beaten.

Maid's Story of Shots.

"Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Kohl and Walter Dupee, a visitor at the Kohl home, went fishing," said Miss Erdman. "They returned at 6 o'clock and dressed for dinner. They went to the home of Mr. Kohl's mother. They returned about 8 o'clock with Mr. Kohl's two sisters and another man, whose name I did not hear. I went to my room and remained there until after Mr. Kohl's sisters and the strange man had left.

"Then, about 11 o'clock or later, I heard the sound of breaking glass coming from the first floor. I started down to see what it was, but heard nothing more, and could see that the master was still downstairs, and so went back to bed.

"I don't know how much later it was that I heard loud talking that awakened me again, and then there came in quick succession several shots, five, I think. I dressed as quickly as I could and ran downstairs. Mr. Kohl was outside, standing beside his automobile. Mrs. Kohl was sitting on a settee and Mr. Dupee stood in the hallway or on the porch.

Says He Seized Wife by Hair.

"A revolver lay on the chair in the hall. I picked it up and ran upstairs to my room and hid it in a bureau drawer. Then I went back downstairs. Mr. Kohl was in the house by that time. Katherine, the other maid, and I talked to him and finally led him into the pantry and tried to quiet him. He laughed at the broken window and glasses there and suddenly blew a whistle as loud as he could. It must have taken half an hour for us to persuade him to go back to his room and go to bed.

"We hadn't any more than left him, when he got up and came downstairs again. He ran to the door of Mrs. Kohl's room and pounded on the door. He said he would break the door in if it wasn't opened. Mrs. Kohl opened it. Then he seized her by the hair and began to choke her. Katherine, the other maid, and Mr. Dupee came in answer to her screams and Katherine told me to run for help. I got the police and two soldiers and they came as soon as they could.

"Still later, Mr. Kohl's mother came and she managed to get him quiet. In the morning I found a few drops of blood near the head of the stairway and washed them up."

Fought Dupee, Maid Says.

Katherine O'Leary, the dining room maid in the Kohl home, was the next witness. She corroborated the story of the Erdman girl, and then told what happened while the other maid was gone for the police.

"I kept trying to keep Mr. Charlie from hurting Mrs. Kohl and to get him quiet," she said. "He kept fighting Mr. Dupee and it was all any of us could do to keep him away from his wife until the police came. When they did arrive Mr. Charlie had Mr. Dupee and Mrs. Kohl pinned to the floor and I was so faint that I could do nothing more to save them."

She told of seeing marks in the floor of the reception hall of the home, where the bullets from Mr. Kohl's gun had ripped the wainscoting. She was dismissed and a call was issued for Mr. Dupee.

He gave his name as Walter H. Dupee and his residence as San Diego, Cal. He said he had lived there for twenty years, but had formerly lived in Oconomowoc, and had been a close friend of Mr. Kohl during his life time. He said that he came to visit the Kohls at Oconomowoc just a week before the tragedy.

He told of the afternoon fishing trip last Sunday, the dinner at the home of Mr. Kohl's mother, the later party at the Kohl Jr. home, and finally of the departure of the two sisters and the mother of Mr. Kohl.

"I was asleep, as nearly as I can judge, about 12 o'clock," Mr. Dupee said, picking up the thread of the narrative. "I heard some noise from the first floor, but didn't know what it was. I neglected to say that before we went to bed Charlie and I happened to go into the butler's pantry for some sarsaparilla. Charlie seemed suddenly to have a fit of mental lapsing, for he threw some glassware through the window and laughed wildly.

Cries of 'Murder' and 'Police.'

"After the noise at midnight I went back to sleep. Suddenly there were piercing screams, and cries of 'Murder!' and 'Police!' I jumped from my bed and ran into the hall.

"Charlie had his wife by the hair, was choking her, and threatening to kill her. I tried to talk to him, but he wouldn't listen to me. Finally I seized him and he turned upon me. We struggled and fought it out all the way down the stairs.

"Finally, on the ground floor, he stopped suddenly. We went to the butler's pantry again and he threw a few more things through the window, just for luck, I guess. Then he went back upstairs, and I sat for a moment or two. My nose and mouth were bleeding and I was pretty well spent.

"Within a minute or two I saw Charlie coming down the steps. He had a big black army service revolver in his hand. He walked toward me, but did not raise the weapon. I spoke to him, but he didn't say anything. In view of his former actions I thought it best to try to get the weapon away from him.

Short Lapse in His Rage.

"I took his wrists in my hands and tried to disengage his fingers from the pistol. He began to struggle again and pulled the trigger. Five shots went into the floor, fortunately without harming any one. Then he laid the weapon quietly on a chair and came for me again bare handed.

"Mrs. Kohl seemed to be the object of his attack, too, but after the shots, when the maids came, he had stopped the worst of his raging and had walked out to the front of the house, where his car was standing. One of the maids talked to him and got him to come back.

"As soon as he saw Mrs. Kohl and myself he began to lose his balance again and started for us. One of the maids ran for the police and the other tried to help us. By the time the police arrived the three of us were about ready to give up and Charlie had Mrs. Kohl and me pinned to the floor.

'Not Shot, Stabbed or Bitten.'

"After the policeman talked to Charlie a little while his mother came and she seemed able to get him quiet. I do not think that when he fired the shots it was with any intention to harm me or any one else. But in his frame of mind I did not feel safe as long as he had a weapon, and I did not think it was safe for other members of the family as long as he had it, either.

"I want to say this, however. At no time was Charlie shot, or stabbed, or bitten, or struck with a chair, or made the victim of any measures of restraint than were absolutely necessary for the preservation of my own life and that of the other members of the household. He was not himself; he was insane, temporarily, at least, and did not know what he was doing."

Several of the jurors questioned Mr. Dupee closely about the bullets and about whether or not he had seen any blood upon Mr. Kohl's body during the struggle. Then the inquest was recessed until afternoon.

Police and Soldiers' Testify.

Coroner Schaefel resumed the inquest at 1:30 o'clock.

John Mengle, one of the Oconomowoc police, and two militiamen told of answering the hurry call to the Kohl home after the shooting. Mengle said that Kohl had his wife and Dupee on the floor when he entered. Mrs. Kohl at first demanded that her husband be arrested, but modified the order when told she would have to appear against him. The militiamen confirmed the story, but, with Mengle, said that they attributed Mr. Kohl's condition to overindulgence in alcoholic drinks, rather than insanity.

Capt. A. G. Derse and G. F. Poe, personal friends of the dead man, followed on the stand and again reverted to the mental derangement theory. Capt. Derse gave the history of Mr. Kohl as a national guardsman.

Dr. H. A. Peters then took the stand to tell of the treatment administered to Mr. Kohl before he was taken to the hospital. An opiate was given, he said, and Mr. Kohl went to sleep. Death came suddenly without his ever regaining consciousness.

Dr. J. H. Vogl of the Waldheim sanitarium, where Kohl was taken, told of how the patient was strapped down during the administration of a hypodermic. It took effect, he said, and the patient was normal at 6 o'clock Monday evening. Half an hour later he died.

Heart Overstrained.

Dr. R. E. Davis and Dr. Thomas Miller, physicians appointed by the coroner on the autopsy board, then testified. They gave a report similar to that of the other physicians and expressed belief that Mr. Kohl was insane at the time of his death.

All the medical men declared that Mr. Kohl's heart was overstrained, and that any severe nervous shock or exertion such as he had gone through the night previous to his death would produce the cardiac exhaustion which killed him.

Dr. Peters, recalled after Dr. Miller, said that morphine and "H. C." compound, which he described as being the drug used in "twilight sleep" operations, had been administered to Mr. Kohl before his death. He denied that the drugs could in any way have been responsible for stopping the heart.

A. D. Lyke, undertaker, told of having answered a call to the hospital and of embalming the body at 7:30 o'clock on Monday night, within two hours after the time of death. He said that he had not notified the coroner, but had acted on the orders of George A. Trude of Chicago, personal counsel for the Kohl family, and Dr. Peters. He said that he considered it the business of the physician to notify the coroner. He said, too, that on the way to the hospital he was told of the stories of Mr. Kohl having been shot or stabbed, and that he examined the body for bullet wounds. He said that the failure to find such wounds was one of the reasons he did not send the coroner notice.

Closing Chapter.

Attorney Trude then took the stand and said that he had given the order for preparing the body for burial. It was after the doctors examined it, he said. He also told of his belief that Mr. Kohl was insane.

Mr. Dupee and the maids were recalled and questioned again concerning the bruises found on Mr. Kohl's breast, arms, and back, but developed no new point.

Coroner Schaefel then ordered the jury to retire. Within half an hour they had prepared their verdict—"heart failure, due to overexertion."

The "Kohl mystery" was closed.

KIDNAPED BABY TO BE RETURNED TO HOME TODAY?

One Report Says Keet Already Has Paid Ransom Asked.

Springfield, Mo., June 2.—With secrecy veiling each move, the search continued today for Lloyd Keet, the 14 months old son of J. Holland Keet, wealthy banker. Missing since Wednesday night, when, it was said, he was taken from the family residence here while his father and mother were attending a dance at the Country club, not the slightest trace of him has been found and no clew has been established to indicate his fate.

Rumors concerning the case kept on mounting up here tonight as Mr. Keet, believing that publicity already had injured his chances of paying whatever ransom might be demanded by the abductors, refused to discuss the efforts he and his friends were making.

Ransom Already Paid?

The latest gossip was that the father already had paid the sum asked and that the boy was to be returned tomorrow, after the abductors had had sufficient time to leave Springfield. That report was denied.

Mr. Keet today repeated that he would gladly pay the $6,000 believed to have been demanded for the return of his son. He appears to believe implicitly that the boy will be returned safely provided the abductor gets the ransom asked.

"I will keep faith with the kidnapers if they only will get him back," he said.

Hopes Woman Guards Him.

Mrs. Keet, one of Springfield's best known society members, is not so certain that the boy will come back safely. Today she was wondering what care would be taken of him. She hoped that a woman might be a member of the abduction band, because a woman would know how to keep him better than would a man.

What accommodations were provided for her son, whether the abductors had warm and proper clothing for him, and if he had been safe from the storms and tornadoes that had been sweeping southern Missouri during the last few days were among the worries affecting her.

FIRST CAVALRY TRANSFER PLANS EXPECTED TODAY

Detailed announcement of the transfer of the First Illinois cavalry into artillery is expected to be made today. The announcement, it is expected, will be made by Col. Milton G. Foreman, who last night returned from Springfield after a conference with the state military authorities.

Col. Foreman and Capt. Frank R. Schwengel, adjutant of the regiment, spent the day in the capital with Adjt. Gen. Frank S. Dickson, and after the conference it was announced the transfer from cavalry to artillery will be made.

Col. Foreman and the adjutant returned to Chicago last night and spent the night in conference on details which it is said will be made public today.

TERMS OF PEACE PARTY WELCOME WRONG RUSSIANS

Correct Error and Move to Stop Secret Service "Depredations."

The "Democracy and Terms of Peace" people who have been meeting in the green room of the Congress hotel every Saturday made a mistake. They freely admitted it yesterday at their new meeting place on the fourth floor of the Men's City club.

It seems that their welcome to the Russian commissioners, which they resolved last Saturday to send, was addressed to the wrong body. The resolution passed at the previous meeting mentioned the commissioners as arriving at some "Atlantic" port, but the commissioners whom the "Terms of Peace" people had in mind are to arrive by way of the Pacific.

Also the men welcomed so cordially last Saturday are said to be commercial minded persons of the "old regime," not connected in any way with the revolutionary movement.

St. John Tucker Explains.

"Of course," said St. John Tucker, who presided at yesterday's meeting, "the intent of our resolution was perfectly obvious, and when I found out our mistake in the address I took the liberty of changing the wording of it a little. It now reads 'Whereas, the Russian government has appointed a commission to this government to discuss war aims and policies, etc.' We may just leave out the Atlantic and it will be all right, with your approval."

The others approved it and asked W. E. Rodriguez, Socialist alderman, to introduce a resolution into the city council meeting tomorrow providing for a reception committee to greet the members of the Russian provisional government commission. The alderman wouldn't promise, but it was agreed that some one should do it.

Series of Meetings.

It was announced by Seymour Stedman that there were to be a series of meetings in the outlying districts of the city, ending with a big meeting in the Auditorium or the Coliseum some time in July.

They tried to appoint a committee on arrangements for these. Mrs. Jean Ellis Driver declined to serve because she was leaving town; three or four others also were engaged with something else. Finally they chose three who were not present, Mrs. Eleanore Karsten, Dr. Cornelia De Bey, and the Rev. Fred Moore.

Prof. Robert Morse Lovett moved that the business of the next meeting should be to discuss the "domiciliary visits without warrant of agents of the department of justice." A harrowing tale was told of a young woman who found a strange man in her room rifling her trunk. She thought he was a burglar, but he was a department of justice agent. She was charged with being at the head of a dynamite plot, but all they found in the trunk was a college chemistry course notebook.

The motion was passed.

Arrange More Meetings.

It was decided to hold all future Saturday meetings of this "Terms of Peace" group in the rooms of the Men's City club.

At the Congress hotel the management stated that the conference people withdrew of their own free will, and had not been asked to leave the hotel where the meetings on previous Saturdays have been held.

SPANISH VETS URGE AMERICA TO "WAKE UP"

Wake up, America!

This was the spirit last night of a patriotic demonstration held under the auspices of the Military Order of the Serpent, United Spanish War Veterans, at Central Music hall. Gen. James E. Stuart declared that the united efforts of the press and the pulpit had been inadequate to instil into the minds of the people the requisite appreciation of the war situation, which presents not only a national but a world crisis. He declared that America was on trial before the world, and that the point of verbal patriotism was past.

Other men who spoke were Col. George M. Moulton, Maj. J. M. Stansfield, George F. Lee, department commander of the United States War Veterans; former Lieut. Gov. Barratt O'Hara, Ensign George M. Welchelt of the Great Lakes Naval Training station, Lieut. Dwight L. Loughborough, United Spanish War Veterans, and Commander Elmer M. Lawson, department head of the Military Order of the Serpent.

Dutch Lend Food to Belgium.

THE HAGUE, via London, June 2.—Because of the scarcity of foodstuffs in Belgium and northern France, the Dutch government has placed at the disposal of the Belgian relief commission 12,000 tons of grain, which is to be returned from stocks afloat for the commission.

THAT KUMMEL STARTS THINGS AT BISMARCK

Soldier from France and "Joffre Seltzer" Conquer Garden.

The Bismarck Garden is a sylvan nook where the "lounge lizard" gives his order to red coated and gold buttoned gnomes who move noiselessly and expensively about bearing magic potions in tall glasses of imported ware.

Green and pink and mauve are the potions, and thirty small seeds the glass. Hold! There is one exception. One may still purchase a jolt of Hindenburg Kummel for 20 cents, which is the equivalent of a German mark.

Reginald Montague—since no one seems quite sure of his real name, we're doing our best to give him one—fresh from the French front, and visibly bored, lolled in the gardens last Tuesday night.

Full of great good nature and Scotch spirits, Reginald dusted an imaginary spot from his carefully pressed olive drab uniform with manifest self-satisfaction. And why not? Had he not come unscathed through the great conflict? Was it not apparent that the fascinating creature in green was regarding him with admiration?

"Something Soft and Cheap."

Reginald arose uncertainly and moved toward the bar.

"Something soft," he whispered to the bartender, "and cheap."

With a brisk motion the bartender thumped a bottle in front of the hero of the Somme. The portrait of a fat gentleman with upturned mustachios and an iron cross decorated the label, on which was inscribed:

"Hindenburg Kummel."

"Twenty cents," the bartender said.

"Have you got a bottle of seltzer to go with it?" Reginald inquired.

It was produced. Reginald held it to the light and pushed the valve. A stream of carbonated water squirted into the bartender's eye.

"This," observed Reginald, playfully diverting the stream to meet a platoon of oncoming waiters, "must be Joffre seltzer."

A bottle bounced lightly from Lieut. Montague's forehead. Casting about for the range, the uniformed gentleman picked it up and did great execution by using it as a hand grenade.

Second Battle of Marne.

Then the fight appears to have degenerated. Somebody threw a chair. Reginald parried with a table. The latter instrument was highly effective, three dozen bottles and sixty-four glasses tumbling from the bar rack in the first offensive.

The waiters resorted to a V wedge to dislodge their adversary. It was broken up with three chairs and a beer bottle. Whereupon the waiters retired to a "previously prepared" and highly fortified position and sent for reinforcements, in the persons of two plain clothes coppers who favor home rule.

But, alas! before the reinforcements could arrive the Tyrolean cuckoo whistled once, and the besieged, hesitating between the closing law and reprisal, allowed Reginald to evacuate the bar with honor.

Well, what can you expect? Three weeks ago, when Mr. Eitel, who owns the Bismarck, was asked if he intended to change the name of Hindenburg Kummel, he said, with great emphasis: "Where do you get that stuff?"

CAPITALS DETAIL WAR'S MOVES ON VARIOUS FRONTS

Italians Claim Advance on Triest — Germans Report Success.

ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN.

ROME, June 2.—Artillery fire was heavier than usual yesterday in the area north and east of Goritz, and particularly in the northern sector of the Carso. The enemy fire concentrated on our lines on the Dosso Faiti, which was followed by infantry and patrol attacks, was vigorously answered by our batteries.

On Thursday night we again repulsed an enemy attack on Hill 652 in the Vodice area. Two enemy attacks preceded by heavy artillery preparation against our lines on Hill 126, south of Grazigna, and on Hill 174, north of Tivoli, also were unsuccessful.

The same night on the Carso south of Castagnavizza our infantry made a surprise attack and advanced our line about 400 yards along a one and one-quarter mile front.

AVIATION.

There were numerous air encounters yesterday above Goritz. Raids attempted by the enemy on the city were all repulsed. One enemy machine was brought down near Aisovizza.

Our bombing squadrons of airplanes, accompanied by chasing machines, also were very active yesterday. Military works, aviation camps, dumps, and railway junctions were successfully bombed from Duino to Opicina, northeast of Triest. All our machines returned safely.

AUSTRIAN.

VIENNA, June 2.—Early this morning an enemy attack near Goritz failed. Otherwise there was only artillery firing on the Isonzo.

During May our troops on the Tyrol front captured eight officers, 728 men, ten machine guns, and three grenade throwers from hostile positions.

AVIATION.

There was great aerial activity and our airmen brought down two hostile machines in air battles.

On Thursday night, in the Gulf of Triest and in the neighboring coastal regions, there was lively aerial activity. One of our seaplanes with observed success bombed railway installations and other military objects in Cervignano and San Giorgio di Nogari.

In hostile air attacks on Triest and its environs one boy was killed. There was no other damage.

In an engagement at night our successful airman, Naval Lieut. Banfield, shot down an enemy airplane. We lost no machines.

FRENCH FRONT.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, June 2.—There is no change in the situation.

DAY STATEMENT.

Army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht—The artillery fighting activity in the Wytschaete bend increased, as it did on the preceding days.

On the Arras front the firing was intense, especially near Lens and on the north bank of the River Scarpe. During reconnoitering engagements our thrusting detachments captured a number of prisoners. Some of them were Portuguese.

Army group of the German crown prince—Near Allemant, northeast of Soissons, a Hanoverian regiment and a Westphalian regiment, effectively supported by detachments of experienced storming troops and artillery, mine throwers, and airmen, carried out an attack with complete success. By a surprise assault the French position was captured over a front of about 1,000 meters and held against repeated counter attacks. Three officers and 178 men were taken prisoners and numerous machine guns and mine throwers were captured.

Along the Aisne in the Champagne, on both banks of the Suippes and east of the Meuse, firing activities were lively at times.

Army group of Duke Albrecht—Nothing to report.

In the month of May 237 officers, including one general and 12,500 rank and file, were taken prisoner. Three guns, 211 machine guns, 434 quick loading guns, and eighteen mine throwers were brought in as booty on the west front.

[The German report contains the first official announcement that Portuguese troops were participating in the fighting on the western front, although American correspondents reported the arrival of Portuguese forces last January.]

FRENCH.

PARIS, June 2.—The official communication issued by the war office tonight reads:

Both artilleries were especially active during the afternoon in the region north of Laffaux, in the neighborhood of Hurtebise and the Californie and Craonne plateaux. There was no important event on the rest of the front.

From April 1 up to the present, the number of prisoners captured by the French and British troops on the western front exceeded 52,000, of whom more than 1,000 were officers. Included in the enormous amount of material taken from the enemy during the same time were 446 heavy and field cannon, 1,000 machine guns and a considerable number of trench guns.

AVIATION.

On June 1, five German airplanes fell in flames or crashed to the earth after engagements with our pilots. According to late reports, two other German machines were brought down, one May 27, the other May 30. Adj. Fonck has brought down five German machines up to today.

DAY STATEMENT.

On the Chemin-Des-Dames there was active artillery fighting in the sectors of Hurtebise, Craonne, and Chevreux. Feeble German attacks at various points, particularly northwest of Froidmont farm, west of Cerny, and against the small post which we captured yesterday south of Chevreux, were repulsed easily.

In the region of the heights of the Meuse we made a surprise attack east of La Fieveters, southeast of Damloup, and brought back prisoners.

Elsewhere the night was comparatively quiet.

BRITISH.

LONDON, June 2.—An enemy party which attacked one of our posts last night south of Oppy was repulsed with loss. Artillery activity continued during the day on both sides at different points along our front.

AVIATION.

Our airplanes were active again yesterday, much valuable work being accomplished. In the air fighting one German machine was brought down; six others were driven down out of control. Three of our airplanes are missing.

DAY STATEMENT.

The enemy artillery was active during the night against our positions in the neighborhood of Bullecourt and Vimy village. There is nothing further of special interest.

An airplane attack was made on the enemy airdrome at St. Denis Westrem yesterday morning and last night naval airplanes and seaplanes attacked the German bases at Zeebrugge, Ostend, and Bruges, dropping several tons of explosives.

BELGIAN.

PARIS, June 2.—Last night we captured a German listening post north of Steenstraete. Today the usual artillery actions occurred, principally in the sector of Dixmude.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

GERMAN.

BERLIN, June 2.—On the west bank of the Vardar, Bulgarian battalions drove the enemy out of an outpost position near Alchak-Mah and repulsed several counter attacks.

FRENCH.

PARIS, June 2.—In the region of Lymnitsa the enemy having succeeded in gaining a temporary foothold in our trench elements, we drove him out by a vigorous counter attack. The artillery actions were particularly spirited in the neighborhood of Lymnitsa, where the enemy employed asphyxiating projectiles, and at the Cerna Bend, where a battery was hit and we observed an explosion in a munitions depot.

AVIATION.

Enemy aviators bombarded Koritsa and the railroad near Saloniki, but did no damage. Our airplanes dropped bombs on several enemy encampments.

RUSSIAN FRONT

GERMAN.

BERLIN, June 2.—There was no change in the situation.

AUSTRIAN.

VIENNA, June 2.—There is nothing to report.

PETROGRAD, June 2.—The enemy artillery intensively bombarded with heavy projectiles the region of Krevo-Rogusche. The enemy heavy artillery bombarded Brody. There was rifle firing on the remainder of the front.

ROUMANIAN FRONT

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, June 2.—There were rifle firing and patrol actions.

TURKISH FRONT

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, June 2.—In the Caucasus southwest of Van a Turkish company attacked, but was immediately repulsed by our fire. In the direction of Djevanrond we repulsed a Kurdish attack.

AVIATION.

Our artillery brought down an enemy airplane, which fell beyond the first enemy line trenches at the village of Rogusche, northeast of Krevo.

BLACK SEA

RUSSIAN.

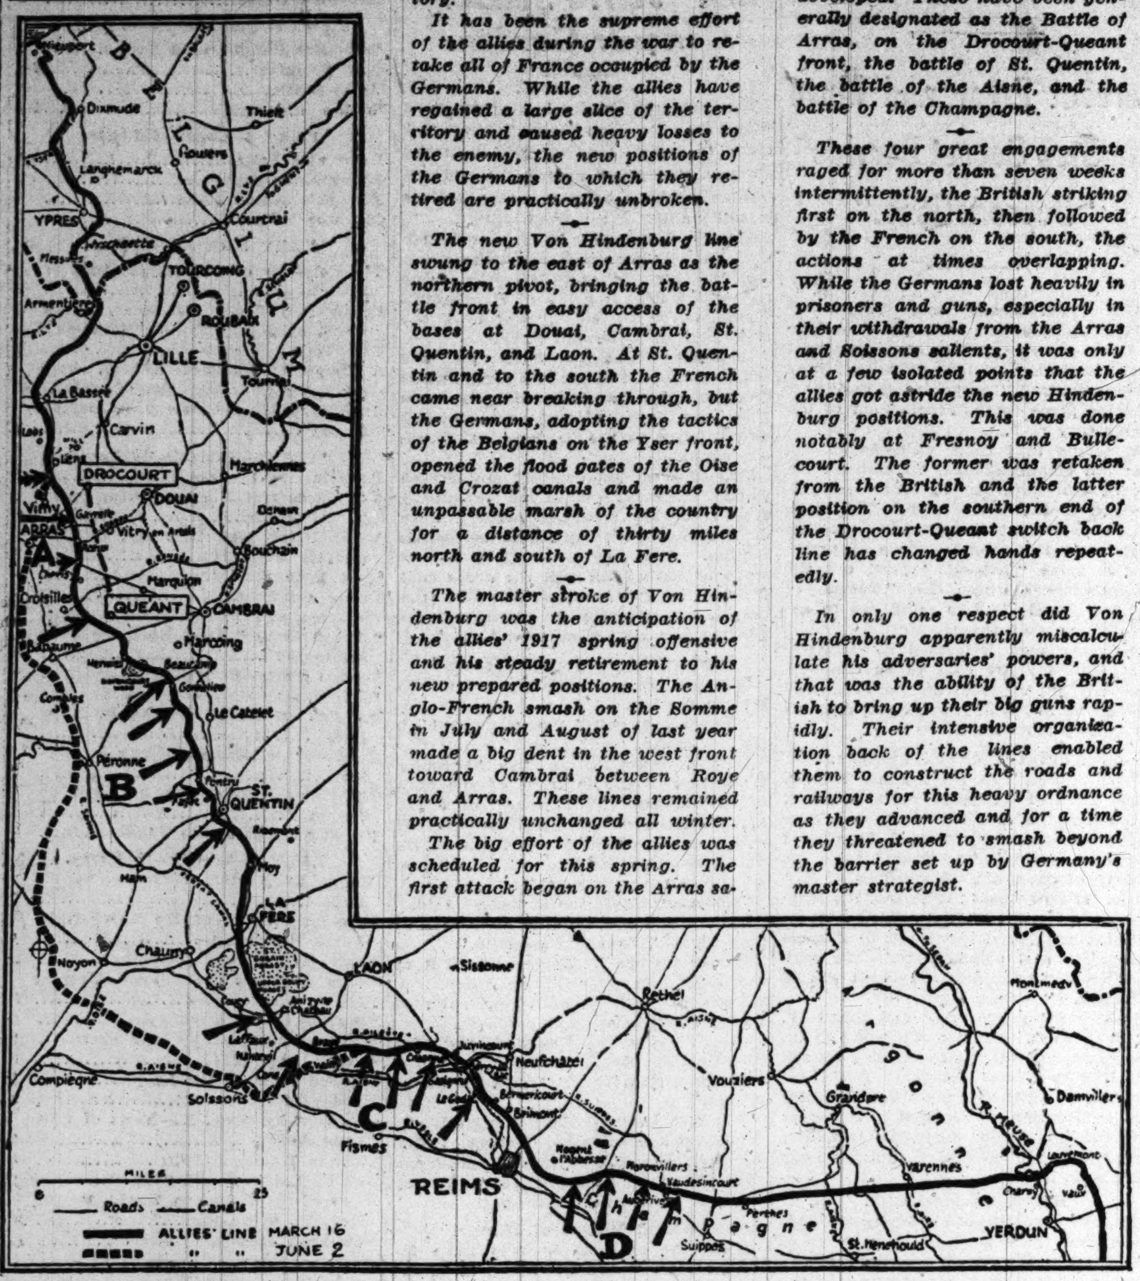
PETROGRAD, June 2.—During a cruise on May 29 near the Anatolian coast our ships destroyed munition depots and a factory in the region of Tschekirogly. They afterward destroyed at Samsun a steam mill, a barracks, and artillery depots. At Oveni they destroyed the barracks, a mill, and a quay.

At Ordeh (Ordu) our ships destroyed an observation post, the port administration buildings, the headquarters of the enemy rear guard, the army postoffice and barracks, and various depots.

Our ships also destroyed 147 sailing ships laden with supplies and brought back to Trebizond two schooners.

THE VON HINDENBURG RETIREMENT

The allies' offensive on the west front developed into four major engagements: [a] The battle of Arras; [b] the battle of St. Quentin; [c] the battle of the Aisne; [d] the battle of the Champagne.



The announcement by Field Marshal von Hindenburg that the joint British and French offensive had been brought to a standstill marks the close of the greatest battle or series of battles in history.

It has been the supreme effort of the allies during the war to retake all of France occupied by the Germans. While the allies have regained a large slice of the territory and caused heavy losses to the enemy, the new positions of the Germans to which they retired are practically unbroken.

The new Von Hindenburg line swung to the east of Arras as the northern pivot, bringing the battle front in easy access of the bases at Douai, Cambrai, St. Quentin, and Laon. At St. Quentin and to the south the French came near breaking through, but the Germans, adopting the tactics of the Belgians on the Yser front, opened the flood gates of the Oise and Crozat canals and made an unpassable marsh of the country for a distance of thirty miles north and south of La Fere.

The master stroke of Von Hindenburg was the anticipation of the allies' 1917 spring offensive and his steady retirement to his new prepared positions. The Anglo-French smash on the Somme in July and August of last year made a big dent in the west front toward Cambrai between Roye and Arras. These lines remained practically unchanged all winter.

The big effort of the allies was scheduled for this spring. The first attack began on the Arras salient about March 16. The British found the Germans yielding and the offensive rapidly spread to the southeast until it reached beyond Reims.

As a result four major actions developed. These have been generally designated as the Battle of Arras, on the Drocourt-Queant front, the battle of St. Quentin, the battle of the Aisne, and the battle of the Champagne.

These four great engagements raged for more than seven weeks intermittently, the British striking first on the north, then followed by the French on the south, the actions at times overlapping. While the Germans lost heavily in prisoners and guns, especially in their withdrawals from the Arras and Soissons salients, it was only at a few isolated points that the allies got astride the new Hindenburg positions. This was done notably at Fresnoy and Bullecourt. The former was retaken from the British and the latter position on the southern end of the Drocourt-Queant switch back line has changed hands repeatedly.

In only one respect did Von Hindenburg apparently miscalculate his adversaries' powers, and that was the ability of the British to bring up their big guns rapidly. Their intensive organization back of the lines enabled them to construct the roads and railways for this heavy ordnance as they advanced and for a time they threatened to smash beyond the barrier set up by Germany's master strategist.

U-BOAT SUNK BY A FRENCH SUBMARINE

ROME, June 1, via Paris, June 2.—The French submarine Circe has torpedoed and sunk a large enemy submarine as it was coming out from Cattaro, escorted by a torpedo boat. Although attacked by airplanes, the Circe returned undamaged to its base.

When Submarine Meets U-Boat.

LONDON, June 2.—The report published in the Rheinische Westfalische Zeitung of Essen that a German submarine while submerged rammed a British submarine in the channel on April 19 has been gossiped about here for some time, the British submarine having returned undamaged.

This was the second incident of the kind this spring. In the previous case a British submarine dived for a rest on the bottom of the sea and landed squarely on top of a German submarine similarly at rest, smashing in the German's conning tower. The British craft, undamaged, remained on the helpless German U-boat for several hours in order to make certain that it was put out of commission.

The British boat finally rose to the surface and dropped a number of bombs to clinch the fate of the Germans.

ITALIAN PRINCE LAUDS AMERICA IN HOUSE TALK

Washington, D. C., June 2.—Prince Udine and the Italian mission visited the house today and were received with a great demonstration. William Marconi, who has been ill since the mission came here, made his first public appearance and addressed the house briefly.

America's great industry, the prince told the house amid thunderous applause, would end German autocracy.

Repeatedly, when the prince referred to the mutual efforts of the United States and Italy in the war, he was interrupted with prolonged cheering.

Senator Marconi's speech was the first he has delivered in the United States on the present tour."

FRENCH BEAT OFF 16 ATTACKS ON ONE HILL RANGE

Writer Tells of Terrific Losses Sustained by the Germans.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

GRAND HEADQUARTERS OF THE FRENCH ARMIES IN FRANCE, June 2.—The Germans have sacrificed hundreds of killed and thousands wounded in their vain efforts to regain the range of hills comprising Mont Carnillet, the Casque, the Teton, and Mont Haut, to the east of Reims. Since May 20 their fruitless assaults have numbered sixteen.

The last important assault was carried out on the night of May 30, and for this selected German regiments were especially trained and rehearsed behind their own lines before they were thrown against the French lines. But they only met with disaster.

On this occasion the first and second assaulting waves were everywhere annihilated before they were half way to the French positions. A few men in the waves that followed obtained a footing in the French lines, but at daybreak were wiped out in the course of a French counter attack.

Positions Most Important.

A visit to Mont Carnillet demonstrates the importance the Germans attached to this place and the extraordinary preparations to hold it in order to preserve the observatories, from which the Germans were able to watch the French artillery.

Inside the hill the Germans had excavated a tunnel with three exits on the northern slopes. There was space sufficient to hold three battalions with ten days' rations and big ammunition depots.

The existence of this tunnel was unknown until the French offensive on April 17, when, after the first French waves passed, the German occupants sortied and fired upon them from the rear. On May 20, after terrific artillery preparation with sixteen inch and gas shells, the French made a second attempt and won the crest and the northern slopes of Mont Carnillet.

The French awaited a counter attack from the garrison of the tunnel similar to that of the seventeenth, but none occurred. Later it was found the entire garrison had perished.

It comprised six companies of the Four Hundred and Seventy-sixth German infantry regiment, two machine gun companies, two sections of pioneers, an ambulance unit, and signal detachment, besides a number of artillery officers.

Says Thrust Has Ended.

BERLIN, via London, June 2.—The French and British offensive on the western front has come to a definite conclusion, according to a report from Field Marshal von Hindenburg to Emperor William. Official announcement is made that the emperor has sent the following telegram to the empress at Homburg castle:

"According to a report from Field Marshal von Hindenburg, the great British and French spring offensive has come to a certain conclusion.

"Prepared since autumn and announced since winter, the attack of the British and French armies, supported by powerful masses of artillery and technical resources of all kinds, has failed after seven weeks of hard struggle.

"God's aid has granted our incomparable troops superhuman force to accomplish these excellent acts and endure successfully the mightiest battles ever seen in the history of war.

Command Nation's Gratitude.

"All our heroes by their deeds command the respect and gratitude which every German feels. The Lord be praised. Glory for His help, and thanks for such magnificent people in arms."

Emperor William also has sent a telegram of congratulations to Emperor Charles on the Austrian resistance to the Italian attack on the Isonzo front, saying:

"In a tenacious struggle the Isonzo army defied the mighty and stubborn enemy and caused him to fail. I congratulate you and your brave troops on this great success. God will be with us further."

713 AIRPLANES LOST IN MAY ON WESTERN FRONT

LONDON, June 2.—The morning papers figure that 713 airplanes were shot down on the western front in May, of which 442 were German and 271 British and French.

British headquarters admitted the loss of eighty-six machines, but as the French do not announce any war losses it is impossible to verify the inference that they lost 185.

It is worthy of note that the estimate of 271 is compiled from German official reports. The total air losses for April were estimated at 709.

DUKE NICHOLAS UNDER ARREST, REPORT SAYS

Russians Sink 147 Ships During Coast Raid Off Anatolia.

BULLETIN.

PETROGRAD, June 2.—A Russian squadron on May 29 bombarded four ports along the Anatolian coast and destroyed 147 sailing vessels loaded with supplies, it was officially announced today.

LONDON, June 2.—Grand Duke Nicholas, former commander in chief of the Russian armies, has been arrested as a result of royalist riots at Tiflis, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Petrograd.

The grand duke, who commanded the Russian armies in the early months of the war and subsequently was sent to the Caucasus, was designated as supreme commander by Emperor Nicholas on the abdication of the emperor, but the Russian revolutionists opposed the appointment because of the grand duke's connection with the Romanoff family, and he retired. Early last month it was announced that Grand Duke Nicholas had arrived at his estate in the Crimea.

There have been several arrests in connection with reported royalist movements since the revolution, but no previous intimation has been received of any disorders in this connection.

Anarchy in Petrograd.

PETROGRAD, June 2.—A number of heavily armed anarchists paraded the Nevsky Prospect yesterday bearing banners inscribed "Down with authority! Long live the social revolution!" The members of the mob carried rifles, revolvers, daggers, and grenades.

The paraders stopped outside the Kazan cathedral and harangued the spectators. One sailor proclaimed that they were only dangerous to capitalists and not to the poor. Subsequently agitators went from one assemblage to another along the Nevsky, inciting them to rob banks and declaring that the social revolution would be proclaimed on the occasion of the approaching municipal elections. The authorities did not interfere with the demonstration.

Many soldiers and sailors joined in the demonstration.

Freed Criminals Peril.

Russia's criminals, released from prison in the first joyous celebration of independence, are making Petrograd unsafe. A wave of robberies and violent crimes is sweeping the city.

Today a millionaire merchant, M. Gregorioff, was shot down at his mansion in the heart of the city by three men. The trio claimed to be anarchists and demanded money from the merchant. Militiamen and workers, responding to Gregorioff's cries for help, killed one bandit and captured a second. The third committed suicide. The $15,000 which they had forced Gregorioff to give them was recovered.

The unrest in the city has been augmented by the strike of 6,000 clerks in Petrograd's shops. They are demanding double wages—retroactive since the start of the war—which would be an equivalent of from $5,000 to $10,000 per clerk.

Prison for Former Czar.

Nicholas Romanoff may find out from personal experience the rigors of the punishment he used to mete out so freely to Russian political offenders.

The workmen's and soldiers' council today adopted a resolution approving the removal of the former czar of all the Russias from his Winter palace at Tsarskoe Selo to the great fortress of Peter and Paul. The delegates were convinced that the autocrat of other days is carelessly guarded under the present arrangement.

Peter and Paul fortress has housed many a victim of Russia's secret police of the other days. Its gloomy corridors date from the foundation of Petrograd itself. The fortress is situated on an island in the great Neva river, in the city limits.

Quick settlement is expected of the clash over authority at the Kronstadt fortress, the main defense of Petrograd. The soldiers' and workmen's local council there, it was said, had misunderstood the conditions under which a joint committee of workmen and soldiers and provisional government representatives were to administer affairs.

WILSON MESSAGE LOST?

Washington, D. C., June 2.—[Special.]—State department officials are growing puzzled over their failure to receive from Ambassador Francis at Petrograd acknowledgment of the receipt of the long cable dispatch sent two weeks ago defining for the Russian government the war aims of the United States. So far efforts to trace the dispatch have been futile. Likewise all attempts to get a reply from the ambassador have been fruitless.

The facility with which "bad" news is sent out of Russia has suggested many times that some persons not friendly to the new government may be in control of the Russian telegraphs. That conditions are still chaotic there can be no doubt, and the delay in handling official code messages, especially when they are lengthy, may be explained on this ground alone.

CHICAGO SECOND IN NAVY RECRUITS IN MIDDLE WEST

Sixty-two men enlisted yesterday in the Third Reserve engineers. The total strength of the regiment is now over 700 men.

Chicago is second among cities of the middle west in the number of naval recruits enlisted in the last week in May. In thirteen cities 1,104 men enlisted. Minneapolis heads the list with 177. Chicago's enlistments were 170.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis was invited yesterday to speak at the demonstration to be held June 10 in Dexter pavilion at the Stockyards to boost recruiting for the marine corps.

GANGRENE GERMS IN ALL UNIFORMS BELGIANS WEAR?

New York, June 2.—[Special.]—Dr. J. P. Simonds of the Northwestern university medical school of Chicago, who has made in Belgium for the Rockefeller institute a study of gas gangrene in the European war trenches, reports, through the Journal of Experimental Medicine, that he has found spores of a germ supposed to cause the disease on 100 per cent of the uniforms of Belgian soldiers who had come directly from the trenches. The name of this bad germ is "bacillus welchhii."

In fifteen of twenty fresh war wounds members of this group of bacteria were discovered to be present. Of the fifteen patients only three later developed gas gangrene.

He suggested that injections of oxygen gas will be much more effective if made early in the course of the disease.

Congress Gives Wilson $750,000,000 Ship Fund

Washington, D. C., June 2.—The senate today accepted the conference report on the $3,340,000,000 urgent deficiency bill providing appropriations for the army and navy.

The measure carries the drastic shipping provisions giving President Wilson the power to spend $750,000,000 as he sees fit in the purchase and construction of merchant vessels during the war.

SHE LOVES THOSE COWS AND CHICKS IF THEY MATCH

Mrs. Scott Durand is a practical farmer. She doesn't have to prove it. She admitted it yesterday while presiding at a meeting of the Chicago branch of the Women's Farm and Garden association in Fullerton hall, and added:

"But I have an æsthetic side, too. I like to have my chickens match my Guernsey cows in color. I won't have a white chicken on my place. It makes me think of a newspaper blowing around".

The sins of Mr. and Mrs. Rat in the poultry yard were discussed.

RUSH WORK ON LAND FOR NAVY

Washington, D. C., June 2.—Rear Admiral Harris, chief of the bureau of yards and docks, in a statement tonight outlining what the navy is doing to increase quickly its shore facilities, said the $80,000,000 shore building program was being carried out "on an unprecedented scale," with work already accomplished in a few weeks which ordinarily would extend over a period of years.

"As an example of the scope of the work," the admiral said, "more than $10,000,000 is involved in providing immediately storage space for provisions, supplies, and ammunition.

"At the New York navy yard, for instance, we are building a storehouse which will be the largest single building of the kind in the United States. This will be completed within five months."

SENATE PASSES FIRST FOOD BILL; UP TO CONFEREES

Stimulates Agriculture, Bars Hoarding, and Plans Survey.

Washington, D. C., June 2.—The first of the administration food bills, already passed by the house, passed the senate late today without a record vote. Numerous amendments were attached to the measure, which provides for a food survey and crop stimulation, and it was sent to conference where the differences will be thrashed out while the two houses are considering the second administration measure, providing for food control and price fixing.

The bill as finally accepted by the senate provides for a comprehensive survey of food resources, and for the stimulation of agriculture, and restricts drastically the storing of foodstuffs, fuel, and other necessities and speculation in futures. The restrictive provisions were added by the senate. The bill carries a total appropriation of approximately $11,000,000, compared with $14,770,000 as it passed the house.

Hoarding Made a Felony.

Hoarding or storage of food, fuel, or other necessaries of life in order to limit the supply or affect prices would be made a felony under the senate hoarding amendment, but farmers who hold their own products would be excepted. The amendment restricting futures trading, written by Senator Nelson and voted into the bill, 37 to 17, just before passage, provides:

"If at any time during the pendency of the existing war between the United States and the German empire, the president of the United States shall find that dealings in futures in or about any grain exchange, unduly or unreasonably raise or enhance the price of wheat or other food cereals, to the injury of the people of the United States, he may at once request the traders in such exchange to discontinue for a time specified by him all dealings in futures.

May Close Exchanges.

"In case such request of the president is not promptly complied with, then he is hereby empowered to order such dealings in futures, as last aforesaid, to be entirely suspended and discontinued for such limited time as he may direct, and if such order is not promptly complied with, he may by proclamation declare such exchange closed, and thereafter it shall be unlawful to utilize or permit to be utilized such building or room as a grain exchange or for any person being a trader in grain on such exchange to engage in the business theretofore conducted on or at such closed exchange.

"Any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall be punished by a fine of not less than $500 or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment."

Inquisition Is Curtailed.

The senate also voted to curtail the inquisitorial power given the secretary of agriculture in the investigation of food resources. The house bill would compel the attendance of witnesses and the submission of books and other records under heavy penalty. The senate agriculture committee amended the provision so as to give the secretary general authorization to investigate the food situation, making it the "duty of any person when requested by the secretary to answer all questions necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this section." The house appropriation of $2,522,000 to pay for the survey was accepted unchanged.

The section authorizing the government to sell seeds to the farmers also was amended so as to provide that sales be made for cash only. The power to compel persons having seeds at their disposal to furnish them to the government was greatly curtailed and the appropriation carried for the work was reduced from $5,778,000 to $2,500,000. The house appropriation for eradication of live stock diseases was eliminated, and an appropriation of $880,000 was added to stimulate live stock production.

PAINTS GERMAN ACTS OF CRUELTY

Washington, D. C., June 2.—Further reports of German brutality are contained in a letter reaching the state department from a woman engaged in hospital work in France. Her account of the abduction of women at Noyon by the Germans when they retreated is supplemented by a revolting story of sanitary conditions.

"Every girl between the ages of 14 and 30 was carried away by the German's nine days before the retreat began," the letter says, "and many of the younger women left are about to become mothers."

For seventeen months, the writer says, none of the French civil population living in the cellars of Noyon has had any meat. Many, especially the babies, died during that time.

TAX AD RETURNS, IGNORE POSTAGE, PUBLISHERS ASK

Increased Rates Mean Ruin to Some, They Tell Senators.

Washington, D. C., June 2.—War taxation of publishers' advertising receipts, rather than increase of their postage rates, was vigorously urged today by representatives of national publishing interests at an informal conference with senators who are redrafting the war tax bill.

Newspaper, magazine, trade, religious, farm, and many other publishing interests, joined in the plea which will be reported to the finance committee Monday.

A confidential draft of committee changes is being printed, and the committee plans to decide how publications shall be taxed, to place the bill in final form, and to report it to the senate before the end of next week.

Offer by Publishers.

Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committe; Senator Penrose, senior Republican member, and Senator Smoot received the publishers' representatives today to thrash out the whole question of war taxes upon publications having the second class, or cent a pound, mailing rate.

The publishers were asked to suggest a taxation plan, and the unanimous recommendation of levying on advertising receipts was the result after an hour's discussion.

The increased postage rates would put many publishers out of business and could not be passed along, the committee was told, while a tax on advertising receipts could be met by increased advertising rates.

Oppose Boost in Postage.

The plan proposed by Senator Hardwick and indorsed by the postoffice department, to leave present postage rates on news portions of publications and heavily increase that on the advertising carried, was condemned by the publishers as more detrimental to their interests than the house zone system, already rejected by the committee.

Senator Simmons suggested a combination postage and advertising tax, but the publishers protested against any change whatever in mail rates.

"Newspapers are not desirous of escaping a tax," the committee was told by Elbert H. Baker of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, chairman of the legislative committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' association, "but we would rather have a direct tax on advertising receipts at a fair rate than any charge in the postage rate."

Bares Low Postage Advocates.

To a statement by Senator Penrose that thousands of letters are being received by members of congress protesting against increasing letter rates if second class rates are allowed to stand, Mr. Baker replied that the One Cent Letter Postage league, contributed to by manufacturers, is behind a propaganda of that kind.

A draft of an amendment suggested by Senator Simmons proposed to increase second class rates by 25 or 50 per cent—to 1¼ or 1½ cents a pound—with a tax on advertising receipts of 1½ per cent. This plan quickly was disapproved by the publishers.

Representing trade and business publications, J. B. Baldwin of New York said while such publications make comparatively small use of the mails, and while an advertising tax would impose a heavier burden than a postage tax, publishers of that class, in behalf of the general publishing situation, would rather accept tax on advertising.

Hopewell Rogers of the Chicago Daily News said an advertising tax would affect publishers of afternoon and morning newspapers differently, but that, "no matter what tax is levied, some will have an advantage over competitors."

BERLIN, via London, June 3, 2 a. m.—The German emperor has sent the following telegram to the crown prince in France:

"On my visit to the front I only had an opportunity to address deputations of the armies, which under your command have in the last two months frustrated the great French attempts to break through on the Aisne and in Champagne.

"I charge you to express the thanks of myself and the fatherland to all the leaders and troops who, in these difficult weeks, exerted all their energies and ability and risked their blood and lives, and by whose iron determination the enemy's assaults were shattered.

"The German fatherland is proud of its brave sons and full of confidence that new fighting will also bring new victories."

The emperor has telegraphed the crown prince of Bavaria as follows:

"On the battlefield of Arras the troops from all parts of Germany under your command have in the fierce battles of the last two months brought England's warlike intentions at this point to naught.

"With me the German fatherland thanks its sons for their loyal devotion to our great German cause.

"Make it known to all the leaders and troops that my thanks are coupled with confidence that with God's help they will be victorious also in the fighting in the future."

U. S. ARRANGES RECRUITING OF FOREIGN LEGION

Washington, D. C., June 2.—Regulations under which foreign legions may be recruited in this country by agents of the allies were announced today by Secretary Baker to make effective the new law authorizing alien enlistments.

Great Britain is the first country to apply for permission to conduct a recruiting campaign in the United States under the regulations, and is expected to open offices in New York immediately.

Officials of several other countries have discussed the plan informally with war department officials and may start systematic recruiting of their nationals here within a few weeks.

SHALL CULTURE YIELD TO 'KULTUR' IN U. S. SCHOOLS?

'Never,' Answer Leaders of Nation—Uphold the Classics.

Princeton, N. J., June 2.—The "glory that was Greece" and the "grandeur that was Rome" is fighting for its life in the American classroom against the "efficiency that is Christendom today."

The first great defensive was launched in Princeton at a conference today, called to combat the trend toward the elimination of classical education from school and college curricula, as favored by Abraham Flexner of the general education board of the Rockefeller foundation.

There was no lack of champions to oppose Mr. Flexner's propaganda. President Wilson, former Presidents Taft and Roosevelt, Senator Lodge, Elihu Root, and many other noted men—leaders in all walks of life—indorsed the retention of the classics. Statements prepared by them were read at the conference.

President Wilson's View.

President Wilson wrote:

"What you cannot find a substitute for is the classics as literature, and there can be no first hand contact with that literature if you will not master the grammar and the syntax which convey its subtle power. Your enlightenment depends on the company you keep. You do not know the world until you know the men who have possessed it and tried its ways before you were ever given your brief run upon it."

Mr. Taft wrote that he strongly favored the continuing of classics in academic education and considered that, in addition to the mental discipline which study of them afford, they are most helpful in the matter of correct English style.

Col. Roosevelt wrote that a cultural education must include the classics.

"Every liberal course," he said, "should also include a wide sweep of general history and pre-history for a liberal scholar should certainly have vividly in mind the tremendous drama of man's progress through the ages."

"Culture vs. Kultur."

Senator Lodge drew a parallel between the culture of the golden age of old Athens and the "kultur" responsible for the nightmare of modern Europe.

"I have become skeptical," he wrote, "as to the wisdom which would cast the literature of Greece and Rome upon the dust heaps, when I have contemplated the performances of the most diversely and most thoroughly educated people in the world, from whom we have so largely borrowed in the way of education; when I have seen that people develop to the highest point the science of destroying human lives, as perhaps was to have been expected; when I have seen them produce an organized barbarism far surpassing in its savage efficiency any that has ever afflicted the world; when I have witnessed the deeds wrought by products of the most modern and improved methods of education which surpass in wanton destruction, in equally wanton cruelty, in sheer naked horror, anything which history can show; when I have beheld all this I have seriously doubted whether the most modern education has been quite such a complete success as its advocates assert."

Editors Uphold Classics.

Edward P. Mitchell of the New York Sun and Dr. Charles R. Miller of the New York Times told of the value of the classical studies as viewed by newspaper men.

"The most serious practical evil," Mr. Mitchell said, "to result from the elimination of the classics will fall upon the English language itself. There is no livelier perception than in the newspaper offices of the disintegration produced by the absurd circumstance that only so many millimeters of big type can be made to go into so many millimeter's width of column.

"In its worst aspects headline English is the yellow peril of the language.

"Were I the emergency autocrat of this language I should proclaim in drastic regulations and enforce by severe penalties the American duty of adherence to the old habits of speech, the old scrupulous respect for the finer shades of meaning, the old rigid observance of the morality of word relations; and this, I believe, can be done only by maintaining the classical culture at high potency."

Greek and Latin Essential.

Dr. Miller declared that "the surest way, certainly the shortest way to the acquisition of this sense of values (of words) leads through the texts of the Greek and Latin authors and the less alluring but indispensable pages of the grammarians.

"I am void of all fear about contradiction when I say that a newspaper man, and particuarly an editorial writer, who has missed making the acquaintance of the gods and mortal speaking men from whom our heritage of civilization has descended must fail to do full justice to his talents, however great they may be."

A Loftier Conception.

Secretary of State Robert Lansing sent a statement which reads in part as follows:

"I am convinced that the study of the classics furnishes a man with mental processes which he cannot otherwise acquire, that it elevates him above the materialistic and gives him a loftier conception of the realities. Experience has proven that acquaintance with classical thought perfects the intellect and makes it able to enter the other fields of knowledge with keener perception of the things which make life worth the living.

"It is my opinion that the extension of classical studies in our instituions of higher learning should be generally encouraged."

Elihu Root declared himself a "firm believer in the value of studying Greek and Latin. Although in after life one may forget much that he has learned, he can never lose the influence upon his character."

IDA'S WARMEST ADMIRER

Little Clarke Ashby, of Berwyn, Wants the Red Cross Calf So Very Much That He's Had His Papa Bid $600 for Her.

Master Clarke Ashby

IDA GOES SOME; NOW WORTH $600; LAST CALL TODAY

Ida went some yesterday!

The Red Cross calf, placed on the auctioneer's block by her owner, Maurice Peairs, of Des Moines, Ia., the gross returns to go to the Red Cross, became a $600 property when the bidding closed last night.

Before we go any further, three things must be established.

The first is that Ida is a Red Cross calf. This is not a sale for the benefit of Maurice Peairs, only in so far as it proves his patriotism and gives him membership in the Red Cross. Master Peairs gave Ida to the nation. Ida was offered to THE TRIBUNE with the sole idea of being auctioned to the highest bidder.

THE TRIBUNE is going to turn the money over to the Red Cross. When this is done Maurice will have completed his bit, the Red Cross will have been aided, and Ida will have a new home.

The next point to be established is the whereabouts of Ida. Ida is in Lincoln park, where all may stop, look, and listen.

Mr. De Vry has thrown open a spacious salon in the lion house in the park and there Ida will be seen all day today.

The next thing is to state absolutely that the auction closes at midnight tonight. Put it in capitals, so all may read—MIDNIGHT TONIGHT!

Yesterday the bidding opened, as has been indicated, at $280. This was the last bid of Friday night, and made by Clarke Ashby of Berwyn. Clarke isn't much older than Ida. Clarke was being hard pressed by the Ralston Purina company of St. Louis, which bid $250, but he boosted it.

Last night Thomas E. Wilson, president of Wilson & Co., took a hand. He held up five fingers and the bidding went to $500. But young Master Ashby did not lose courage. He simply said $525. Mr. Wilson raised back to $540. Not enough.

Master Ashby heard of the $550 bid and this time made it a good one.

"I'll make it $600."

BIG BILL ORGAN SOUNDS PEAL AT WILSON'S EARS

Another outburst against President Wilson was contained in the Republican—the organ of the city administration—when it reached the news stands yesterday. In characteristic fashion, a full page is devoted to a tirade on the war and "agin the gov'ment." Some of the questions asked in the headlines are:

"Was congress coerced into declaring war on Germany?"

"Was the issue forced by Wilson, Wall street, or the commercialized press? Who has benefited by this action?"

"Why does the president want such supreme power?"

The body of the story tells how Mayor Thompson pointed out the danger more than two years ago in a speech at Aurora, but that his warning and his recent plea for a limited embargo on foodstuffs fell on deaf ears. A back handed slap is taken at the Liberty loan, and a list of the profits of manufacturers during two years of the European war is also printed. Then the writer asks whether or not the war is for "patriotism or profits."

BERLIN READY TO GIVE SPAIN FULL APOLOGY

PARIS, June 2.—The reply of the German government to Spain regarding the attack by a German submarine on the Spanish steamer Patricio, says a Havas dispatch from Madrid, is understood to be extremely cordial. The German note declares that the ship was not torpedoed and that the submarine had no intention of sinking it, but simply wanted to stop it.

As the ship did not stop, the note adds, the submarine fired the shell which struck the hull of the Patricio. The German government, it is said, expresses regret over the death of the engineer on the Patricio and is prepared to pay an indemnity to his family.

The German government in its note, the dispatch adds, says that it never had any intention of causing injury to Spain or insult to the Spanish flag. If the explanations should be deemed insufficient, the note says, Germany is disposed to do honor to the Spanish flag and on the first possible occasion German warships will file past a Spanish ship, which will hoist the Spanish flag, and each German ship will fire a salute of twenty-one guns.

SAVING THE DAY FOR THE MOTORIST

The cost of gasoline has been climbing for the past two years, is still going up, and every indication points to its continued rise. Recently many articles by oil authorities have appeared warning the motoring public of its approaching shortage.

Today we are confronted with the tremendous demand that will be added to normal consumption by the Army and Navy and the aerial arm of our service; therefore it appears imperative that some other power be utilized in order to safeguard supplies that must be available for military purposes.

England and France are experiencing a very serious shortage in gasoline, in spite of the fact that five times as much of this fuel was supplied them in 1916 as in 1914. Their deficiencies must now be filled from our supply. England has prohibited the use of gas-driven cars for other than government service. Practically the same conditions exist in France.

In the face of these conditions, it is not unreasonable to assume that motorists will soon have a similar situation to meet in this country.

25 EGG MEN HERE ARE INDICTED AS PRICE BOOSTERS

Federal Jury Charges Plot —Other Dealers Are Threatened.

The Chicago egg trust, which, it is charged, has advanced the price of eggs by market manipulations, in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, received a crushing blow yesterday when the federal grand jury returned indictments before Judge Landis against twenty-five individuals and firms connected with the Chicago Butter and Egg board.

This governmental step to prevent rapacious dealers from taking advantage of the war crisis to enrich themselves at the expense of the people is expected to be followed by attacks along other lines.

OTHER LINES MENACED.

When the grand jury reconvenes next Wednesday it will undertake, it is said, a full investigation of the food situation in Chicago. Special Attorney General Robert W. Childs plans to present evidence against members of the Chicago board of trade who are suspected of having engineered a monopoly in wheat and other grains. Coal dealers also, it is said, are to be the subject of an inquiry to determine whether the present high prices of fuel are the result of an illegal combine.

The egg dealers against whom indictments were returned include sixteen individuals and nine firms, as follows:

Owen D. Gilman,
Charles J. Bowman,
S. Edward Davis,
Don B. Kilbourne,
S. Love Kelley,
Frank M. Heggie,
Frank J. Sokol,

Feilchenfeld & Aaron.

Special Attorney General Childs began his investigation into eggs prices two months ago when he learned that 200 cars containing 13,000,000 eggs were held on railroad sidings in Chicago yards, tying up not only the city's egg supply but the supply of cars which were needed for hauling other food.

100 WITNESSES TESTIFY.

Before presenting evidence to the grand jury Mr. Childs had more than 100 witnesses before him and took their sworn statements. All the documentary evidence and the more important of the witnesses were presented to the grand jury.

The indictments charge fraudulent manipulation of the market to establish an abnormal condition and advance eggs to an unwarranted price.

"The defendants," read the indictments, "adopted a practice of making fictitious purchases and sales without intending that the eggs should be delivered. The natural and inevitable effect has been to establish prices for eggs throughout the United States higher than the true market price."

A Word of Defense.

"It looks as if the government is crucifying Chicago egg dealers to satisfy the public demand for a victim responsible for the prevailing high prices of foodstuffs. Steel sells today for three times its former price. Shoes bring twice their former prices. Everything we wear, every business and home necessity, has increased in price from 50 to 500 per cent. And business men and public agree that this is due to the big demand, the high cost of production, and other natural causes.

"But when eggs increase 50 per cent in price the possibility of natural causes for the rise is forgotten. Some individuals upon whom to fasten the popular wrath must be found. Responsibility is not put upon the farmer. A conspiracy can't be fastened on 7,000,000 farmers. The consumer isn't responsible, because there are too many of him also. So the government hits the middleman.

"And his profits for this service are from one-fourth to one-half a cent a dozen. And profits upon his gross business are an average of 1 per cent of his sales.

"The increased price of eggs is due to exactly the same reasons as the increased price of potatoes, wheat, other foodstuffs, and clothing. The egg crop is short.

"Sixty-five per cent of the eggs produced this year is controlled by the large packers. Yet the government charges that the Chicago produce brokers, who distribute the other 35 per cent of the western egg product, are fixing the price for the nation."

CAR SHORTAGE BIG FACTOR IN PRICE OF COAL

Complaint of Operators Is Outlined in Letter from One of Them.

As has been suggested in THE TRIBUNE, the first official conference on the present high cost of Illinois bituminous coal was held on Friday afternoon in the rooms of the Illinois state council of national defense.

C. M. Moderwell, who represents the Illinois and Indiana coal mining districts on the national committee on fuel production, of which Francis S. Peabody is chairman, did not take part in the conference.

As a result of last week's meeting, further meetings will be held during the coming week, at which leading railroad men of the middle west will be invited to be present.

It developed on Friday that the prevailing shortage of coal cars is one of the controlling factors in the situation.

Letter Outlines Complaint.

The complaint of coal mine operators is, perhaps, fairly outlined in the following letter:

"We are a small independent coal mine located on the Illinois Central railroad. President Markham of the Illinois Central states that they are handling more coal than ever before; but this is the record of our car supply for the last two weeks: From May 15 to May 30 our mine was only able to work twenty-six hours, and this was due solely to car shortage.

"The facts are, our mine has a capacity of 1,700 tons daily. We have for years past had contracts amounting to 400 or 500 tons daily, and we have, in nearly every case, renewed these contracts. Now, with this small running time we are getting we are unable to fill our contracts, let alone have free coal.

Miners Leaving Them.

"But getting at the price of coal. Say we had no contracts, what price do you think we should receive for coal when we work our mine only thirteen hours per week and stand idle thirty-five hours per week and have to give our day men six days of employment per week to keep them?

"Now, you know that a miner has to have a very large wage if he is going to support a family on thirteen hours a week work, but you know he cannot do this. So for this reason our miners are leaving us every day either to work at other mines that are getting more cars or for other employment."

CAN FOOD AND 'CAN' WASTE, IS PLEA TO WOMEN

Washington, D. C., June 2.—[Special.]—The question of saving the food of the country is entirely up to the women, according to Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman of Chicago, chairman of the conservation department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Sherman has inaugurated a nation-wide food canning campaign among the federations' members, in coöperation with the national emergency food garden commission.

In instructions to the conservation chairman of each state today Mrs. Sherman said:

"It is inexcusable negligence at this time for women not to inform themselves concerning the various phases of food conservation, as it affects the individual, the community, the nation, and our allies."

CHURCHES BEGIN DRIVE FOR SALE OF WAR BONDS

1,183 Asked to Do Utmost in Getting Liberty Subscriptions.

"Liberty Loan Week" will start today when the churches throughout the country will open up an intensive drive for the sale of the war bonds. All of the 1,183 churches and missions in Chicago have been asked to do their utmost in getting subscriptions, and bishops and other clerical heads have promised coöperation. A. W. Harris, president of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, is chairman of the subcommittee on churches.

Steps were taken by a number of large corporations to extend the sale of the bonds. Four thousand salesmen connected with 400 branches of Swift & Co. in the United States will take on a new line of goods and attempt to get their customers to subscribe to the loan. Directions to the men regarding methods of selling the war bonds will be issued from the Chicago office. The company recently announced its purchase of $4,000,000 worth of the bonds for distribution among its employés.

Railroads Buy for Employes.

The Pennsylvania and Lackawanna railroads announced that they will buy bonds for their employés, permitting installment payments. The Lackawanna plan permits the employés to pay approximately $1 a week on $50 bonds.

The largest single subscription to the loan in Chicago yesterday was that of Julius Rosenwald, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co. Mr. Rosenwald purchased $1,000,000 worth of bonds for his personal account. The purchase was made through Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company. On Friday it was announced that Sears, Roebuck & Co. had subscribed for $1,000,000 of Liberty bonds for the corporation's account.

Sells $2,000,000 Daily.

For the last four days the First National bank has been selling to its customers $2,000,000 a day in war bonds, a total of $8,000,000. The work of scheduling and forwarding to the treasury department the Liberty bond subscriptions was begun several days ago, according to a statement of James B. Forgan, chairman of the board of directors of the bank.

IT'S YOUR RIGHT

BY WALT MASON.

This Is One of the Articles by Western Writers in Support of the Liberty Loan.

WHEN you buy a Liberty bond you are doing your country a real service, a service that means no sacrifice. Instead of sacrificing, you are wisely providing for your own future and the future of your children when you buy Liberty bonds. You are putting your money into the safest savings bank in the world, for the United States government is back of every bond.

But, better than all material considerations of the kind, you are demonstrating the right kind of patriotism. You are showing your confidence in and approval of your government in this critical time, and all the world is looking on. If the people do not eagerly snap up the Liberty bonds, the enemy will argue that you do not indorse your government, with reference to the war, and you surely do not want such an impression to go abroad. Should your patriotism ever be questioned in the future, the best possible answer is a Liberty bond.

There is no excuse for not investing. Banks everywhere are making it possible for poor people to buy the bonds on easy payments. You may pay a dollar a week and own a Liberty bond, and when you own one you will feel that you are taking a man's part in the great contest for freedom and national honor.

FOIL GERMANY'S PLOT TO GET AN AMERICAN ISLE

Sought Venezuela Property for U-Boat Base Against U. S.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 2.—[Special.]—Secret attempts by Germany to acquire a naval base on this side of the Atlantic, evidently for the purpose of attacking the United States, have been discovered and will be frustrated.

The state department, it was disclosed tonight, has information that negotiations have been under way, carried on by German citizens acting for the German government, for the purchase of Margarita island, off the north coast of Venezuela.

Venezuela Warned.

The attention of the Venezuelan government has been called to the fact that the transfer of this island would be a violation of the Monroe doctrine.

This, it is understood, is as far as the government of the United States has found it necessary to go, but it can be said drastic action would promptly be taken if needed.

To Bring War Over Here.

In this attempt by Germany there is revealed the German determination to bring the war to this side of the Atlantic if possible, and the absolute need of complete and rapid preparations by the United States to meet the possibility of a German attack. It is presumed that Germany wanted Margarita island as a submarine base, and the incident indicates that Germany is planning a submarine campaign against this country.

WOMEN, VICTIMS OF WAR, MUST SHARE BENEFIT

Only Female Member of Stockholm Meetings So Declares.

BY CYRIL BROWN.

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

STOCKHOLM, June 2.—Women, too, must participate in the democratization of the nations, according to Frau Nina Bang, one of the leaders of the Danish Socialist party, which she represents here, the only woman member sitting at the conference.

"The Danish Socialists, ever since the outbreak of the war," she said to me, "have endeavored to establish an international connection among the Socialists of all the warring nations. Unfortunately, we succeeded only partially.

Long Sought to Meet.

"On Jan. 15 we held a congress in Copenhagen, at which we laid down our program of points, including the reconstitution of the Internationale, arbitration, and disarmament agreements, and the democratization of the nations. Since then the Socialists of the warring countries have repeatedly endeavored to get together, but the governments refused them passes, until now, at last, we have succeeded in bringing about a meeting.

"Women must share in the work of democratization, because the war has forced women to work as never before, and because the war has succeeded in doing what for centuries capitalists have vainly striven to do—namely: the economic mobilization of virtually all women.

Women's Position Changed.

"This circumstance naturally will radically change the social position of women. The democratization of the nations must naturally be first fought for and won by the workers. A democratic constitution, however, presupposes a well organized, class-conscious people. This alone is a guarantee of real democracy.

"Only through the organization of the lower strata of the nations can we hope to obtain permanent peace. In every event, complete freedom and autonomy must be given to all nationalities. That in the future one people shall be ruled over by another, I hold as quite out of the question for the time after the war."

CUT THE FRILLS; PLAIN CLOTHES ARE WAR VOGUE

Washington, D. C., June 2.—[Special.]—"Cut the frills in clothes" is a war edict to the fastidious from the council of national defense. In effort to institute an economy in wool for all concerned the government would have all men and women simplify their dress.

"Sacrifice patchpockets, flaring skirts, cuffs on coats and trousers, long sack coats, unnecessary plaits, and other frills," is the advice to the public issued from a conference of woolen and worsted manufacturers with the commercial economy board of the defense council.

The conference was called to consider the possibilities of war economy in wool.

No effort will be made to discourage the sale of goods made up in existing styles. The board and the manufacturers believe such a move would be wasteful. The campaign will be confined to next year's output.

The threatened shortage of wool for next year is causing grave concern and the board expects its program to be of material assistance in making up some of the defects.

Cermak Warns of Impostors.

Chief Bailiff Anton Cermak of the Municipal court yesterday sent a warning to business men against men who have posed as bailiffs and collected subscriptions for a picnic to be held on Sept. 8 by the Bailiffs' Protective association.

"These men are not from this office," he said.

Politics Must Be Secondary to Military in War Times

BY COL. HENRY J. REILLY.

FIFTEENTH ARTICLE.

In the preceding article it was shown that April, 1915, was the darkest point to that date from the beginning of the war for the central powers.

This for the reason that not only had they been unable to beat the Russians during the winter and spring but even to stop their successful advance in the Carpathians, while on the western front there was every indication that the French were about to start a heavy offensive against Arras and to the south Italy was about to join the allies.

Up to this time the central powers had gained an ally in Turkey. However, they were separated from her by Bulgaria, which was neutral, and Serbia, which was hostile. This separation was naturally a source of weakness and could be made a source of great danger if Bulgaria could be brought in on the side of the entente.

One Cause of War.

The Balkan situation, because of the rivalries of Russia, the central powers, and Turkey, to say nothing of the small Balkan states, was one of the principal causes of the war. It was certain when the war broke out that sooner or later it would spread to the Balkans. Therefore each side was busily engaged in trying to bring in Roumania, Bulgaria, and Greece with instead of against them.

Consequently both the political and military authorities of each of the belligerents constantly had this situation under consideration. The problem for the entente was to harmonize the interests of the various Balkan states, all bitter rivals, with those of Italy and those of each other.

In addition they had to attempt to settle the many years' difference between Russia and Great Britain, due to the fact that Russia wanted and needed an outlet to the Mediterranean and Great Britain considered it necessary to keep Russia away from the route to India.

Simpler for Central Powers.

The problem was simpler for the central powers in that their own interests were identical and that Serbia, being an enemy, no attempt had to be made to harmonize her interests with those of the neutral Balkan states. Also they could use Serbian territory as a bribe.

On the other hand, the allies could not promise much of Turkey to any of the Balkan states, because neither Russia nor Great Britain wanted Constantinople to fall into any of their hands. While Great Britain had no desire to have Germany in any way control Turkey because of the strategical position with respect to the Mediterranean route to India and to India itself, neither was she particularly anxious to have Russia in possession.

For all these reasons the capture of Constantinople appealed strongly to the British government. The military authorities realized the advantage of keeping Turkey separated from her allies either by cutting the railway to Constantinople or by the capture of Constantinople itself.

Demanded Every Gun and Man.

On the other hand, they knew that any successful offensive on the western or French front demanded the presence there of every man and every gun. They also knew that while a successful allied campaign in the Balkans would prove embarrassing to the central powers there was little opportunity of it being fatal.

On the other hand, a successful campaign in France would mean the defeat of the German main armies with the consequent collapse of Germany itself, and therefore, of course, of German ambitions in the Balkans.

They knew that in general ships cannot successfully attack shore batteries and that therefore any naval expedition would undoubtedly be a failure. They knew that only the landing of troops and the capture of the batteries from the rear could open up the road for the ships.

Overruled on Dardanelles.

While examining the possibilities of a land campaign on the Gallipoli peninsula they were advised by the Greek general staff, which had thoroughly studied the question of land campaigns against Constantinople for many years, that an attempt by this route was undoubtedly doomed to failure.

For all these reasons the best military opinion was against any expedition to the Dardanelles. However, they were overruled by the civilian element of the government. A naval expedition was undertaken and failed. A land expedition was then undertaken.

While the troops and guns were gotten ashore, no headway of any consequence was made. The difficulties of the terrain and the numerous casualties led to a constant demand for reinforcement.

In other words, at the moment when a heavy offensive along the French front would have been of the utmost danger to Germany, badly needed troops were sent on an expedition to the orient, because diplomacy was given more consideration than military knowledge.

Soldier and Pastor Join to Close Saloons Near Fort

Col. W. J. Nicholson and the Rev. Thomas R. Quayle, secretary of the Lake County Law and Order league, yesterday began war upon two roadhouses at Half Day, within seven miles of Fort Sheridan. Col. Nicholson said he would ask Secretary of War Baker to close the saloons if the Lake county board of supervisors refused to do it.

The saloons were granted licenses two weeks ago, Mr. Quayle said, after Half Day had been dry three years.

Col. Nicholson also has issued an order against beer peddlers selling beer in the neighborhood of Fort Sheridan. Beer is being sold, it is said, in Highland Park.

Wisconsin Saloons to Shut.

HOYNE SEIZES BURR OAK INN, FORT OF CRIME

Sleuths Raid Notorious Roadhouse—Arrest 32 Men and Women.

tracks between him and his objective point.

As he neared the track a freight train drew up and halted in front of him. The boss of the dive pulled up and was taken. He denied he was armed, but the detectives took from him an automatic pistol, loaded.

Sleuths Climb Over Train.

Fearing their raid might fail, the detectives clambered over the train, which had slowly started moving, and, gaining the other side, ran to the Inn, with drawn weapons and stormed the citadel, with the result that all within soon were disarmed. "Judge" Wolske, wearing a dirty white apron, was behind the bar.

A search of the premises was made. The lower floor was found devoted to the large bar and some side rooms. In the low second story was found a succession of small sleeping chambers, each fitted with a trap door. Under each trap door was a passageway, and all the passageways converged into a main tunnel leading back of the Inn to a garage, where escape could readily be effected by motors kept always at hand.

"Armory" Well Stocked.

In one of the small lower rooms was found the "armory." This contained six loaded rifles with an abundance of ammunition, eight revolvers, two of which were automatics, and plenty of cartridges.

Behind the bar were found six slungshots, placed at convenient stations, handy to the bartenders. In the private apartment of Harris was found an opium smoking outfit, embracing a large quantity of opium and an ivory opium pipe valued at $300.

After the Inn had been searched the detectives visited the town hall and took charge of all village records. The various village officials then were rounded up and all placed in taxicabs for the return trip to Chicago.

The investigation and raid folllowed complaints from the villages of Morgan Park, Windsor Park, and other nearby communities. One of the most recent affairs to reach Mr. Hoyne was that of a Swedish youth who was made drunk, beaten, robbed, tossed in an automobile, and spirited away. No trace has been found of him.

Warning Letter Found.

Among the papers in the inn were also some blank election certificates along wtih the burial permits signed in blank by the village clerk. Also there was a letter warning the inn proprietors that a raid would be made on Friday or Saturday. This was anonymous.

All those held, thirty men and two woman—one believed the wife of Harris—will be questioned by Hoyne's men in an endeavor to obtain confessions.

Bridges Closed Today.

The city bureau of engineering announced yesterday that two bridges will be closed tomorrow for repairs. They are: North State street, from 6 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., and Halsted-Canal, from 4 a. m. to noon.

RUSH PLANS FOR MILITARY ROAD TO FT. SHERIDAN

The new military road to be built between Chicago and Waukegan will have a six inch concrete base and be paved with brick to a width of twenty-four feet.

This was decided at a meeting of engineers and north shore citizens in the office of Col. W. J. Nicholson at Fort Sheridan yesterday. Mayor Keene H. Addington of Lake Forest and Samuel M. Hastings of Highland Park were present.

It was suggested that the road follow as nearly as possible the line of the Northwestern railway. If this plan is followed out Sheridan road will be used as the military highway only over certain stretches. The road, it is expected, will be newly built for the greater part of the distance between Evanston and Fort Sheridan.

Money to built the road will come from a general tax, special assessments, and state and federal appropriations.

Present Low Price of Jeffery Six Can Only Be Maintained While Our Stock of Materials Lasts

So this is your opportunity if you act quickly. When our materials, bought over a year ago, are gone, you can't buy this Jeffery Six, worth $150 to $200 more, at the present low price. Take advantage of this saving now. See this car. Place Your Order at Once.

NASH Jeffery MOTORS

YOU have watched automobile prices go up and up.

The newspapers have been full of price-raising announcements. Already forty-four manufacturers have been forced to make advances of from $75 to $200.

These, we believe, were honestly necessary. They were based almost entirely on the increased cost of parts and raw materials.

Now materials and parts are still advancing—and in conjunction with the proposed government war tax, will unquestionably force motor car prices to still higher levels.

Here is where The Nash Motors Company has a tremendous advantage over companies which merely assemble cars. Ninety-three per cent of every Jeffery Six is made right in the Nash plant, from raw materials.

So you see we are practically unaffected by the rise in the cost of parts. And although during the past six months all raw materials have advanced in cost 20 to 50 per cent we have been protected on the raw material side, too.

Because we build ninety-three per cent of every Jeffery Six in our own plant we buy these materials far in advance and in huge quantities.

That is why in the face of these many abnormal conditions, and in the face of the tremendous advance made in materials, it does not seem possible that we can sell the Jeffery Six at $1465 for long—certainly not after our present stock of materials, bought over a year ago, is used up.

This is your opportunity! While we maintain this present price on Jeffery Six you can simply figure that you save a clear $150 to $200 by buying now.

For if the Jeffery Six were to be advanced in price in keeping with prices advanced by makers of other fine cars, you would have to pay just that amount to get this wonderful car.

So we say—act now. There are two good reasons why you should see your nearest Jeffery dealer and place your order at once. The first is that you have an unparalleled opportunity to buy this Jeffery Six—the finest car in its field—at from $150 to $200 below its real market value in view of present conditions.

The second reason is that the demand for this car is surpassing our expectations. We are hard pressed now to fill orders. The steadily rising prices of competing cars are driving home every day in the minds of people the truly unusual value of Jeffery Six.

Now as to the car itself. There is little we need to say about it to you now. You know the name this Jeffery Six has won for being a marvelously performing car. No car in its price class can match the service it will give you.

Ask any Jeffery owner what he thinks of his Jeffery Six. He will tell you that he has found it practically impossible to wear this car out. He will tell you that after long, hard service the body is tight and that repair costs are negligible.

He will tell you, too, that the motor keeps fit—that its flexibility and quick pick-up seem to improve with use. He will tell you that its streamlines are strictly the vogue. He will tell you that its second-hand value is higher after several years' wear than of most cars of its price class which have seen only half that service.

Remember—this is the Jeffery Six revised, improved and backed with unqualified endorsement, by The Nash Motors Company. We cannot maintain this price indefinitely. That is certain.

So you see it is the wise thing, the shrewd thing, the bit of good business on your part to see your nearest Jeffery dealer and place your order for a Jeffery Six at once.

Do this now. Don't delay. Then you will know that you have bought the biggest value in the motor car market today.

One more word! See your dealer—place your order—get your Jeffery Six at $1465.

SWEDEN INSISTS ON OWN RIGHTS, AND GETS THEM

Sure of Its Power, Nation Makes War Lands Meet Demands.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT

[SPECIAL CABLE TO CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

STOCKHOLM, June 2.—In their sentiment toward the great war, the people of Sweden are preserving an attitude that arouses the observer's admiration, wherever his sympathies may lie. These people are proud and confident and they feel themselves brave and strong in the present crisis.

They believe in their military strength, of which the standing army numbers nearly 400,000 men, with a militia of 300,000, and after sharp and extended observation I am confident their faith is justified.

Leather strong are their well sewed uniforms of prison gray color. When a government does not skimp in these matters it is certain it has not skimped on guns, horses, or transport, because the first thing on which a government skimps is the men's clothing. Those who have studied the Swedish artillery pronounce it admirable and say that owing to the government's command of a supply of superior steel, there is no danger that this arm of the service will be neglected.

Huskies in the Army.

The human material filling the uniforms commands the greatest respect. Even the palace troops seem to be almost exclusively composed of country lads in the prime of condition, and there is not an anaemic figure among them. They are huskies, with red cheeks, broad shoulders, and a good stride. Their horses are worthy of such men.

More important than the details of their equipment is the spirit of the men, which is a double distillation of the national spirit which combines pride and a strong streak of stubbornness.

"If the Swedes want to do a thing in one way," an American long an observer of Swedish affairs and character said, "all hell can't make them change. There will be no argument about it and no fight, but they simply will continue to do the thing in their own way."

Stop All Sea Shipping.

That is what is happening now. Last evening a Swedish shipper whose operations are extensive said that for days the Swedish government allowed no ships to clear from Gothenburg for England or America. The ship insurance institutions were forbidden to issue any policies.

The purpose of this measure was twofold. The first object was to obtain from England a more liberal export of supplies to Sweden and the second was to influence America to permit the loading of the Swedish ships now lying empty in the American harbors. Such reprisals all along have been Sweden's most efficacious measure for the protection of its interests.

The government also has made the issue of permits for the transfer through Sweden of English goods destined for Russia the basis of the bargain for the delivery of English and American goods to Sweden. When that bargain seemed to be hanging fire, Sweden simply said:

"Very well, this is our country, and we will do what we please with it, and, without reciprocal arrangements, we certainly will not make it a runway for goods consigned to Russia. Let us have some of your stuff or we will not pass your Russian consignments."

Shipments Are Held Up.

Consequently there were periods when the docks and the freight depots on the eastern border of Sweden were piled high with goods awaiting the concessions from England which would win their release. On one occasion, when a coffee famine was threatened, the government held up 100,000 bags of coffee which were consigned by foreign shippers to Russia and made the permission for the releasing of the coffee conditional upon being allowed to buy for Sweden 40,000 of the 100,000 bags. This bargain was made.

On another occasion the government made the issue of permission to an American firm to send 200,000 tons of leather into Russia conditional upon that firm's bringing into Sweden from Finland and selling to Sweden 400 tons of oil cake. The leather was held up for five months until this was done, although it had been shipped from America in care of the British government agents. The leather was worth $500,000.

Conscious of Might.

Something deeper than the consciousness of having the upper hand in the traffic arrangements sustains Sweden in these methods. This is nothing less than the people's faith in their nation's military strength and their confidence in their ability to play the trump card in the game of international politics.

Such views are only hinted, but they none the less fill the national mind. You get the whole story when you hear a broad backed, square chinned, and keen eyed Stockholm business man say:

"Sweden neither wishes nor expects to get into the war, but we will let the powers who think they can restrict the imports to us to a point where it is endangering the nourishment of our people consider what would happen if Sweden put 700,000 men in the German front in Russia, thus permitting the Germans to make bigger concentrations in France."

May Feel Entente Wrath.

Certain diplomatic observers with entente leanings declare that Sweden's policy is shortsighted and say that the country will pay bitterly long before the end of next winter. Norway, on the contrary, they say, will be well treated by the entente and America because of its refusal to trade with Germany—such traffic, after all has been said and done, being the basis of the difficulty between England and Sweden.

To Germany and Russia Sweden is sending no munitions, but it does send steel, iron, wood pulp—for the manufacture of a substitute for gun cotton—automobile tires, and some meats, its plea concerning meats being that the people are compelled to slaughter a number of cattle because of the lack of fodder. The Swedish ships return from Germany laden with coal.

Food Situation Critical.

Despite Sweden's independent attitude, the country's food situation is considered in some quarters to be approaching a desperate stage. One of the larger provision merchants said to an American exporter:

"I have twenty-seven stores in Stockholm and the vicinity, and I cannot fill my shelves. I tell you that Sweden is on the verge of starvation."

The lawns of the Nordiska museum, one of the premier treasure houses of the world, have been planted to potatoes, and certain of the crown lands have been parceled to the population and policed free by the government.

To the traveler the proofs of the serious food situation are the prices which he pays and the complaints of the hotel and pension keepers of the difficulty in filling their storerooms.

Unrest Is Everywhere.

Everywhere there is a mutter of discontent and there is apprehension and a growing conviction that not political confusion nor military disasters, but the problem of food will be the source of uprisings which many fear the winter will bring throughout Europe.

Even cautious and well ordered Switzerland is beginning to hear such protests. A publicist named Graber was arrested for inflammatory writings, but he was promptly released in consequence of the threatening demonstrations by 6,000 workmen, who forced open the prison doors.

The 200 soldiers of the prison guard made no resistance. The Swiss publicists here regard this as significant partly because the military is so beloved in Switzerland that a demonstration against it is unprecedented and partly because the military is so well disciplined that its acquiescence in mob violence would have seemed incredible a few months ago.

Increase War Profit Taxes.

CHRISTIANIA, June 2, via London.—Parliament has decided to increase the tax on war profits to 30 per cent. Socialist deputies declared that unless more effective steps were taken to counteract the rise in prices a revolution would occur.

U. S. CAN'T RAISE GRAIN ENOUGH TO FEED THE ALLIES

But Hoover Says Major Load Will Be Ours—Urges Economy.

Washington, D. C., June 2.—The grain requirements of the allies and the European neutrals were put at 971,000,000 bushels, a total much greater than the United States can supply, in a statement by Herbert C. Hoover today listing the minimum needs of each nation for human consumption and for feed.

The amounts have been presented to Mr. Hoover by the foreign governments as follows:

	Bread grains, bu.	Fodder grains, bu.
United Kingdom	225,000,000	170,000,000
France	175,000,000	70,000,000
Italy	90,000,000	60,000,000
Belgium & Portugal	50,000,000	None
European neutrals and ex-European neutrals	15,000,000	116,000,000
Totals	555,000,000	416,000,000

Shows Need of Control.

"It will, of course, be impossible," said Mr. Hoover, "for North America to furnish all of this quantity, although the major load must fall on us. In any event it emphasizes the necessity for control of exports in order to control prices and protect our supply and the necessity for conservation and elimination of waste in order to increase the volume of our exports."

Mr. Hoover believes the United States and Canada can export this year at least 600,000,000 bushels of grain. If the winter wheat crop improves and the spring crop is larger than normal he believes this may be increased to 800,000,000. Shipment of that much grain, much of it wheat, however, will force American consumers to eat less wheat than usual and eat more of other cereals.

As to Allied Purchases.

Coördination of allied food purchases will be established as soon as the food bills and the export limitations act become laws. At present the allies and neutral countries are purchasing in large quantities for future delivery. There is no guarantee that all these deliveries will be made, as this government may hold up contracts to assure of an adequate food supply at home. The food administration, as soon as it is created, will begin to pass on these purchases to protect American consumers.

Mr. Hoover denied a report today that the food administration will buy the country's grain crop for distribution. There is no intention, he said, of going into the grain business.

Says America Overeats.

On the heels of his appeal to the housewives of the country for food economy, Mr. Hoover today gave his views on eating in the United States. Here are some of his conclusions:

Every one in the country eats more than is necessary.

Practically every household wastes foodstuffs.

Women control 90 per cent of the food consumption and should introduce a spirit of sacrifice for the good of the country.

Women should learn the fundamentals of dietetics.

Hotel waste is one of the worst in the country.

The "fourth meal"—the late supper—is one of the worst extravagances in the country.

MOTHER PRAYS BY DYING SON SHOT AS THIEF

Doctors in Henrotin hospital have given up hope of the recovery of Kenneth Conway of 2027 West Van Buren street, the 19 year old auto bandit who was shot Friday night by police. Mr. and Mrs. Conway and the boy's young sister, Irene, prayed Saturday at the dying boy's bedside.

"To my knowledge," said Mr. Conway, "the boy had no bad associates. He had always been an obedient son and he must have fallen in with these boys recently. No one was more surprised than his own family when detectives arrived at the house, bringing news of our boy's shooting."

Neighbors of the Conways told of seeing the lad in sailor suits on the street on the day before and how proud his associates and former schoolmates in the old Scammon Grammar school had been of him.

The police have been endeavoring to discover the other occupants of the bandit auto, but the boy has disclosed nothing except the single name "Hogan."

Decrees Brazil Shall Use 46 Interned German Ships

RIO JANEIRO, June 2.—President Braz today signed a decree providing for the utilization by Brazil of the forty-six German ships in Brazilian ports. It is believed the decree will be put into effect today.

1,500 RECRUITS ILL IN NORFOLK NAVAL HOSPITAL

Norfolk, Va., June 2.—[Special.]—More than 1,500 men are being treated at the naval hospital at this port for various diseases and ailments, according to information given out by government officials today.

A number of men have measles and mumps and some are reported to be suffering with meningitis. The majority of cases are those of young naval recruits who have entered the service since the declaration of war against Germany.

To make room for additional patients new buildings will be added to the hospital immediately. The government has rented sixty beds in a Norfolk hospital also.

Wound Fatal to Guardsman.

Easton, Pa., June 2.—Edward Kensicki, aged 19, of Jersey City, a member of the Fourth regiment, New Jersey infantry, died in a hospital here today from a wound received at Changewater, N. J., last night, when a rifle held by another guardsman was accidentally discharged.

Stop Corn Pain In Two Minutes By the Clock—Easy and Simple

The Magic of Ice-Mint Does It. Soreness Stops Quickly and Gradually the Corn Loosens and Comes Out. Try It. Your Feet Will Feel Cool and Fine.

Thanks to a new discovery made from a Japanese product, your foot troubles can be quickly ended.

Ice-Mint, as this new preparation is called, is said to shrivel up hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes so that they can be lifted out easily with the fingers.

Rub a little on any tender corn or callous. Instantly the soreness is relieved and shortly the corn or callous will loosen so that it can be lifted right out with the fingers—root and all. No foolishness.

Ice-Mint is a clean, creamy, snow-white, non-poisonous substance and does not inflame or even irritate the most tender skin. There is no pain, smarting, or even a bit of soreness while applying Ice-Mint or afterwards. It acts so gently, so magically that you will never want to run the risk of blood poisoning by cutting a corn again.

Ask your druggist for a small jar of Ice-Mint which will cost little yet is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callous. You'll like it immensely.—Advertisement.

FREEZONE is the magical drug recently discovered by a Cincinnati chemist, which instantly stops pain and soreness in corns. You apply a few drops on a tender corn or hardened callus, then like magic the corn or callus shrinks up and gets so loose that you simply lift it off with the fingers.

You feel no pain. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes just lift off and it doesn't hurt one bit.

New Loan Plan Secures Farm Home at Fruitvale

The Garden Spot of Michigan

Practically No Capital Required By Those Who Make Reservations Now

"Come to beautiful Fruitvale" is the invitation which we Fruitvalers, who are already enjoying the prosperity of our fertile chicken and cherry farms, send to you.

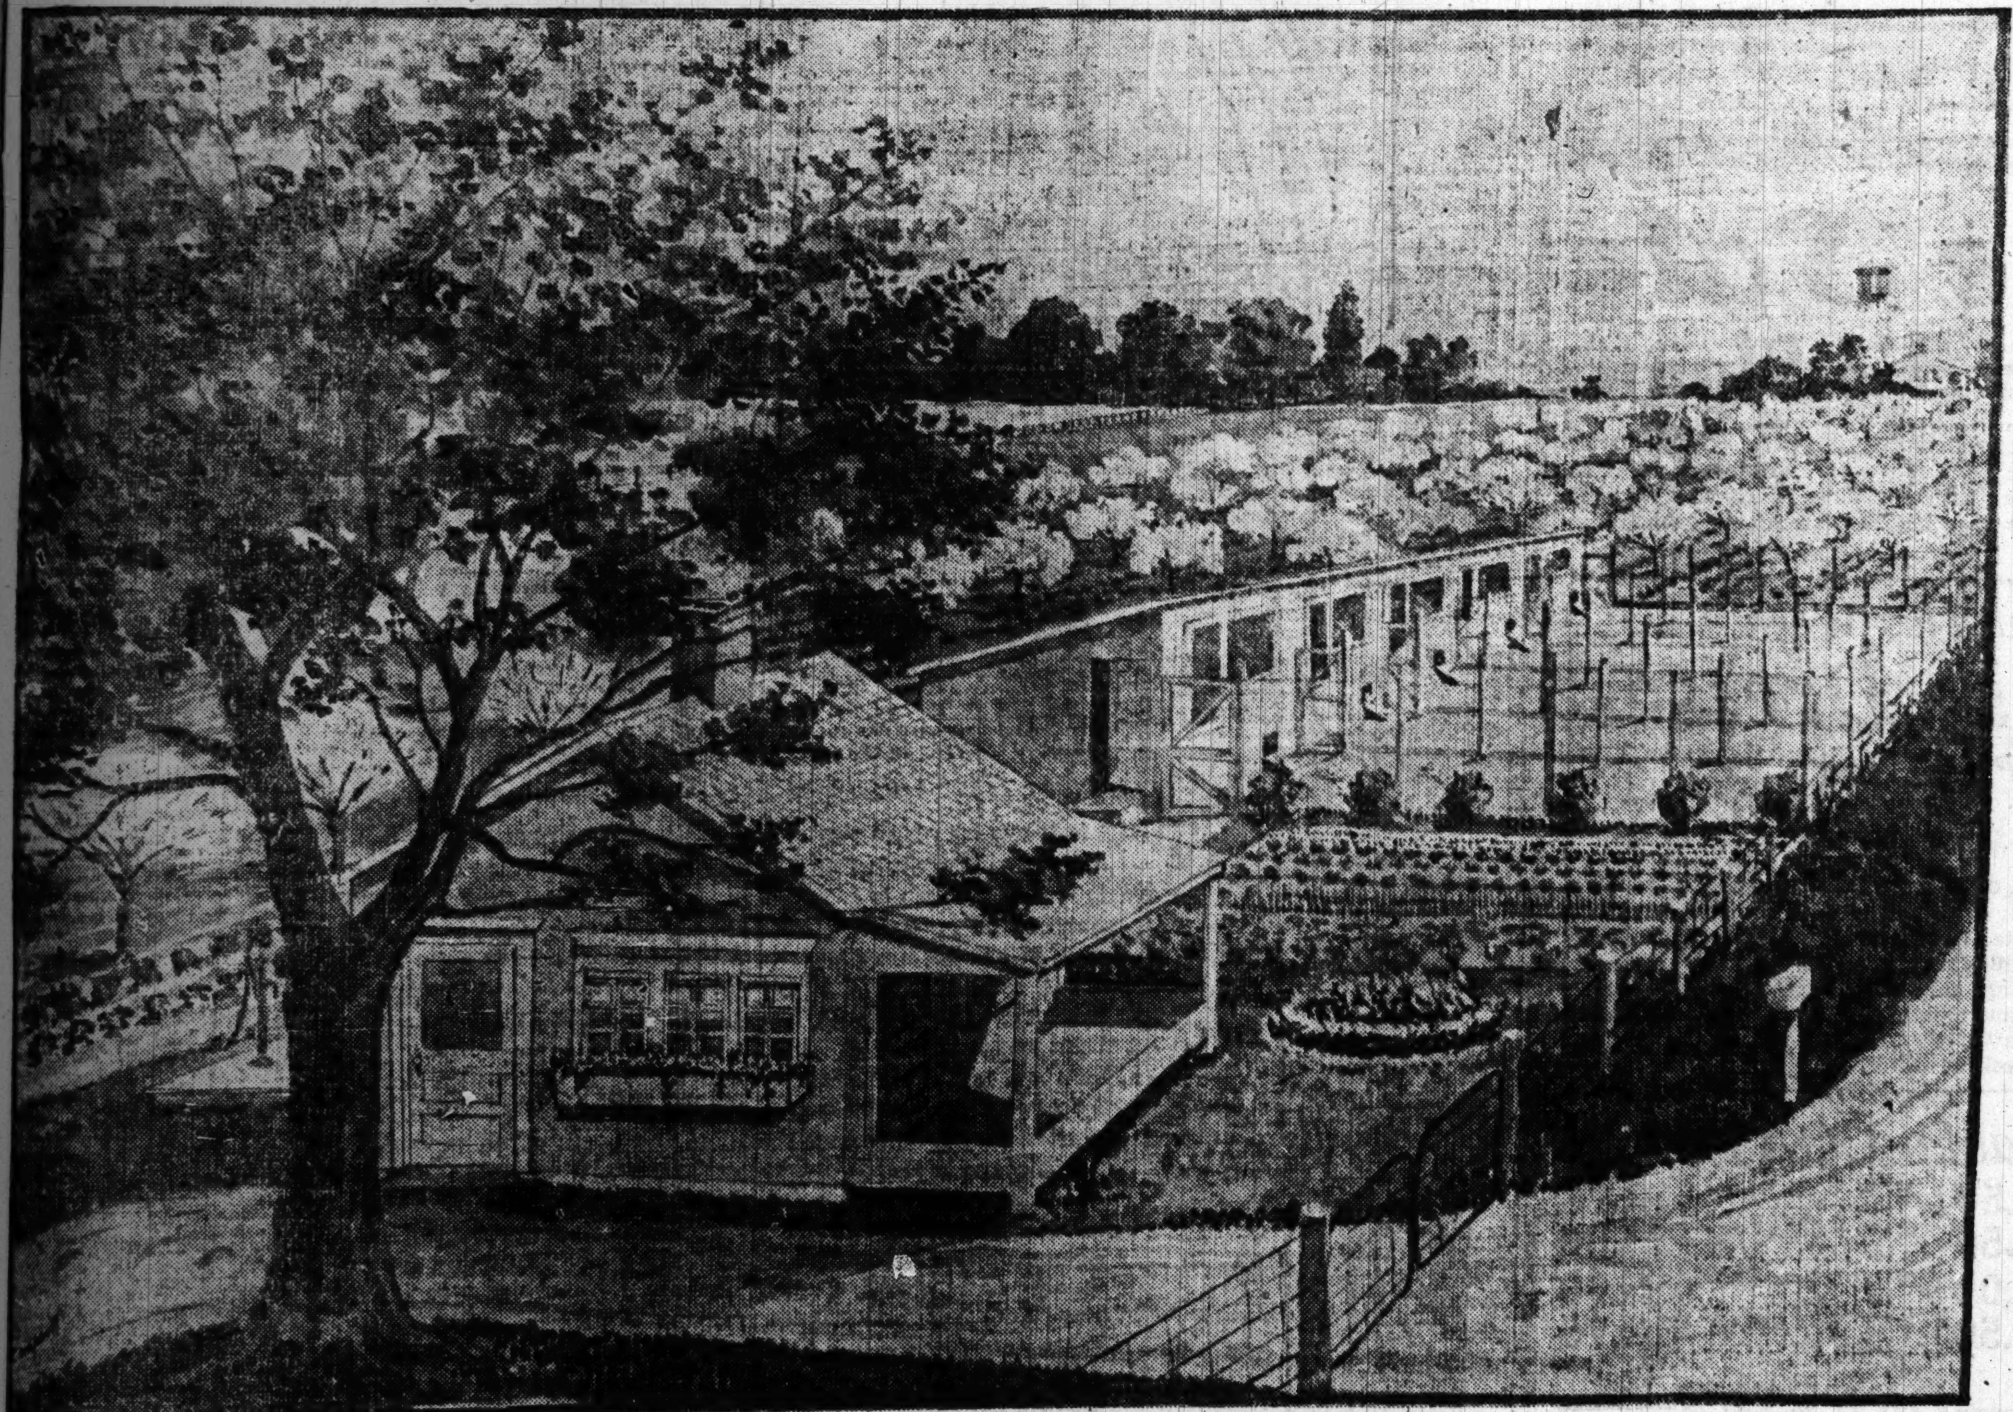
Here is opportunity—waiting for you to grasp it. Here is your chance to bid good-bye to the crushing, wearing life of office, store or factory and to live in the big out-of-doors—the chance to be a land owner—a member of a happy, prosperous community, surrounded by friendly people—your future safeguarded against adversity—and all the profits of your work your own.

We want to tell you about this truly wonderful farm home settlement. We want to show you how the great Fruitvale Co. will put you onto one of these splendid little farms complete with buildings and stock.

Even if you have as little as $100, or $50, or $25, you can become a Fruitvale proprietor, earning a comfortable living and a handsome surplus in addition. Let us also tell you about the remarkable loan plan, which will place you in possession of one of these richly producing farms.

We are ready to give you the information about all this. We want thrifty, wholesome people to settle here with us. We want to see every Fruitvale Farm Home occupied. Hundreds who saw our last announcement are investigating and making reservations. We will gladly show you as we are showing them, how you, through the co-operation of the Fruitvale Co., can step onto a farm ready to be put into operation.

Mail the coupon below or call at our Chicago office and get all this information before the best of the Fruitvale Farm Homes are taken.



A Typical Fruitvale Chicken and Cherry Farm—You Can Own One Like This

Everything Complete

The Farm—The Buildings—Seed—Chickens—Trees

As a Fruitvaler you will come not as a pioneer to break the land and to put up your buildings. You will step into a home and poultry garden complete—new—ready to live in—even down to firewood. Never before has the community idea been worked out like this. Never before such a chance for the man of small means to enjoy independence at once.

Let us tell you how a great organization with over $100,000 invested in buildings and ground alone, over $161,000 surplus, and $200,000 paid up capital guarantees you a deed in fee simple to 5 acres of land. A dwelling house. A modern chicken house for 350 hens—with trap nests and all necessary equipment (wirenetting, drinking fountains, brooder stoves, etc). Also 750 baby chicks of a fancy breed (all you need for first year). Feed to carry the chicks until they begin to lay. And besides all that—necessary outhouses, a well for drinking water, wood for your stove, and seed for your kitchen garden. Also the Famous Montmorency cherries and other cash producing fruits for 4 acres of your orchard. Let us tell you also about the big community incubator available to you as a member of the Fruitvalers. We will tell you all about this—in every detail—if you ask. Just sign and mail the coupon or call at our Chicago office any day you can come.

Your Market at Your Door

Get information also on how you can sell all you raise—right from the farm—at your very door. No shipping to look after—no losses in transportation—no bother of any kind. Products sold at a big profit right on the spot. This is also a great plan in actual operation—a plan which brings you the money from your farm the very day you offer your eggs, your fruit, your vegetables—or anything else you produce. You will be interested in reading about this new way to merchandise farm products—cutting out waste and securing the highest prices.

The Fruitvale Company now has contracts with clubs, hospitals, and big distributors in Chicago to take the products of Fruitvale farms. Last year every Fruitvale egg was sold the day it was laid—and these eggs brought as high as 70 cents a dozen in Chicago. There is always a paying demand for Fruitvale farm products.

Big Profit in Fruitvale Cherries

The big hotels and restaurant companies in the cities are in constant need of the cherries which grow so profusely in the Fruitvale region. Every cherry tree you plant on your Fruitvale Farm will be a profit payer. Then you have your vegetable garden, as well as your chickens and cherries—and to crown all—independence and the zest of life in the wonderful out-of-doors—with the satisfaction that comes from making more money.

Reserve Your Farm Home Now!

There is a limit to the number of these Fruitvale Farm Homes now available. The best will surely be taken this year, for among the thousands who read this message, there will be more than enough people who will see the opportunity and grasp it. Already reservations are being made.

Therefore, get the information now—if you want to realize your life's ambition to own your own farm home and to know that your future is safe against failures, panics, caprices of employers, or any of those other conditions which surround the life of the city man.

We invite you to Fruitvale.

Read What Fruitvalers Say!

Farming wasn't anything new to us when we cast our lot among the colony of Fruitvalers. Big fields of corn, oats, wheat, barley, rye and grass—horses, cattle, hogs and sheep—year after year grind of plowing, planting, sowing, cultivating, reaping, stock feeding and crop selling—such were our preconceived notions of farming. What a relief to find conditions so vastly different at Fruitvale! "On the farm" it was work, work, work day in and day out. And here—why it's almost a year-round picnic compared to what we were accustomed to. We always considered chickens as a sort of side issue. They were handy to have around, to eat scraps and furnish eggs to trade at the grocery for flour and sugar. Here our chickens are one of our chief sources of income. And what with our chickens, fruit and vegetables we are actually making more clear money on our ten acres than we did on our big farm.

MR. AND MRS. SIMON GEORGE, R. No. 4, Fruitvale, Montague Co., Mich.

It has been my observation that in most sections where fruit growing is a recognized industry, large acreage and a great deal of help are primary essentials for success. Much to my surprise, I found that just the opposite is true here at Fruitvale. Here a 10-acre tract will yield as large a net profit as ten times that large a tract will yield in many so-called fruit belts. For here quality is the key-note of success. And the wonderful fertility of the soil, together with the steady demand in nearby markets for quality products, insures success.

MR. AND MRS. CHAS. HURRELL, R. No. 4, Fruitvale, Montague Co., Michigan.

We can truthfully say that we have never really enjoyed life so much as since coming to Fruitvale and joining the happy, prosperous colony of chicken and fruit raisers here. Our ten-acre tract of land is productive beyond our highest expectations, and, since the selling arrangements are all looked after by The Fruitvale Company, we always make a good profit on our products. And thanks, too, to the sound advice and able assistance of the company's poultry expert, we have had wonderful success with our chickens. We're mighty glad we came—and here we intend to stay.

D. R. TONEY, R. No. 4, Fruitvale, Montague Co., Michigan.

19 CLASSROOMS PLANNED FOR USE OF WAR STUDENTS

Three Face Discharge for Claiming Exemption from Service.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Fort Sheridan, Ill., June 2.—More real pleasure was expressed because of one whispered report today among the men in the frame barracks of the reserve officers' training camp than has marked the receipt of any formal announcement.

The candidates for commissions quartered in the cantonment heard a well authenticated rumor that "headquarters" is planning to bring about the construction of a classroom building for each company whose structures now include two dormitories, a lavatory, and a mess hall. Nineteen of the companies are housed in this way and they feel that the classrooms would be of great benefit.

Study in Mess Hall.

For three weeks the students have been spending their two hours' evening study period on the plank seats which are a part of the mess hall tables. Most of their conferences, covering at least another two hours a day, have been held in one of their bunkhouses, where many of them were compelled to stand and where none had a better place to take notes or write answers to questions than upon his knee or his neighbor's shoulder.

The decision to recommend the construction of the nineteen new buildings necessary was partly a result of the registration of 224 new men summoned to fill the complement of 5,000 men for which the camp was planned. The arrival of those assigned to the companies in temporary barracks filled the aisles with cots.

Critics of the crowding in the camp resulting from the arrival of the new men are told that this will be at least partly remedied by the continuation of the weeding out process, which today took a sensational turn.

One company instructor, who asked that his name and the names of the men involved be withheld, discovered by inspecting the conscription registration cards of his students that three claimed exemption. One cited the dependence of his wife. Another pleaded he would be more valuable at home than in the trenches of France. A third said his eyes were bad. The captain called the men before him.

Will Urge Discharge.

"You are willing to go in as officers," he said, "but you are trying to evade being called to serve in the ranks. You are not the kind of men the United States wants as its officers. I shall recommend your discharge from the camp at once."

A board of three—two captain instructors and a surgeon—will consider the recommendation and also other recommendations and applications for discharge.

There was more rain today. An informal announcement was made that Col. W. J. Nicholson, the commandant, has made arrangements for paving the company streets with crushed stone.

And one more bit of news that almost brought a cheer whenever it spread was the fact that the First Illinois infantry band—now in federal service—will report here Monday for active duty. The camp has had no band up to this time.

Visitors are permitted all day tomorrow.

Prince von Buelow Returns.

LUGANO, Switzerland, via Paris, June 2.—The Gazette announces that Prince von Buelow, who has been spending a few days at Lucerne, has arrived at Lugano.

STATE TROOPS, 100,000 STRONG, GOING ABROAD

War Department Plan Is to Send Big Force to Help Pershing.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 2.—[Special.]—The general staff of the army had under consideration today a plan to send 100,000 national guard troops to France.

It was authoritatively announced that the national guard will form the next big expeditionary army after Pershing's 25,000 joins the British and French armies in the field.

While the makeup of the first national guard expeditionary force was not divulged, it was indicated the divisions of the New York and Pennsylvania guard and the two brigades of the Illinois and Ohio guard, the largest individual units in the United States, will form the nucleus for the national guard divisions sent abroad.

No Policy Laid Down.

"The only announcement the war department is prepared to make is that troops are going abroad," Secretary Baker said today. "No policy will be laid down in advance.

"The national guard has been advised that it will be called out in three increments, the first July 15. When these men are called out and drafted into the federal service they will be available for service abroad."

Secretary Baker said the guard when called would be sent to state mobilization camps for the purpose of permitting the organizations to fill their ranks to war strength by recruiting at home. The national guard organizations then will be sent to concentration camps in the south and southeast, largely in Gen. Wood's southeastern department, for intensive training.

Plans of War Department.

The present plans of the war department for sending troops abroad are:

First—Gen. Pershing's division of infantry, supplemented by a regiment of marines, 25,000 to 28,000 men in all, is now under orders to sail at the earliest possible moment. Nine regiments of engineers are nearly organized to form another expedition for work back of the line.

Second—Four or five divisions of the national guard will form the second big expedition. There are now about seven divisions, or enough men to form seven divisions. New York and Pennsylvania have practically complete divisions. Illinois and Ohio are short one infanrty brigade each and other accompanying units comprising a division.

Third—By the time these regulars and guardsmen are in France the national army of 500,000 will be in training to form sixteen divisions, the remainder of the national guard will be in process of expansion to sixteen full divisions, and the regular army will be expanded into sixteen full divisions. From these forces the third big expeditionary army will be drawn.

In Battle This Summer.

Plans have matured sufficiently to insure that Gen. Pershing's division, which will need only a little training behind the trenches, will be in the fighting before the summer is over.

The first expeditionary force from the new national army, it is figured, should be in the trenches to join in the next spring offensive.

It is planned, after putting the national guard forces through a hardening process, to send them either to the cantonment camps of England for training or to billet them to French villages.

Either plan would solve the question of the shortage of tentage, which is one of the serious problems arising from the forthcoming mobilization.

Wilmette Guards Financed by Certificate Scheme

The Wilmette guards are now being financed by the certificate plan. Certificates are being circulated on which citizens are asked to set down the amount they are willing to subscribe in twelve installments. The guards were organized in April to conserve the financial and material resources of the town, to aid relief organizations, and to care for soldiers who enlist from the town and the families they leave behind.

JANITOR ROW SHUTS OFF MILK IN MAYOR'S FLAT

Just because a union carpenter will not do as a union janitor the tenants of the Chase apartments at 3200 Sheridan road, in which is the residence of Mayor Thompson, had to go without milk yesterday morning.

The trouble started when a union janitor was fired two days ago and a new one, the union carpenter, was taken on. The new man got more than the union rate of wages for janitors and the janitor across the street at 421 Belmont avenue became jealous.

The union intervened and the result was that the union milk drivers refused to deliver milk to the tenants of the building yesterday, according to the statement of one of the residents of the house.

None of the nonunion drivers were affected by the "strike."

Neither the janitor of the Chase apartments nor his rival across the street could be reached last night.

C. J. Harrity, the officer on guard at the mayor's residence, said:

"It was only a little squabble between the new janitor and the one across the street. Everything was running fine after 7:30. There were no pickets and no violence."

Among the tenants of the building are Edwin Brach, B. Hindmann, C. Hopkins, Walter Hoops, Dr. F. Kreisel, C. B. Shaffer, Edwin M. Allen, Quin O'Brien, Samuel Thompson Chase, owner of the apartments, A. J. Vyse, A. R. Small, M. Lehman, and Carroll Ridgeway.

Col. Biddle Going to France.

Washington, D. C., June 2.—Col. John Biddle, superintendent of the military academy at West Point, has been relieved, and assigned to command the new Sixth regiment of engineers now being organized in this city for service in France.

PAIGE

The Most Beautiful Car in America

THIS is the year of all years when it will pay you to place an order for your Paige, just as early as possible.

In the first place, there is every indication that the "sold out" condition of last year will be repeated.

Thousands of people have been watching the performance of this great car—studying the experience of owners—convincing themselves that Paige is actually first choice in the field of light sixes.

Then, too, you will undoubtedly be obliged to pay more for your Paige if you wait too long.

It is a matter of public knowledge that the costs of all manufacturing materials and labor have increased tremendously during the past year—and quotations are still climbing.

We have, of course, protected ourselves by early purchase. But our present supplies cannot last indefinitely and, in the face of a steadily advancing market, we shall be obliged to increase list prices proportionately.

So—for your own protection—now is the time to act. Don't wait until it is too late. Don't place yourself in a position where it will be necessary to compromise on a "second best."

See the Paige dealer to-day.

INVENTION BOARD NAMED TO PASS ON IDEAS HERE

All Will Be Considered by Body Allied with Defense Council.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

Capt. W. Strother Smith, U. S. N., who is attached to the office of Secretary of the Navy Daniels as an expert on inventions, will be in Chicago tomorrow morning.

During the day he will visit the Great Lakes Naval Training station as the guest of Bion J. Arnold, who is the midwestern member of the national board of inventions.

In the evening he will be the guest of honor at a dinner given by members of the newly appointed local board of inventions, announced yesterday by Samuel Insull, chairman of the state council of national defense. Capt. Moffett, commandant of the Great Lakes Naval Training station, and Maj. Gen. Barry of the central department of the army will also be present.

Invention Board Named.

There is no doubt that Kaiser Wilhelm would be glad to get a verbatim account of the informal talks which will be a feature of the dinner, though it is certain he would not be pleased by what he read.

Adopting the suggestion of THE TRIBUNE—which was indorsed by the board of inventions for the army and navy and the council of national defense in Washington—the Illinois council of national defense yesterday appointed a committee of five members who are to pass on devices submitted by mid-western inventors before they are sent on for final judgment in Washington.

The members of the committee, all of whom but one are members of the naval consulting board, are as follows:

J. K. COPELAND, vice president of the Sullivan Machinery company.

CAPT. ROBERT W. HUNT of the Robert W. Hunt company.

WILLIAM HOSKINS, consulting chemist.

PETER JUNKERSFELD, vice president Commonwealth Edison company.

BION J. ARNOLD, member of the board of inventions.

To Have Offices Here.

As will be noticed, Mr. Arnold is the connecting link between the inventors of the middle west and the national board, to which all inventions are finally to be referred.

Beginning early next week the committee will have headquarters in the building at 120 West Adams street, which is furnished free of rental to the state council by Samuel Insull, its chairman. A technical secretary will be always on duty, to whom inventors are invited to explain their plans and who will later submit them for judgment to the full membership of the committee.

Middle-western inventors may be assured, in the first place, that they will be given an opportunity to explain fully their plans to men who are competent to understand them.

If, as is likely to be the case with a majority of the plans submitted, the idea has already been approved by the board of inventions or has been passed on and declared impracticable, they will be told the truth.

All Schemes Passed On.

The whole scheme is to make coöperation between the national board of inventions and the committee appointed by the state council of national defense as close and intimate as possible. Every suggestion, no matter how crude, which contains any promise and which has not already been submitted, will be carefully considered and referred to the national body for final decision.

Working in close connection with the state council is the Chicago committee, of which Harrison B. Riley is chairman. The various local organizations of engineers have volunteered their services and are already at work testing suggestions which have been presented to them for consideration. The plans which they approve will be presented to the committee of the state council and will filter on down to Washington, unless sooner blocked by an adverse decision.

The important point to remember is that a channel has been created through which any idea, no matter how crude, may be passed on until it is judged by the final authority created by the national government at Washington.

CROWN TO NAME 15 OF 107 MEN TO IRISH SESSION

LONDON, June 2.—The Daily Chronicle's parliamentary correspondent says it has been definitely settled that the forthcoming Irish convention will consist of 107 members, of whom fifteen will be nominated by the crown.

It is expected thus to allow every county council in Ireland to have its own delegate.

There will be very few members of parliament in the convention. The Sinn Feiners will be represented.

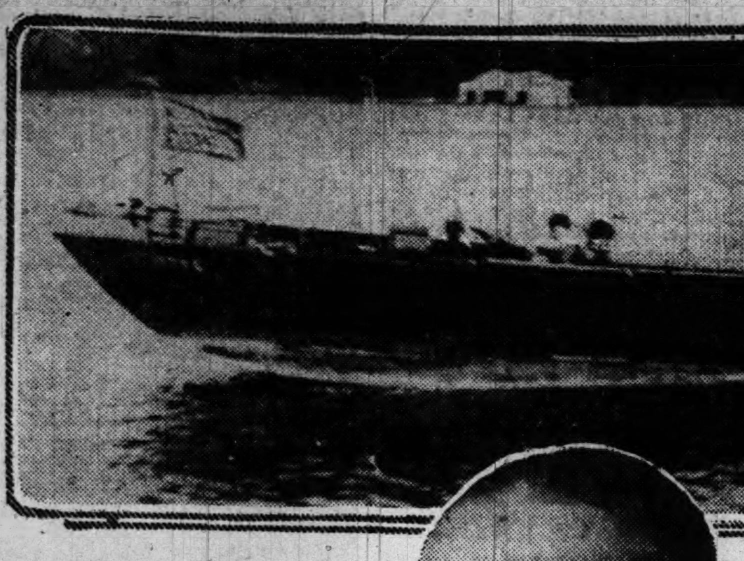
Speedy Power Boat of Novel Type Donated by Chicagoan for Use as Coast Guard Lifeboat for Wrecked Airplanes.



Frederick H. Rawson

Frederick H. Rawson, president of the Union Trust company, has donated to the government a fast launch, built to skim the water at high speed, which will be used at the City Point coast guard station, Boston.

The boat can turn in its own length while traveling at high speed, and is expected to be of great value for rescue work for airplanes meeting with accident.

The navy department has accepted the gift.

Bluejacket to Be Buried with Military Honors

Military services will prevail in the burial this afternoon of Raymond Bonham, the bluejacket who died in the Puget Sound naval rendezvous, and whose body reached Chicago yesterday. The funeral will take place in Rosehill where friends are expected to gather at 3 o'clock. A detachment of thirty-two jackies from the Great Lakes station will attend.

MORE OFFICERS WILL BE TRAINED IN OTHER CAMPS

Second Series Will Open on Aug. 27—Omit Ft. Sheridan.

Washington, D. C., June 2.—[Special.]—Fort Sheridan has been eliminated by the war department in the selection of sites for a second series of officers' training camps, announced today by Adj. Gen. H. P. McCain.

The new camps will open Aug. 27. They are designed to produce a body of line officers capable of filling all places in the grades above lieutenants for the first increment of the new national army, and many of the places in the lieutenant grades for the second 500,000, when called into the new army.

Illinois recruits to the second camps, it was announced, will train at Fort Leon Spring, Tex., and the camps will run until Nov. 26.

Because of the grade of officers desired the war department announces that it will be difficult for men under 31 years of age to qualify for these camps.

Forts Myer, Va.; McPherson, Ga.; Oglethorpe, Ga.; Benjamin Harrison, Ind.; Logan Rools, Ark.; Riley, Kas., and the Presidio, Cal., will be the other camps.

Linda Vista, Cal., and Columbia, S. C., have been selected as sites for cantonments in which forces of the war army will be trained. The designations bring the number of sites determined upon up to six. Ten remain to be chosen.

BAKER TO KEEP SENIORITY RULE IN WAR ARMY?

Washington, D. C., June 2.—[Special.]—Secretary of War Baker was said today to have determined upon the appointment of general officers of the line for the regular army in war time upon the basis prescribed for such appointments in peace time by the army act.

The information, obtained from allied military officers detailed to duty temporarily in Washington, has created considerable comment in military circles owing to the belief that the United States would benefit from the experience of the British and French armies, which are now selecting their general officers from younger men in the service rather than being controlled in such appointments by tradition and seniority.

There was a belief in some quarters that Secretary of War Baker had been misinformed concerning the spirit of the act and convinced that it contemplated the establishment of a rule for his guidance under the extraordinary conditions of war, as well as for the normal times of peace.

It is not believed, however, that the seniority principle would long survive in any branch of the national military service which is called upon for actual fighting.

JAPS OFFER TO HELP RESTORE MEXICO, REPORT

Washington, D. C., June 2.—[Special.]—It was stated in an official quarter today that Japanese capitalists are negotiating with Mexico with a view of assisting in the industrial and commercial reconstruction of that country and that Mexico is favorably inclined towards the proferred assistance to her financial rehabilitation.

Japanese banks, it was said, believe Mexico presents a field for legitimate investment as promising as any visible in the financial world.

REO

This Reo Safety Lock Is Absolutely "Thief Proof"

INNUMERABLE ATTEMPTS—thousands of inventions—have been made with the hope of rendering automobiles "thief proof."

DO YOU KNOW OF ONE that is really effective?

EXCEPTING THIS REO LOCK, we know of none that will thwart the ingenuity of the automobile thief.

ALL ATTEMPTS to solve the problem by devices that lock the ignition system have proven futile. Anyone with even the slightest knowledge of electricity can circumvent them.

THIS IS TRUE ALSO of all external devices and attachments for locking the gears in neutral position. Remove or break the attachment and the car is at the mercy of the thief.

ANY MECHANIC CAN do it easily—a file or a cold chisel—or a simple wrecking bar that costs a quarter!

THE ONLY WAY to lock a car so that it will be impossible to steal it, is to build that device right into the car. Make it an integral part of the mechanism.

THAT IS THE REO WAY—the device shown is so designed that when the starter-lever is depressed half way (which you must do to insert the padlock) the gear-shift lever is locked in neutral position and at the same time the starting mechanism is made inoperative.

AND THEN, to make assurance doubly—triply—sure, the padlock is so placed that it securely locks the floor boards in position, so that it is impossible to get at the parts underneath.

HERE'S A LOCK THAT DOES lock your car—securely—absolutely

PROOF? ASK THE POLICE Department of any city to tell you, from the records, the percentage of Reos in proportion to other cars that are stolen.

THEY'LL TELL YOU that the number of Reos stolen are less in proportion to the number registered in each city, than of any other make.

WE KNOW, BECAUSE the Reo Folk have just completed a "survey" of the principal cities. The results were astonishing—and most gratifying.

IF EVERY REO OWNER would pause fifteen seconds to lock his car every time he left it, there'd never be a Reo stolen.

IT'S IMPOSSIBLE THAT'S ALL. The automobile thief knows it, and tho he also knows that Reos are the simplest cars in the world to drive, he gives them a wide berth when a glance shows the owner has utilized his Reo "Thief Proof" locking device.

THIS IS ONLY ONE of a great many Reo features that commend themselves to the discriminating buyer.

DEMAND FOR REOS—from our Best Citizens—is tremendous. For that greatest of all "Fours," Reo the Fifth, the demand is especially heavy.

AT ITS PRESENT PRICE $875, it is the greatest buy in the market—unquestionably, and that's the secret of course.

SO ONLY WAY to get one soon, and at the present price, is—to order now.

Value

in the Scripps-Booth means full money's worth.

It means dollar-for-dollar in rugged-service-rendered.

It means power-value and performance-value—a strong, staunch chassis, built to do its duty, day-in-day-out.

Scripps-Booth value means even more.

It means an added something which money cannot ordinarily buy in motor cars.

That "something," in a man or woman, would be called personality. In the Scripps-Booth it is the unmistakable stamp of superiority. To the physical joys of perfect motoring there is added a pride of possession which money cannot measure.

RED CROSS DRIVE ENDS; ESTIMATE 350,000 TOTAL

Hope for 500,000 Membership as the Unions Take Up Work.

The Red Cross membership campaign closed officially last night, but the offices in the Monroe building will be open for another week to receive belated returns. Just how near the 500,000 mark, the aim of the campaign, was reached, the leaders were unable to say. Reports have not been checked up, and it is believed the returns this week will be heavy.

Unofficial estimates have placed the total figure at approximately 350,000. It is believed, however, that 150,000 may be added during the week through the efforts of the school children, the political workers, and the labor unions. Hope was expressed in campaign headquarters that the labor unions alone would add 100,000 names.

Unions Give Support.

Charles H. Wacker, chairman of the citizens' committee, had a conference with John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, who announced that organized labor is uniting behind the Red Cross movement. The matter will be brought up at the federation meeting this afternoon.

The Chicago Building Trades council already has taken up the question. According to an announcement by Simon O'Donnell, president of the council, its memberships will run into the thousands. The aim of the organization is 80,000 memberships. Mr. O'Donnell said that the electrical workers voted unanimously to raise 3,400 annual members and that the plumbers have taken similar action.

Sears-Roebuck Takes Lead.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. went to the lead yesterday in the number of enrollments from any single firm when it reported 16,379 memberships, approximately 1,000 more than the International Harvester company, its nearest competitor. The memberships were presented to the employés by the firm. Employés anxious to do their own part in the Red Cross movement were permitted to add $1 or more and accept the higher forms of membership.

Garden Bureau Decides to Sell Seeds at Cut Rates

The Garden bureau in the Conway building will not close for some time, according to a statement made yesterday by G. E. Stayner of the agricultural department of the International Harvester company, who is in charge of the office. He said: "We have about $3,500 worth of seeds here and will dispose of them at three packages for 5 cents. This will enable the people of the poorer classes to plant them now and will grow enough green stuff to last them six weeks."

The Chicago Association of Commerce has withdrawn from the bureau and the stock is all owned by the International Harvester company. They have donated about $30,000 toward the venture and have given the free use of nine tractors and garden experts, who have plowed up many acres of ground for the use of the people.

Jury Leaves Blame for Fatal Car Wreck in Doubt

A coroner's jury at Blue Island yesterday returned an open verdict on the death of Stanley Manson of 597 Wentworth avenue, Blue Island, who was killed when a Chicago and Interurban Traction car turned over at Harvey last March, killing and injuring a number of people. James F. Kearney of 9367 Burnside avenue, the motorman on the car, through his attorney, C. C. Crosious, has started suit against the company for $30,000, claiming that he is injured for life. He says he had notified the officials of the company that the brakes of the car were in bad condition.

SIX CONVICTED OF DYNAMITING EDISON WORKS

Six members of local No. 9 of the Electrical Workers' union were found guilty yesterday of charges of conspiracy to blow up property of the Edison Commonwealth company. The verdict was reached after an all night debate by a jury in Judge Pam's court, where the case has been on trial for weeks.

James F. Sullivan was the only defendant to be acquitted. The others who were found guilty and their penalties are:

Alphonse Shangraw, one year.
Edward Domke, one year.
Charles Maves, three years.
Michael Kuchinski, three years.
John C. Campbell, two years.
Arthur W. Robertson, four years.

Robertson, who is assistant business agent of the local, was given the maximum sentence.

Licenses of 2 Saloons Revoked by Thompson

Mayor Thompson yesterday revoked the saloon licenses of W. H. Gentry, 316 East Thirty-first street, and Barbara Gilason, 2004 Canalport avenue. The police reported that Gentry failed to obey the 1 o'clock closing law and cursed them when they made him observe it. The license of the Gilason woman was revoked because the place was frequented by women of questionable character, according to Capt. William F. Russell of the Maxwell street station.

MRS. RUEPING WINS DIVORCE ON CRUELTY CHARGE

Mrs. Maude Madson Rueping of 4301 Lincoln avenue won her divorce suit against Robert Rueping, diamond broker at 29 West Madison street, yesterday on a cruelty charge whn a jury in Judge Smith's court returned a verdict finding her husband guilty of extreme cruelty and her not guilty of maliciously shooting her husband.

Rueping, who is 52 years old, married Mrs. Rueping, now 24 years of age, in November, 1912. The difference in their ages and his constant interference with her in the kitchen, among many other things, the evidence showed, led Mrs. Rueping to file suit for separate maintenance in January, 1914. A quarrel over her husband's opposition of her suit resulted in her shooting her husband twice. That happened last January and Mrs. Rueping has been indicted.

Attorneys for Rueping made a motion for a new trial, which will be heard next week.

ILLINOIS ROADS BILL LIKELY TO PASS THIS WEEK

Provides $60,000,000 Bond Issue for Building on Forty-six Routes.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., June 2.—[Special.]—The Illinois campaign for a system of hard roads is at the verge of accomplishment. The Meents $60,000,000 bonds bill has been agreed to in conference committee, the senate has adopted the report, and favorable action by the house on the same report, anticipated during the coming week, is all that stands in the way of submission to Gov. Lowden of the comprehensive plan that has been worked out. Following executive approval the law goes to a statewide referendum in November, 1918.

Forty-six Routes Mapped.

Forty-six distinct routes are mapped definitely in the conference report, taken in conjunction with the senate amendments to the original house bill. It is understood that all differences between the two houses have been settled. At any rate, the conference report is signed by all fourteen of the members of the conference committee. The senate vote for ratification of the conference report was unanimous and little opposition is anticipated in the house.

The conference report provides that moneys in the roads fund collected from the motor vehicle law shall be first appropriated to the discharge of principal and interest of the bonded indebtedness.

The terms of the bill in the form that it will be submitted to the people at the November 1918 election provides:

"For construction by the state, acting through its department of public works and buildings subject to the governor's approval, of a state-wide system of hard roads on routes described for control and maintenance and for conditional compensation for roads already paved; gives such department full power to execute such act; authorizes state to contract a debt for such purpose and to issue $60,000,000 serial bonds, bearing interest annually at not to exceed 4 per cent; appropriates said sum to such department; levies a tax to pay said interest annually, as it shall accrue, and to pay off bonds within twenty years from issuance, but provides that such payments may be made from other sources of revenue, and requires moneys in the motor vehicle 'road fund' to be first used for such payments and such direct tax to be omitted in any year in which sufficient money from other sources of revenue has been appropriated to meet such payments for such year; provides for publication and for submission to the people; makes the provision of such interests and bonds irrepealable, and pledges faith to state to the making of such payments."

As to Roads Already Built.

The conference report provides that where a county shall have constructed a road, embraced within the system, the actual cost of such road shall be used for the purpose of building additional state road in such county, after the cost shall have been adjudicated by the department of public works. The senate amendment that extended this provision to road already constructed by townships is eliminated from the bill.

Indict Two on Charge of Operating Baseball Pool

John Neiber and C. E. Coin were indicted by the federal grand jury yesterday on a charge of operating a baseball pool on the world's series games of last year. The headquarters of the alleged lottery was at 20 East Jackson boulevard. The two men are said to have sold chances in cities throughout the United States.

STATE HOSPITAL AIDS PLAN FIGHT ON EDGAR DEATH

Elgin, Ill., June 2.—William Desch and Herbert Hill, attendants at the Elgin state hospital, who were suspended today by Superintendent H. J. Gahagan upon recommendation of the Illinois senatorial committee which recently investigated the death of Attorney Maxwell Edgar in the institution, retained attorneys and declared they would fight any effort to bar them permanently from the service here.

Howard Van Fossen and Edward Wallace, members of another shift in Edgar's ward, have left the hospital and the city, according to officials. Van Fossen left on short notice after Edgar's death. Wallace and his wife left soon afterward.

Garbage Strike Settled by 25 Cents a Day Raise

Commissioner of Public Works Frank I. Bennett yesterday settled the strike of garbage handlers when he agreed on a wage increase of from $2.50 to $2.75 a day. A demand for $3 a day was made by the men when they went on a strike three weeks ago. Mr. Bennett said the city saved $11,000 while the men were on strike and that this sum would take care of the increase granted. Two hundred and forty-four employés will return to work tomorrow.

Mexico Puts Embargo on Food.

El Paso, Tex., June 2.—An embargo upon exportation of foodstuffs and live stock from Mexico into the United States was placed in effect by the Carranza government today.

NAME 'SUNSHINE AND SHADOWS' IN THURBER SUIT

"Sunshine and Shadows," an oil landscape by Troyon, the famous French artist, was made the basis of a bill for foreclosure filed in the Circuit court yesterday by the Central Trust company against the W. Scott Thurber Art galleries, the Chicago Title and Trust company, E. E. Maxwell, executor of the estate of Mrs. Martha C. Thurber, and three other defendants. The painting is alleged to be of little value in the bill, but Edward E. Maxwell stated that it is worth at least $25,000.

The bill which asks for the appointment of a receiver and the dissolution of the Thurber Art galleries, alleges that on Dec. 31, 1914, W. Scott Thurber became indebted to the Central Trust company to the extent of $13,200. A chattel mortgage was given on the painting, "Sunshine and Shadows."

The bill states that $3,605 of the debt has been paid by executors of the Thurber estate, but alleges that there is still $9,595 due on the original note. The bill also alleges that the estate of Mrs. Martha C. Thurber is indebted to the plaintiff to the extent of $9,500.

NEGROES LYNCH ONE OF OWN RACE

Columbia, Miss., June 2.—Pratt Hampton and Van Haynes, Negroes, accused of murdering Reece Johnson, another Negro, were taken out of jail here today by more than 100 Negroes and a few whites and Haynes was hanged from a steel bridge.

The Aluminum Six with Magnetic Gear Shift
Price $1895
f. o. b. Indianapolis
Subject to Change Without Notice

The happy chain of circumstances which has made Premier performance possible never before occurred and can never be duplicated

FIRST, we were fortunate enough to secure as our chief engineer the man who built the first aluminum motor in America. Earl G. Gunn's overhead valve Aluminum Six motor is without a doubt the most sensational motor ever put under a hood.

—And this statement is subject to proof to any intelligent jury of experts, or to any motorist.

Next, we succeeded in obtaining, as regular equipment, the greatest motor car improvement since the advent of the electric starter, namely, the Cutler-Hammer Magnetic Gear Shift—a device which takes all the labor out of driving and adds immeasurably to the road range of any car on which it is installed.

—Then, in the face of a most difficult market, we were able to obtain the choicest parts, and an ample supply of the most modern machinery.

On top of these good fortunes, we were able to interest the very highest grade of motor car merchants, the country over, in our product.

Our experience with Premier has been delightfully unusual.

We have had no serious troubles of any kind to overcome. Some few little things have gone wrong, but we instantly righted them—besides none of them were fundamental.

To-day, Premier production is as finished and smooth as that of cars that have been on the market for years —and the car mechanically is far in advance of the times.

What other cars occasionally manage to do, with extreme difficulty, Premier does regularly and

LORIMER GHOST RISES OUT OF NEW BANK CRASH

State Discovers McFarland Was Interested in La Salle Bank.

The ghost of the dead La Salle Street bank rose yesterday out of the maze of financial wreckage left by the Bransfield-McFarland crash at Auburn and Morgan parks. From the office of the state auditor in Springfield came the information that McFarland was financially interested in the La Salle bank.

How far the two interests dovetail remains to be shown. Frank Spohr, conducting the examination of the Auburn State bank's books for the Chicago Title and Trust company, receiver, said last night that he was not certain the La Salle Street bank failure was any factor in the newer collapse.

Held Munday's Note.

When the La Salle bank failed, he explained, it owed the Bransfield-McFarland interests $10,000, and they held C. B. Munday's note for a like amount. On the Auburn bank books was found record of an equity in what resources are left of the La Salle bank. Also he admitted that Munday drafts had passed through the bank.

"A concern in which Munday was interested drew drafts on the bank and they were cashed recently. That's all I know of any connection between the two. We've barely started our investigation. Next week we will know more," said Frank G. Gardner, acting for the Chicago Title and Trust company as receiver.

Denies Connection.

Charles B. Munday, guiding spirit of the Lorimer bank, was positive in his denial that there was any connection. Told that the report was out that the Auburn State bank and the Morgan Park State bank were two of "the Munday string of banks" that survived the collapse of 1914, he said:

"Why, I never set foot in the Auburn bank but once in my life. I wouldn't know Bransfield or Cline, the cashier, if I met them face to face. I've met McFarland; knew him when he used to do business with the La Salle Street bank occasionally.

"The one time I was in the Auburn bank was nearly four years ago. When we sell flour to bakers out in that section of the city I suppose the drafts, naturally, have gone through those banks. As to being interested in the bank there's positively nothing to it. I've troubles enough of my own."

Used Same Methods.

It is pointed out that the similarity of the methods, alleged to have been employed in each failure, is striking. Hoyne charges that McFarland and Bransfield used "dummy names" in making loans to themselves and that securities have been hypothecated and used to get other loans. But these tricks are familiar ones and repeat through various bank crashes. It was the "dummy" system that sent John R. Walsh to prison.

Among the big institutions said to have made loans to Bransfield and McFarland, known as "loop" concerns, are Greenebaum & Co., $75,000; North American Life Insurance company, $65,000, and the First National bank, $21,000. These are a part of the reported $200,000 in unpaid loans that the young bankers have outstanding.

Gives Up Key.

The authorities suspect that these loans, a part of which are said to be secured, may have behind them securities which ought to be in the mysterious safe deposit vault supposed to hold $396,000 in securities.

When asked yesterday if he had given up the key to the box, M. P. Bransfield told a TRIBUNE reporter that he'd given up "the key and everything else" he had.

Statements Ready Tomorrow.

Statements will be ready tomorrow at the Morgan Park bank, winding up the business and showing the depositors their balances. If they do not call tomorrow they will have to get them at the office of the receiver downtown.

Tuesday and Wednesday have been set aside as "delivery day" at the Auburn bank, and all who have valuable papers or anything else in safekeeping in the safety deposit boxes are expected to call for them.

The Central Trust company was made receiver for the Commercial National Fire Insurance company yesterday. This is owned by Bransfield McFarland personally. The liabilities are put at $185,178.20, the assets at $112,688.12, and it is claimed that the company had in the Auburn bank $59,140.61.

URGES ALL BANKS TO JOIN FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM

Washington, D. C., June 2.—[Special.]—Nationalization of the banks of the country is urged as a patriotic duty of the hour by the council of national defense, which appealed today to state defense councils to induce state banking institutions to enter the federal reserve system.

The national council calls attention to the fact that while, at the present time, all national banks are members of the federal reserve system, less than one hundred state banks and trust companies have become members. As a result, approximately two-thirds of the banks of the country are nonmember banks, and the federal reserve system, which is the bulwark of the country's financial responsibility in these times of stress, lacks not only two-thirds of the banks of the country, but also about one-half of its banking resources."

SPIRIT OF '75

Lineal Descendant of Companion of Paul Revere Sails for the French Front.

William Dawes

ON the 18th of April in '75, Paul Revere had a companion in his famous ride, one who rode even farther than Revere. That one was William Dawes, who rode at breakneck speed to Concord for the welfare of our young republic. Today on the high seas a lineal descendant and namesake of that patriotic American is on his way to France to drive an ambulance in the Marietta college section of the French field ambulance service. William Mills Dawes, son of Rufus Dawes of Chicago, and Beman Gates Dawes, his cousin, a son of Beman G. Dawes of Columbus, president of the Ohio Cities Gas company, sailed from New York yesterday for the French front. Beman G. Dawes Sr. has given twenty ambulances to the service, but the "boys" were not content with a patriotism expressed merely in terms of dollars. They wanted actual service. The spirit of '75 and William Dawes still survives.

DUNES PAGEANT TO BE REPEATED LAST TIME TODAY

The one theater within thousands of miles where the sign, "Standing Room Only," need not be posted, no matter what the crowds prove to be, will be open again today at Portchester, Ind., for the second performance of the pageant which is to be staged on the sand dunes near the lake.

Many of those who saw the first two scenes of the pageant, which were given last Wednesday before the rain scattered the audience, are planning to return today, when their tickets will again be good. Thousands more will take this last opportunity of seeing the pageant.

The cottages along the lake shore at which fish dinners and luncheons were served will again be open, prepared for a much larger crowd.

Rain or shine, the real lovers of the dunes will all be there.

The following is the schedule of special trains announced by the Illinois Central for the day, leaving Randolph street at:

7:15 a. m., 9 a. m., 11 a. m.,
7:45 a. m., 10 a. m., 12 noon.
8:30 a. m.,

Stops will be made at Van Buren, Twelfth, Forty-third, Fifty-third, and Sixty-third streets, and at Pullman.

The motor roads leading to the dunes are in excellent condition.

ADMEN'S ARMY RAIDS ST. LOUIS

St. Louis, Mo., June 2.—Although the official opening of the thirteenth annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World will take place at Washington university tomorrow afternoon, a meeting of the executive committee today virtually started the week's activities.

St. Louis is host to hundreds of ad men tonight—the vanguard of Monday's army.

The ad men's palm beach-straw hat uniforms are conspicuous on St. Louis streets, for a backward spring has kept warm weather clothes in winter storage.

"Truth in Advertising" is being hammered home to thousands of laymen.

WORK FOR STATE, BUT KEEP RIGHT ON AS BURGLARS

Three "Trust" Witnesses Caught Stealing Sent Back to Joliet.

On the eve of the trial of the "burglary trust" which opens on Monday before Judge Fitch, three of State's Attorney Hoyne's witnesses were arrested and taken back to Joliet. They were charged with breach of parole.

While they have been doing business in the day time with the state's attorney's office in connection with prosecutions of police graft, they have been spending the nights blowing safes, carting away clothing goods, or running "con" games, according to representations made to the parole commission. Confessions of Harry Green and Morris Kleiman, made to Attorney Patrick H. O'Donnell, describing burglaries in which some of the state's witnesses took part while on parole, were filed with the parole commission. The confessions, as submitted by O'Donnell, assert that the witnesses were getting protection from the state's attorney's office.

Three Back to Joliet.

The men sent back to the penitentiary are: Isador Wexler, burglar; Morris Mendelson, burglar; Abe Frank, "con" man. Nathan Steinberg, another state's witness, was returned to Joliet previously.

Green was released from the penitentiary in January, 1916. The first burglary committed, he says, was with Steinberg, who was on parole following his activities in the trial of former Police Capt. Storen and Kleiman. They robbed a store on Division street, near Robey, and sold the goods to a man named Goodman for $135.

He said that Steinberg, by promising to procure another witness against Attorney O'Donnell and Attorney Charles E. Erbstein, who were being prosecuted for subornation of perjury in the police graft cases, was able through State's Attorney Hoyne to get a shoplifter under sentence free. Steinberg had been living with her, according to Green.

Clothing Store Looted.

The next job listed in the confession was the Mentenbaum clothing store on Twelfth street near Union street. Clothing was sold to Goodman for $800. Green says that Steinberg took more money to the state's attorney's office.

The defendants in the "burglary trust" case are Nathan Steinberg, said to be king of the trust, who is now in Joliet; Ike Kiminsky, Mike Mendelson, Morris Mendelson, Green, and Kleinman. Attorney O'Donnell is representing Green and Kleinman, who will plead guilty, according to Mr. O'Donnell.

It is expected that another bitter controversy between Attorney O'Donnell and the state's attorney's office will be fought in the trial of the "burglar trust."

"Buffalo Bill" Laid to Rest in Rock Tomb Today

Denver, Colo., June 2.—Final tribute will be paid to the memory of Col. William F. Cody, [Buffalo Bill], Sunday afternoon when the body of the plainsman is laid to rest in a tomb hewn from solid rock on Lookout mountain. The Golden Masonic lodge will conduct the ceremony.

Thousands of visitors will make the pilgrimage to the mountain top to attend the ceremonies.

Members of the local branches of the G. A. R., and other patriotic and civic organizations will attend in a body, motoring from Denver.

Women Asked to Donate Clothing to Poor Girls

The Big Sisters, an association recently organized to aid in the work of the House of the Good Shepherd, has designated the week commencing tomorrow as "Bundle Week."

Members of the association, as well as all other women interested in helping girls less fortunate than their own, are requested to send clothing they can spare to the House of the Good Shepherd, 1126 Grace street, Chicago.

Girls' clothing of all sorts will be gladly accepted. A special need exists for shoes the cobbler can repair, and dresses and hats the girls at the home can remodel.

STATE ASSEMBLY TO CLEAN SLATE, THEN TAKE REST

Springfield, Ill., June 2.—[Special.]—The Illinois legislature enters the home stretch Monday. Two weeks remain of actual work on the bill calendar. The arrangement that now exists unofficially is that a recess shall be taken on June 16 until some date in August, not yet determined.

The purpose of the recess is to give the state council of defense and Gov. Lowden opportunity to submit suggestions for war legislation.

The break up of the session will not be delayed by the Chicago traction bills, old timers says. The fate of these measures will be decided next Tuesday, on second reading in the senate.

The administration, senate, and house leaders are confident the private banks bill will be passed, in view of the topheavy vote by which it retained its enacting clause after the most desperate attempt by the private bank lobby to eliminate that clause.

There are repeated reports that the private banks lobby threw up its hands and quit after its walloping yesterday.

A final effort may be made to revive the woman's eight hour bill. This is the one bill that was on the original program of the demands of organized labor that stands a chance of passage.

Summer is on the way. Look over towards the horizon and you will see the flies in massed formation getting ready to attack. Better mobilize your resources and put in a Kewanee Garbage Burner. That's the big gun for the campaign against disease. Don't let the Spring flies get started. Doctors say the Spring fly is the Red Demon.

Swatting flies is all right as far as it goes, but just remember that for every single fly you swat a million more are born. It's a hopeless game. Put in the garbage burner and destroy, while it is still fresh, the vegetable and organic matter that soon becomes garbage under the sun's hot rays. You needn't go to the trouble of swatting flies, if you maintain a garbage can on the back porch. It's an endless job.

Every one of you flat owners can earn the gratitude of your tenants, make your building more livable and a blamed sight more rentable, if you will put that Kewanee Garbage Burner in your basement. Don't you know that the garbage thus becomes fuel and saves you the cost of a lot of coal, to say nothing of the doctors and druggists bills. Think of your children. They are the direct objects of the flies attacks. And they suffer like sin when the fly gets in its work. Save the kids, save yourselves, save your home, save your money. Send for a representative of the Kewanee Boiler Company today and ask him to show, and explain, the Kewanee Water-Heating Garbage Burner.

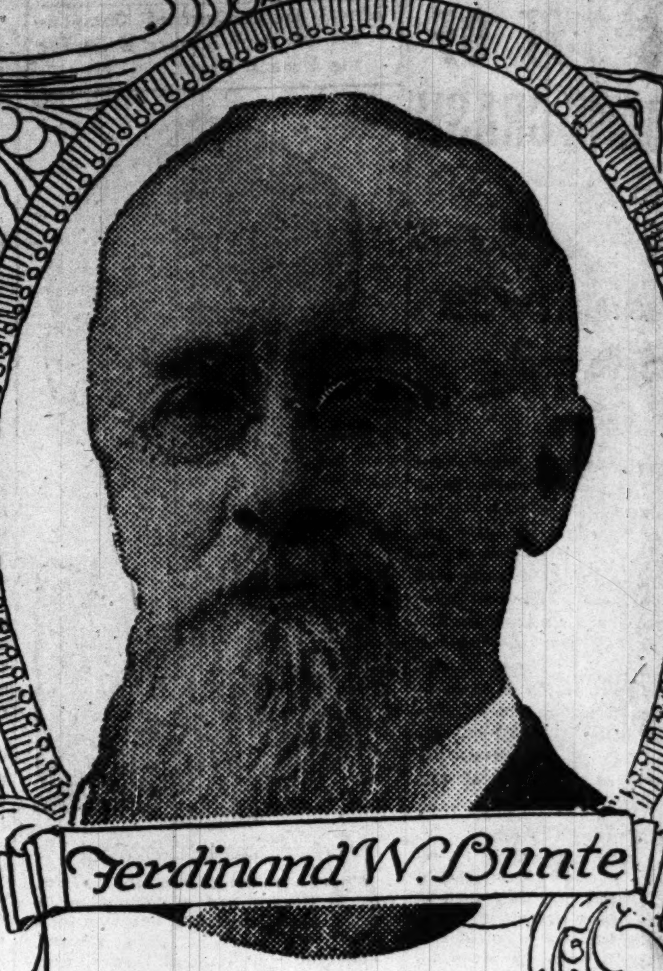
Gustav A. Bunte

An Appreciation and a Prophecy



Ferdinand W. Bunte

WE, the elder Bunte Brothers, are turning over to the younger Bunte Brothers the active management of our great candy business.

In so doing we wish to express our great appreciation of the public confidence vested in us for more than 40 years.

We have regarded candy making as a sacred trust. We have made candy to be healthy and wholesome for hundreds of thousands of youngsters and grown-ups in every part of the world. These people—our public—have made the name of Bunte a household symbol of quality. They have made possible the slogan, "Bunte supplies candy for the four corners of the globe."

This is what has brought our prosperity—our growth—enabled us to pay the highest prices for the best ingredients, such as pure cane sugar, milk, cream and butter from the best creameries, and fruits, nuts, jellies and flavoring extracts of the finest kind.

1,200 Kinds of Candy

Probably few people realize that we produce such a wonderful variety of sweetmeats.

We started small back in 1876. Because of the continued patronage of increasing numbers of people from year to year we have been able to extend our manufacturing to tremendous proportions.

Today Bunte Diana Stuffed Candy, its thousand varieties of hard candies, its great variety of small package sweets and stick candy, together with the well known Bunte Menthol Cough Drops and Bunte Cocoa, have attained enormous success. Bunte Cocoa, introduced in Chicago only last August, is now handled by more than 5,000 Chicago grocers and is the leading seller in this city.

Bunte Marshmallows are sold in England by the leading confectioners.

Just a day or so ago we received an order from Manila for 5,000 pounds of Bunte Cocoa—the first order of Bunte Cocoa to enter the Philippines—in these times an eloquent example of the world wide reputation of Bunte products.

It is this public regard for Bunte products which we wish to return in this expression of our appreciation.

We have literally millions of customers. Last year $2,360,736.25 (manufacturer's price) worth of Bunte candy was distributed.

Now a Bigger Bunte Business

In turning over to our younger generation, Theodore and Charles Bunte, this great institution we feel that the most valuable thing that we are placing in their care is this wonderful asset of confidence in Bunte quality.

This is worth many thousands of dollars to a business like ours.

First of all it is going to enable Theodore and Charles to extend this business tremendously in the near future.

As a matter of fact we have been unable to supply all the orders which have come to us. We are sixty days behind in deliveries on cocoa. On other products which we make we have never reached anywhere near the total volume of business which we could secure. We have had to decline from $50,000 to $75,000 worth of business per month in candy orders because our facilities would not allow us to turn out our quality of candy fast enough—and we would never consider cheapening the quality.

For Theodore and Charles Bunte we bespeak the utmost in confidence on the part of those who have so liberally patronized us. Please remember that both Theodore and Charles Bunte have been active heads of this business for 12 years—Theodore having had entire management and practically executive control of the business for that time, and Charles the management of the entire sales.

They are masters of the art of candy making and selling—Theodore in the invention of candies and candy making machinery, and Charles in the selling of our products. Much of the great progress made by our company in late years has been due to these men.

Now, following our retirement, we are gratified to look ahead and prophecy that with young blood, modern aggressive policies and increased facilities, the Bunte organization will be able to handle the large business increases which have been offered to it in the past and the still greater increases to come in the immediate future.

While we are relinquishing an active part in this business we cannot do otherwise than maintain an active interest in it—and continue to give it the full benefit of our more than 40 years of experience.

Often the public has felt that manufacturers in different lines have been guided by a selfish spirit. Bunte Brothers have never allowed themselves to be so directed. We have been wise enough to realize that the best interest of the public is our best interest.

Day after day for these many years we have been led by this ideal. We have made it a part of Bunte Brothers, and we feel that this is the real reason why thousands have come to look upon the name of Bunte Brothers as a bond of good faith and a guarantee of wholesomeness.

Consequently we never want to be out of touch with those who have made our prosperity possible. We still want to continue a warm, intimate, close relationship with the millions of Bunte customers who live here, there and everywhere.

Our prophecy is that those of our own public who become identified with the larger plans and activities of the greater Bunte Brothers, as outlined below, will reap the harvest which is the inevitable result of honest manufacturing backed by sincere motives.

FERDINAND W. BUNTE,
GUSTAV A. BUNTE.

Theodore W. Bunte

Mr. Theodore W. Bunte succeeds his father, Ferdinand Bunte, as president of Bunte Brothers, after twelve years as vice president and general manager. Mr. Theodore Bunte is known to both Europe and America as the inventor of the Diana Stuffed or Paper Shelled Candies, also of other candies and candy and chocolate making machinery.

Charles F Bunte

Mr. Charles F. Bunte follows his brother, Theodore, in the position of vice president of Bunte Brothers after twenty-five years' active service in every branch of the industry. For more than twelve years Charles Bunte has been the sales genius who has put the Bunte products in millions of homes. He has been and will continue to be the manager of sales.

INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITY

The accompanying letter from F. A. Brewer & Company, Bankers, who purchased the holdings of Ferdinand and Gustav Bunte, is of interest to investors.

This firm, after investigation, found that a total of 511% on its original capital, or an average of 35% per year, was earned by Bunte Brothers durin the 14 years of its corporate existence ending December 31st, 1916. (Bunte Brothers was established in 1876 and incorporated in 1901.)

As a result of their investigations these bankers have made a large investment in the Bunte Brothers Company—now to be actively headed by Theodore and Charles Bunte, already managers of the business for many years, and who control the concern. F. A. Brewer & Company have resold a large part of the stock which they secured because Chicago people have realized the wonderful future ahead of this stable and well-conducted business. Its products are sold in every State of the Union, in every country of South America and in the far East.

To conservative investors Bunte Brothers preferred stock offers assured 7 per cent dividends—not taxed in Illinois—and the common stock unusual money-making possibilities if purchased either for dividends or for resale with enhancement in market values.

Price Reservations accepted at $100 per share for the Seven Per Cent Cumulative Preferred Stock (par value $100). For a limited period the privilege is extended to buyers of the Preferred Stock to buy 5 shares of the Common Stock at $4.25 per share (par value $10) with each share of Preferred. At present the business is earning 7% for the Preferred and over 7% for the Common, on their par values. The earnings for the Common Stock, therefore, at $4.25 per share, show better than 16½% annually for 1916. The first four months of 1917 show a very substantial increase in sales and profits.

To Careful Investors:

During an experience of over 16 years in the banking business I have handled many millions of dollars of investment money for banks and individuals, and I am free to say that I have never before owned a security or advised a purchase to clients that I could more wholeheartedly and enthusiastically recommend for safety, income and profit than

BUNTE BROTHERS PREFERRED AND COMMON

There are certain Chicago businesses that we know have built up great assets and that make great profits year after year, and through any and all business conditions. We know they make money because they manufacture staples, because the demand for their goods is always increasing, for every one knows that they deliver maximum quality and honest values.

It is not often, however, that we have the opportunity to participate in the earnings of these good old Chicago concerns.

I believe that any one purchasing these Bunte shares will have a safe income-producing investment in the Seven Per Cent Preferred and a handsome profit in the Common.

Sincerely,

BRASSIE LIKE DRIVER IN ITS GENERAL USE

O'Neil Tells What Lies May Safely Be Played with Wooden Club.

BY GEORGE A. O'NEIL.

The Brassie

CHARACTERISTICS OF CLUB.

Experience has taught all experts that the brassie should be an almost exact duplicate of the driver. The shaft should be a little stiffer and a trifle shorter—perhaps half an inch; and the face should be lofted a little more. But it is very undesirable to carry any of these differences to excess, for the two clubs ought to be played in essentially the same manner and with the same swing.

Very few players are tempted to select a shaft that is too short or too stiff, but a good many make the mistake of having the face of the brassie lofted, or laid back, too much. This arises, not from any real need, but from a lack of confidence—the same kind of thing which plays havoc with so many inexperienced or nervous players when they have to play a short shot across a ravine or a water hazard.

These unfortunate players, lacking confidence in the ability of the club to pick up the ball properly, try to help it by hitting upward, and in their anxiety usually strike the ball above the center as the club is rising. This naturally sends the ball down instead of up. If the player had not been nervous and had played his clubs in the correct and usual way, the loft of the club would have lifted the ball as desired.

Clubs Effective.

The inexperienced player may be entirely certain that if his clubs were designed by a good maker every club has enough loft to do the work for which it was designed without any crafty forcing at it.

As for his brassie, therefore, he may be confident that it will pick up the ball properly if he will swing properly and give it a chance to do its work. An experienced player may find that he wishes his brassie lofted a little more, but he will remember at the same time that in doing so he sacrifices distance to some extent, and he will restrict the lofting to what is strictly necessary for the purpose he has in mind.

The face of a club may be lofted—that is, sloped backward—for either of two purposes: to pick up the ball from the ground or to lift it high in the air. To pick a ball up requires very little loft; to lift it high in the air requires more. The brassie requires very little loft, because brassie shots are intended to secure great distance; and a ball that rises too high in the air will not fly far. The best flight curve for a ball is a low flat curve, partly because the ball is less exposed to contrary winds and partly because it is less affected by air resistance and gravity.

If a ball lies in a cuppy lie too deep for the use of a brassie the player must simply make up his mind to use another club—a spoon or an iron club—and sacrifice distance to safety.

Pressing—Good and Bad.

Pressing is a term that has two meanings. In its good sense, it means that in a special emergency a player puts into his stroke absolutely all the speed and power he is capable of. This is done often and successfully by expert players and is a feature of play of the very highest class. But only a player who can depend upon the smooth perfection of this stroke can afford to try it.

Pressing usually means—and this is its bad sense—the effort of a player to force his shot beyond his real powers. The result of such an effort is almost sure to be disaster. The sudden attempt at speed and power spoils the team work of the muscles. The hands come through ahead of the club, or the shoulder dips, or the body, instead of turning as on a pivotal center, sways forward.

The best way to increase the length of your drive, whether with driver or with brassie, is—as all professionals have been teaching for many years—to concentrate your efforts upon acquiring a perfect swing, to keep well within the limits of your powers, and to increase your speed so gradually as not to disturb the smoothness of the play of the muscles.

Varieties of Bad Lies.

A lie may be bad because the position of the ball itself is difficult or because it makes necessary an awkward stance. Astonishingly good shots are often made even by mediocre players from stances that are very difficult indeed. The reason for this probably is that in such cases more care is exercised than usual to keep the body steady. Probably no stance seriously handicaps a player if it allows a firm footing and a reasonable degree of freedom from stiffness.

If the ball lies in a cup or is perched in the high grass an inch or two above the ground, it is very dangerous to try to play with a brassie. The player should use brains and self-control and play such a lie with an iron or a spoon. Hanging lies are very troublesome to

CICOTTE ALLOWS MACKS 3 SWATS; BEATS 'EM, 4-0

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 2.—[Special.]—With Eddie Cicotte pitching another of his stylish games, the White Sox had no trouble whatever in starting their invasion of the east with a victory. They trimmed Connie Mack's youngsters 4 to 0, and did the job so precisely that it was not even interesting.

About the only thrill in the show came in the first inning, when Joe Jackson was purposedly passed, filling the bases, and Hap Felsch followed by combing a two bagger down into the corner of left field. The blow sent three Chicago men over the home plate and spoiled the whole afternoon of the Philadelphia fans.

With those three runs to their credit, the Sox simply galloped through the game and had it all over within an hour and twenty-nine minutes.

Three Hits Off Cicotte.

Cicotte was in excellent form. He held the Macks to three hits, one of which was a scratch. Only two of Mack's men got as far as second base during the encounter, and they considered themselves lucky.

It was Joe Bush who was picked to oppose Cicotte, but Felsch's two bagger in that first inning took all the pep out of Joe's curves and shoots, and Cy Falkenberg was hurried out to limber up. He took the job at the start of the third and went through to the finish nicely, the one run obtained off him being helped along by a wild throw by the catcher.

Ping Bodie Day.

About the only thing pleasing to the local fans was the preliminary show staged by the players and a couple of bands. As Ping Bodie's day had to be postponed yesterday, the celebration was put on today along with some other features. Ping was handed an armful of American beauties while a real California band played Frisco music. Before the game, however, Ping injured his thumb trying to spear a fly ball before it went into the bleachers, and after two innings he had to quit and go to the repair shop.

In accordance with the new rule set up in the American league, both teams engaged in military drill for ten minutes before the game began. With the band in the lead, the boys marched to the flagpole, hoisted the flag and then did soldier maneuvers upon the field while the crowd applauded. In the absence of Sergt. Smiley, Jim Scott acted as commander of the White Sox forces and put them through the stunts like a regular army captain.

Gift for Kid Gleason.

The third feature stunt was the presentation of a huge silver loving cup to Kid Gleason, a gift from a host of his friends here, and when the Kid peeked into the cup he discovered $200 in green backs nestled there. Some one made a long speech which no one in the stand heard.

The attack of the Sox in the first inning settled the ball game. Bush was wild and started by walking Liebold. Weaver then caromed a single of Bush's glove and Eddie Collins bunted the two along. Bush then walked Jackson purposely, whereupon Felsch smote his two bagger sending his three mates home.

In the sixth with one out, Weaver slapped safely to left and stole second. Meyer's peg was bum and Buck scooted on to third, from where he legged it home after Eddie Collins had boosted to Siebold.

WHITE SOX NOTES

Philadelphia, Pa., June 2.—[Special.]—Cicotte got through the game without any of the Philadelphia players examining the ball to see what he had on it.

It was a perfect day, regular June weather, and a crowd of about 8,000 was out, which is considered good in this town.

It will not be a day of rest for the Sox tomorrow. They are booked to put on an exhibition at Newark against the Newark club of the International league, and about a dozen of them will be taken. They will get back early in the evening.

Hap Felsch spoiled an opening of the Macks in the fifth. Meyer, first man up, hit a liner over second and a bit toward right field. Hap dashed in at top speed and plucked the ball off his knees.

In the first round, Witt led off with a walk, and with the call three and two on Strunk and Witt on the go Strunk poled a liner down first base way. Gandil speared the ball with one hand and stepped on first base for a double play.

Fritz von Kolnitz, who was with the Sox last year, called at the hotel today and treated the Chicago war scribes to a taxi ride to the ball park, where he visited with his former mates on the bench. Fritz now is boss of a potash plant near here and, although out of baseball, says he still has a charley horse.

SWAT BY DOYLE UPSETS ROBINS IN NINTH, 4 TO 3

BY I. E. SANBORN.

A determined ninth inning rally, climaxed by a slithering single by Larry Doyle after two were out, won a freakish seesaw game from Brooklyn yesterday at Weeghman park and brought joy to 3,000 daring Cub rooters. Score: 4 to 3.

Nearly every other run was due in one way or another to the gusty gale which blew out of the southwest and made merry jests at the expense of the fielders on both teams. It was difficult to guess where a fly ball was coming down, and several players guessed badly. Attempting to throw across the wind resulted in occasional wild heaves, and only the protection of the grand stand enabled the pitchers to get the ball over with any degree of accuracy.

Wind Helps Dodgers in Third.

The wind gave Brooklyn the first run in the third by blowing a fly ball out of Wolter's hands after he apparently had it. In the home half the zephyrs gave the Cubs two runs and the lead by blowing a pop fly over the heads of Hickman and Smyth, both of whom tried for it, and by carrying another fly against the screen in right field.

Again in the seventh the wind was chiefly responsible for two runs the Robins scored on a throw by Doyle which Merkle muffed. The resultant pair of tallies put the visitors in the lead, but the Cubs tied it up in their half and won out in the ninth on clean hitting in which the gale cut no apparent figure.

Four Pitchers in Game.

Four pitchers, two on each side, struggled with the freak conditions. Seaton and Dell started the slabwork, but the big Brooklyn northpaw was knocked off the mound in the seventh with a rally that promised victory right there. Jack Coombs came on and warded off defeat until the last half of the ninth. Seaton lasted until the end of the seventh, when he retired in favor of a hitting pincher named Flack, who led the rally that tied the knot. Prendergast shut the Robins out without a hit in the last two sessions.

With the help of flashy double plays both teams were blanked for two innings. In the third Miller led with a single. Dell skied and Johnston poled a liner to right. Wolter thought he had the ball judged accurately, but it veered away and spilled out of his hands for a double, Miller being stopped at second.

Elliott foxily picked Miller off third with the help of Deal, but Daubert came across with a single that scored the first run.

Cubs Jump Into Lead.

The Cubs went them one better in their half. Deal started with a Texas leaguer which the wind blew over the heads of Hichman and Smyth for a scratch two bagger. Seaton hoisted a fly into the gale, and it was carried against the screen in right field for another two bagger, but Deal could get no farther than third on it because of the chance the fly would be caught. Zeider fouled out, but Wolter's fly scored Deal, and a muff by Dell, trying to cover first on Doyle's rap, let Seaton register.

Merkle's error, followed by Mowrey's double and Miller's single, scored two for the Robins in the seventh and put them one lap ahead. The Cubs came back hard in their half. Flack took Seaton's bat and singled with one out. Zeider walked and Wolter combed a double, scoring Flack. Coombs relieved Dell and retired two men with Cubs on third and second.

Prendergast led the winning assault in the ninth with a single through Olson, after one was out. Zeider flied, but Wolter walked and Doyle delivered a safety to left on which Prendergast rode home.

CUB NOTES

Brooklyn again today and tomorrow.

The Cubs have won five out of six games with the Robins to date.

Zeider covered a lot of real estate with hands and feet combined. His best feats were robbing Hickman of a sizzling grounder in the first and going back near the foul line after Smyth's Texas leaguer in the sixth.

Johnston pulled up lame with a Charley horse after his scratch two bagger in the third and Manager Robinson sent Smyth to run for Jimmy. Smyth went to center field and Stengel to right for the rest of the game.

Manager Mitchell was chased off the coaching lines in the ninth by Umpire O'Day, but the boss didn't care after Doyle made his base hit.

With Zeider on third, Wolter on second, and one out in the seventh, Doyle tried to squeeze Rollie home, but popped a little foul to Miller.

Merkle saved Zeider a wild throw in the fourth by scooping the short peg off the ground and still keeping in contact with first base through his spikes.

Williams chased in close to short field after Olson's little fly in the ninth and pinched it. A lull in the wind right there fooled everybody, otherwise Zeider could have caught the ball more easily.

'TRIBUNE' POLL SHOWS COLLEGE SPORTS STAY

Wilson's Approval Lines Up Schools—To Play Football in Fall.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

American colleges, with a few exceptions, are planning to continue their football and other athletic activities next fall and throughout the collegiate year unless national conditions become much more serious than they now are.

These contests, in most instances, will lack the glamor and spectacular features of former years because so many stars have responded to the call to arms. In some places eligibility rules are being changed—even freshmen being allowed to participate—in order to have enough athletes to form teams. At other colleges there will be a drastic paring of expenses and donations to the Red Cross. Practice periods generally will be shortened in favor of military instruction.

Athletics Generally Approved.

A poll of the leading educational institutions shows a surprising preponderance of opinion in favor of sports on the part of those colleges which have taken any action at all. This sentiment, which had not found outspoken expression to any great extent, took new courage when President Wilson's letter to a New York sporting writer was made public May 22. President Wilson urged a continuance of college sport along normal lines so far as possible, not only as a diversion but to keep the young men in fit condition for future service in the army.

The effect of this official sanction, which has previously been voiced in regard to lawn tennis and some other sports by Secretary of War Baker, had a spontaneous effect. The southwestern conference, embracing Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and allied colleges, which had voted to discontinue sport, reconsidered its action. The advice is expected to have powerful weight in the council of the faculty representatives of the Big Nine conference, embracing the leading universities in this section, in Chicago on Saturday, when a declaration of policy is expected.

Except on the Atlantic coast and in Colorado, the sentiment is almost unanimous for college athletics.

Big Easterners to Confer.

Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and their rivals will be governed largely by a conference to be held in August, when the executive committee of the National Collegiate Athletic association meets at Washington. An informal meeting of graduate managers and athletic representatives of fourteen eastern colleges recently held favored college athletics.

The paucity of material and absence of stars is likely to prove more embarrassing to coaches and athletic authorities than the general situation, from present indications. Whatever one may think of the merits of college athletics during the war, he must admit that the college men, and notably athletes, have responded with a patriotism not surpassed, if indeed equaled, by any other class. This fact undoubtedly has had a great influence in preserving college sport.

In the central west, Minnesota has voted to discontinue athletics, but the alumni have petitioned the faculty board to reconsider its action. Michigan canceled its spring sports and the regents have refused to O. K. sports for this fall despite student resolutions. Wisconsin canceled baseball and sentiment is divided.

Yale's Senior Athletes Gone.

Numerous interesting high lights were brought out by the nation-wide inquiry conducted by THE TRIBUNE. At Yale practically all senior athletes and half the juniors and sophomores have gone to war, while the afternoon recreation hours are given to military drill. Yale will send a delegate to the August meeting.

At Harvard every regular of the football team, with the exception of Casey, many subs and members of the freshmen team have enlisted or are driving ambulances. The Princeton chairman of the faculty committee favors abolition of sports, but others suggest a limited schedule against traditional rivals, with freshmen allowed to compete, and a series of intramural contests.

Washington Elaborates Sports.

A notable advocate of sports is President Henry Suzallo of University of Washington, who telegraphed the writer:

> We will not abandon sports even if the Pacific coast conference does not reëstablish intercollegiate contests during the course of the war. Recognizing physical fitness as the fundamental basis of military efficiency, we shall next year develop the most elaborate program of international sports the university has known. The administration favors requiring every male student to engage in some athletic sport. In addition, we shall have systematic medical inspection and enlarge our facilities for military training.

Chairman F. A. Angell of the faculty athletic committee of Leland Stanford university says:

> We hope to keep all collegiate and intercollegiate sports going next year, thinking this policy best for men whether as students or future soldiers. In view of the national demand for economy, we feel that all expenses for training tables, trainers, coaches,

CRAZY KENNEDY DETECTIVE

Words and Pictures by RING W. LARDNER

CHAPTER I.

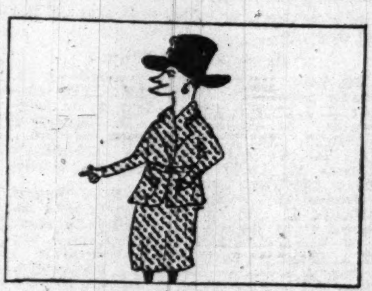
Crazy Kennedy looked up from his afternoon paper.

"Morrison," he said, "the city's detective bureau must be a fine bunch of rummies."

"What makes you say that?" I inquired, laying aside my tatting.

"Well, listen," replied my friend. "Here is a story about a girl who has been missing from her home a week and the detectives can't find her."

"That's not so funny," I commented. "Other girls have been missing for years."



"Other girls have been missing for years."

"Yes, but listen to this description of the girl: 'Sixteen years old, blonde, attired in white shirtwaist, long blue skirt, black shoes, and long black coat.' If I couldn't find that girl I would quit detecting and drive a dray."

"Why are you so sure you could find her?" I asked.

"Because," Kennedy answered, "she is probably the only 16 year old girl in the world who isn't dressed in a short skirt, tan shoes with white gaiters, and a mustard coat."

CHAPTER II.

Just then the door bell rang.

"Come in," welcomed Crazy, and a handsome man of 50 entered the room.

"I came," he said, in a shaking voice, "to consult with Mr. Kennedy, the great detective."

"That's me," admitted my friend. "What's ailing of you?"

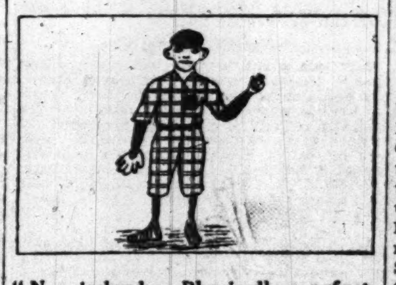
"I am worried to death about my son," said the visitor. "He wants to enlist."

"You should worry, then," said Kennedy. "Instead of worrying you should be proud to own so patriotic a brat."

"But you don't understand," said Mr. Carruthers. "He never can pass."

"Physically unsound?" surmised Kennedy.

"No, indeed. Physically perfect, but mentally cracked."



"No, indeed. Physically perfect. But mentally cracked."

"What makes you think so?" inquired my friend."

"Because," replied Mr. Carruthers, "he doesn't want to enlist in the officers' reserve, but as a PRIVATE."

CHAPTER III.

"Morrison," said Crazy when we had kicked our visitor downstairs, "they should be married."

"Who?" I queried.

"Young Carruthers, who wants to be a private, and that girl who doesn't wear a mustard coat."

And Kennedy lit a fresh cubeb.

GOLD COASTERS GET 28 POINTS; TOLEDO SECOND

Oak Park Boy Sets Only New Record—Over 300 Stars in Games.

BY MAROON.

Lake Forest academy won the sixteenth annual University of Chicago interscholastic meet at Stagg field yesterday from a field of 300 athletes, the pick of the nation. The north shore preps presented a well balanced team, and it was apparent when the program was half completed that they would win. Lake Forest finished with 28 points. Second place went to Scott High of Toledo with 19 points. East Aurora was third with 15.

To Addems of Manteno, Ill., went individual honors of the day. The southern Illinois star was defeated in the high jump, his stellar event, in which he holds the University of Chicago interscholastic record, but he piled up twelve points with second in that contest, a tie for second in the pole vault, third in the broad jump, and fourth in the discus. Rogers of Lake Forest, who won both hurdles, and Moorhead of Scott High, winner of the 100 and 220 yard dashes, tied for second honors. Fred Wilcoxen of Oak Park broke the only record of the day when he heaved the javelin 162 feet 7½ inches.

Wind Handicaps Athletes.

Weather conditions that nearly disrupted the meet kept the time slow in all track events and hindered the field performers. An icy gale blowing thirty miles an hour swept down the straightaway, nearly ripping the flags from their shafts, and knocking down the high hurdles as fast as the attendants could set them up. The event finally was completed when the officials stood between the barriers and held them against the wind. Second and third place men slipped by to victory on several occasions when the man who seemed the logical leader faltered in the face of the terrific gale.

One of the best races of the day was the second quarter mile, in which Neely of Abilene ran the lap in :51 4-5, three-fifths of a second from the record, while the wind was at its height. Hodel of Freeport and Bruder of Champaign were the other 440 winners. The pair of half mile races went to Campbell of U High and Rees of East Aurora. Morrissey of East Aurora and Heipel of Scott High of Toledo were the mile run leaders.

Vaulters Have Their Troubles.

The pole vaulters seemed most affected by weather conditions. Birkhoff of Hyde Park was the only man to reach 10 feet 6 inches. It has taken 12 feet or better to win in other years. The shotput went to Williams of Sheridan, Ind., who put the bronze ball 47 feet 5¾ inches. Wilkinson of Shattuck was the discus winner with a 114 foot heave, and Stephen Stephens of Paris took the hammer throw.

Dowding of Bowen was one of the few conspicuous local boys. He won the broad jump with a fine leap of 22 feet 4½ inches, nosing out a fine field.

CATCHER GOWDY JOINS U. S. ARMY

Columbus, O., June 2.—Harry (Hank) Gowdy, catcher for the Boston Braves, today enlisted as a private in the headquarters company, Second brigade, Ohio national guard. He will be called into service July 15. Gowdy, who is 27 years old, enlisted in person at the adjutant general's office.

The baseball player will resign his position with the Braves. He passed the physical examination in good condition. Gowdy is a Columbus boy.

"I'm not going to be conscripted," said Gowdy, "and that's all there is to it, except that I want to go in an outfit in which there are some fellows I know. I've told my parents and Manager Stallings, too. I don't know what any of the other Boston players are going to do, but I have an idea Shortstop Maranville is going to get in somewhere before conscription time."

Carlo Lantieri Not Dead; Now an Italian Officer

Carlo Lantieri has been heard from. The coach of the Italian Olympic team in 1912, later one of the six day bicycle race promoters here and in New York, is an artillery lieutenant in the Italian army, now serving in the Alps.

Writing under date of March 5 to a Chicago friend, he says:

"I remember always my kind friends of the other side. I am serving in the artillery, a lieutenant, up in the Alps. We are working hard, but the result will be grand, and soon. Glad America is with my country. Remember me to all my friends. Best regards.

"CARLO LANTIERI."

Several months ago Lantieri was reported killed in action.

Johnson Rolls Home First in 800 Yard Skate Race

VETERANS BRAVE CHILLING WINDS IN GOLF TOURNEY

Good Field Starts Play in 60-Year-or-Over Meet at Glen View Club.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Despite a chilly half gale from somewhere in the north which kept the attendance down at many of the clubs there was a fair turnout of veterans at Glen View for the qualifying round of the Maturity cup yesterday.

The classic is open to players 60 years old and over who are affiliated with clubs belonging to the United States or Western Golf associations. One stroke allowance is made for each year over 60.

Bartle's Score Leads Field.

J. S. Bartle led the field with a card of 100—1—99. R. N. Hunt, who has competed for a number of years, was dean of the contestants, being entitled to an allowance of eighteen strokes. He braved the chilly breeze for nine holes and then retired.

One of the most interesting matches seen in a club event for a long time came in the second round for the Frazier cup, when R. A. Keyes and his son, R. W., met. At the seventeenth green Keyes Sr. led, 1 up, but a pulled drive cost him the home hole, and they will play off the tie this week.

GOLF QUESTIONS

The interest aroused by George O'Neil's articles on golf has been so great that "The Tribune" offers a new feature which will, perhaps, receive an even more enthusiastic welcome. Mr. O'Neil will conduct a department of Questions and Answers.

If you want information on any point discussed in his articles, ask for it. If you want a discussion of some point that he has omitted, ask for it. If you have a theory about swinging, or following through, or keeping the eye on the ball, ask about it. If you want to know what causes slicing or pulling or topping, ask about it.

Make your questions clear and precise. If the case is a special one, describe the conditions as simply and clearly as you can. Address questions to George A. O'Neil, Chain-o'-Lakes Country club, South Bend, Ind. Sign your full name and address, but if you do not wish them printed, say so.

The first answers will be printed next Sunday. After that they will alternate with articles on the iron clubs.

BRASSIE TO BE USED ALMOST LIKE DRIVER, GEORGE O'NEIL SAYS

the inexperienced player. Even a slight downward slope will often cause him to top his ball. Often it is folly to attempt a hanging lie with a wooden club. It is better to try a midiron or even a mashie, if necessary. A hundred and fifty yards with an iron is worth more than a foozled shot with a brassie.

If, however, the slope is not too great for the use of the brassie, the player should shorten his grip on the club, stand with the ball nearer the right foot than usual, and swing easily.

An uphill lie, on the other hand, is best played by standing with the ball well forward of the left foot in order that the club head may pick up the ball after it passes the lowest point in its swing and is moving upward.

Sidehill Lies.

A ball lying on a sidehill is often more difficult to play properly than one in an uphill or downhill lie. Special care must be taken to get just the proper length of grip and also to keep the body well balanced.

Also it is to be noted that the swing must be nearer to the body of the player or further away from it than usual, according as he has to stand above or below the ball.

Players who are preparing for success on all kinds of links should practice on difficult lies. Many links offer no sidehill lies; others are so constructed as to offer only one kind; but a player can, in practice, find such lies almost anywhere or create them for himself. It is folly to expect to play these difficult lies well without practice.

The Spoon

The spoon is valuable for many purposes, as is now recognized even by American players, who were comparatively slow in adopting it. It may be used at the tee for a hole that is too short for a full drive and too long for an iron shot; but it is of greatest service in playing a downhill lie when the slope is too great for a safe brassie shot and in playing a ball that lies too deep in grass or stubble for a brassie.

In all such cases some players prefer to use an iron, but the spoon is as safe for most players and will probably at the same time give more distance.

Spoon Face Laid Back.

The spoon has a shorter and stiffer shaft than a brassie and the face is laid back a good deal more. It is not necessary that the face should be deeper, but a very popular type is distinguished by an unusually deep face. It has been found especially serviceable in short, heavy grass.

As the shaft of the spoon is more upright than that of the brassie, as well as shorter, it is naturally necessary for the player to stand nearer to the ball. These differences necessarily cause some differences in the path traveled by the club head in the swing; but the player may safely regard the stroke with the spoon as practically the same as that with the driver or the brassie.

Rejects Majors to Enter Ohio.

Columbus, O., June 2.—Louis Dudley, a Columbus, O., high school pitcher, practically has decided to pass up offers from major league clubs to enter Ohio State university. Dudley has pitched two no-hit, no-run contests this season.

Dayton vs. American Giants.

Chappy Johnson's Dayton Giants will begin a five game series this afternoon with the American Giants at Scholing's park. Johnson formerly was one of the stars of Rube Foster's team. This will be his first local appearance in a visiting uniform.

PRESS CLIPPINGS OF 25 YEARS AGO

[Collated by New York Sun.]

Amos Rusie is winning regularly for the Giants.

Bid McPhee, Cincinnati's second baseman, still plays without a glove.

Baltimore critics say that Third Baseman Muggsy McGraw has made good and will cover the position regularly.

Brooklyn has offered Center Fielder Mike Griffin to Cleveland for Jimmy McAleer, but Pat Tebeau will not consider the offer.

Baseball is growing. Nearly 10,000 were at the Polo grounds when Amos Rusie shut out Boston. Extra ticket windows were opened.

A critic predicts that Cy Young, the youthful phenom of the Cleveland team, will not last two more seasons because he is curving himself to death. There is much wisdom in this assertion.

Pop Anson is almost 35 years old, but he can still hit. The big fellow rapped Theodore Breitenstein for two singles, a double, and a triple in the recent series.

Manager Bill McCloskey of the Louisville team has issued a denial that he was going to sign a certain college pitcher of an eastern university. Bill says he has no time to bother with the "rah, rah" boys, and everybody agrees with him.

Charles Nichols of the Boston team is a wonderful pitcher, but few fans think he is worth $2,500 a season. This is the salary he held up Boston for.

Connie Mack is catching regularly for the Pittsburgh team now. This tall chap has a good whip, but does not seem to be much of a general behind the plate. Manager Al Buckenberger is working hard to make a thinking ball player out of him.

It is reported that the Phillies are going to let out Lave Cross, who, no doubt, will go to the minors.

Baltimore is trying out a new right-fielder named Keeler. He played once with Brooklyn. He looks too light for fast company.

Chicago has offered $4,000 for Al Selbach, the star outfielder of the Washington team. This was a tempting offer, but Washington decided to keep him.

Chris von der Ahe says that his catchers have discovered Ed Delehanty's weakness.

Outfielder Billy Sunday says he will open a pool and billiard room when he is through with baseball.

Tener, the big pitcher of the Chicago team, has quit baseball. Foolish move, when he could have picked up from $1,500 to $2,000 of easy money for several more years to come.

Pitcher Hank O'Day of the Washington team complains that he is getting a raw deal from the umpires. What Hank thinks of umpires would not look fit in print.

Ban Johnson, sporting editor of the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette, writes that the collapse of the Brotherhood means that never again will there be any attempt to establish a second major league. Johnson is right.

Members of the Cincinnati team are kicking because of the new rule which prohibits them from drinking at the park bar while in uniform.

First Baseman Charley Comiskey is said to be a sucker for a curve high on the inside.

CADDY "THAD" OF SANDYSINKS

BY DELL MILTIMORE.

When we was leavin' Joe's for home
  thet time he was in town,
Joe said he'd brought a neighbor boy
  whose fam'ly name was Brown,
To spend the summertime with us; he thought 'twould do no harm
For me t' hev a caddy who could help me round th' farm.
The boy looked sort o' spindly—as though he'd studied hard;
They said he was "way up in G" on ev'ry teacher's card.

A quiet sort o' little boy with sunny
  smilin' eyes,
Who'd never taken time t' play—so anxious to be wise.
But Wisdom always don't consist o'
  jest what's found in books;
There's some thet's found with fishpoles jest fishin' in the brooks.
Jest learn t' live, don't live t' learn, a fine boy's motto is,
An' for the summertime, at least, I vowed it should be his.

I asked him what they called him at his home up in the town.
He smiled an' said, "My name is Thaddeus De Alton Brown;
My two front names are awful—sounds
  so stuckup like, you know.
I wish thet they hed called me Jack, or Tom, or mebbe Joe—
My grandma says, 'De Alton Brown,' my sister calls me 'Lad,'
To mother I'm jest 'Thaddy,' but my father calls me 'Thad.'"

The next day out upon the links I talked with Caddy Thad
An' said, "A fust class caddy will never be a cad.
The fust rule, 'Be a gentleman,' should always be in mind;
To players be respectful, an' to other caddies kind;
An' never let yourself forget, although the task seems small,
It's always best to do it well or do it not at all."

An' ev'ry week when Joe come down t' play at Sandysinks
He'd give our little Thad a hug an'
  tell me that he thinks,
"Our boy's a-goin' to be a man afore
  the summer's through;
He's growin' like a pigweed; he's the best o' caddies, too."
An' all the boys fer miles around think he's the finest lad,
Their mothers like t' hev them come a-visitin' with Thad.

Their fav'rite sport is quite wuth while
  —it's sort o' playin' school;
They set around a circle an' Thad sets upon a stool
An' reads them all the rules o' golf, an'
  then each one in turn
Will answer questions asked by Thad an' ev'ry one must learn
The uses of the diffrunt clubs an' where t' stand an walk
An' when the players makes a shot to never laugh nor talk.

An' how t' tee the player's ball an'
  never lag behind,
An' what the player mostly wants must always be in mind.
They larnt the meanin' of approach an'
  bogey, stance an' sole,
Were careful not t' mark the turf when standin' near the hole;
An' ev'ry day a crowd come round these boys was all on deck,
Each got a job as caddy an' he done
  it well, by Heck!

INQUISITIVE FANS

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Is there such a thing as a catcher's balk and does the catcher get charged for it? J. P.

There is. He does.

Fort Dodge, Ia.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Man on first. Man on third. Batter hits to shortstop, who fields ball cleanly. He makes a motion to throw home, then to second, and then throws to first too late to catch the batter. Should the shortstop be charged with an error? R. G. R.

It is left to the scorer's judgment. The majority credit the batter with a hit in such cases, there being no column for "bonehead errors."

Henry Schwab, Butterfield, inn—Hans Wagner is an American.

J. A. Ragor, Chicago.—Saier is not the only injured National league player included in the team limits.

and equipment must be cut to the quick if not totally eliminated. Competitive sport with parasitic growth eliminated is the best sort of training for students and soldiers.

Aids Preparedness, Stagg Says.

Director Stagg, speaking unofficially before action by the University of Chicago authorities, says:

I believe we are all heart and soul in preparation for this war, but at the same time that we are making preparation I cannot see any reason why athletics, which will be a distinct aid in the preparation of the men physically for the hardships which will come, should not be continued. Personally, I am a strong believer in continuing normal things, even under the greatest sort of trials and distress, so far as it possibly can be done, because from my experience as a physical director I know that they have an immense lot to do with keeping people in health, physically and mentally, and that reason alone would be sufficient in my opinion for continuing althetics. Three out of four leading military men to whom I wrote on the question of whether to continue intercollegiate athletics or not were entirely favorable to their being kept up.

President John Cavanaugh of Notre Dame university says:

If this war is to call forth our full resources, nothing is more necessary than public sanity, and in the days of ordeal to come, play will be just as necessary as nourishment or rest. It seems ridiculous—all this clamor that the college boy shall give up his own particular kind of amusement. Do the editors and the college presidents give up their golf and their theater, their good music, or their leisure? Athletics are better preparation for army service than even military drill.

POOR BASE RUNNING MAY COST ROWLANDS CHANCE FOR A. L. RAG

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Some weeks ago, before the baseball season opened, the writer expressed the opinion that if the White Sox did not win the American league pennant they would have only themselves to blame. After watching Comiskey's men for said some weeks the prediction can be made more specific, to wit: If they do not cop it it will be because they beat themselves out of it on the bases.

The attack of the White Sox has not proved as strong as it looked on paper when the season opened. Batters who have hit the ball consistently all through their careers have fallen below their previous performances, but that may be laid to various sources and may not be permanent. Thus far it has been offset by an unexpected improvement in the defensive strength of the Rowlands.

Pitchers Better than Expected.

The pitching staff, in spite of the loss of Scott and Faber as regular performers, has exceeded expectations. Russell, instead of being handicapped by the crook in his arm last spring, has been pitching better than ever, and Cicotte has been so effective that enemy managers have been trying to prove there is something uncanny in his delivery.

Unless all previous experience counts for nothing, the batsmen on the White Sox roster will begin hitting up to form some day, and it is not possible that Faber and Scott will be out of commission all the year. Consequently the attack ought not to get any weaker and the defense ought to improve.

Handicapped on Bases.

Yet it is doubtful if the White Sox at their best can be sufficiently superior to their opponents to win the pennant with the handicap they place on themselves by their lack of judgment in running bases. Most of the defeats they have suffered this season can be traced directly to that fault, instead of to defects in defense or to superior strength in the enemy.

President Comiskey, who played the game himself for years and knows it inside and out, summarized the weakness of his team briefly while watching one of the spring exhibition games.

"When I was playing ball," he said, "and we got the bases full the other fellows had to put us out. My ball players seem to think it is up to them to help the other fellows by putting themselves out. I don't know how many games they lost last year by helping their opponents out of tough holes with bad base running."

Some Defects of Sox.

It is a serious drag on the offensive strength of a team, this ill timed base-running. Take the case where the first man up reaches first and one run is needed. The expected thing is a bunt to advance the runner to second. The opposing team expects it, and the simplest defense for the play is to call for a pitch out. Time and again this has been worked against the White Sox. The batsman, overanxious to bunt, goes after the pitchout with his bat. The runner, fearing to be forced at second if the ball is bunted, strays too far off first, and a throw from the catcher to first nips the runner before he can get back.

Against this fault of lethargic wits the coachers cannot protect the runners. To pick a man off a base it is only necessary to catch him off his balance when the throw is made.

No alert runner need be caught by a pitchout, because he can detect it in time to get back to his base. The wisest coacher in the world cannot often detect a trick far enough in advance to telegraph his warning to a runner in time to save him.

Indiana Defeats Purdue in Sixteenth Round, 1-0

Bloomington, Ind., June 2.—[Special.]—Indiana defeated its old time state rival, Purdue, 1 to 0, this afternoon in a baseball game that lasted sixteen innings. The game was void of spectacular plays, being a battle between the two pitchers from the start. Kunkle was on the slab for the Hoosiers until the completion of the ninth and was replaced by Ridley, who finished the job. With two men on bases in the last half of the sixteenth Rayl poled a nice hit into deep center, scoring Rauschenbach. Indiana rooters staged a nightshirt parade downtown after the game. Score:

HOSPITAL CORPS LEADER IN MEET AS RAIN COMES

Thousand Boys Compete in First of a Series of Athletic Events.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

Rain again marred the sailors' track and field meet yesterday at the Great Lakes (Ill.) training station athletic field. The officials were forced to call off the field events which were listed on the afternoon's program on account of the heavy rain which started falling at 1 o'clock, making a soggy track and field.

The meet, which was the first of a series of athletic events to be staged by John B. Kaufman, P. A. surgeon, U. S. N., chief athletic officer, drew over 1,000 entries. The boys completed eight of the nine morning events when the bugle blew for the noon mess.

Hospital Corps in Lead.

The hospital corps training school, which comprised seven units, led at the intermission with 37 points, the Michigan Naval militia running a close second with 34 points, and the engineering corps third with 8 marks. Company D of the hospital unit was the big point getter for that aggregation with 12 marks, while Company E was next in line with 9.

The Michigan Naval militia squad, which is largely composed of University of Michigan students, are strong favorites for the honors. Jack Smith, captain elect of the University of Michigan football team, and Raymond, half back of the same eleven, landed points in the 220 yard dash, while Foster of Company J took the mile run in 4:56 3-5.

Other Events This Week.

The remaining field events may be run off early this week.

CLUB'S ATHLETES TO DRIVE C. A. A. HOSPITAL CARS

Loomis, Lobdell and Curtis to Pilot Ambulances at French Front.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

The Chicago Athletic association will send into the war zone in France as American field ambulance drivers three Chicago boys, all former University of Wisconsin athletes. The drivers of C. A. A. cars are Harrison Lobdell, a junior member of the C. A. A. and a son of H. H. Lobdell, 3958 Ellis avenue, who has given Chicago Athletic association ambulance No. 1 outright; Jo G. Loomis, champion sprinter, and Willard L. Curtis, a junior member. Lobdell will drive the car bought by his father.

Loomis, who is a son of F. F. Loomis, 1127 Church street, Evanston, will drive Chicago Athletic association ambulance No. 2, which was given by the following twenty members of the athletic club:

A. O. Kuemsted,
J. O. Nessen,

Curtis has been a point winner on Cherry Circle track teams for years, and while a 300 yard and quarter mile racer at Francis Parker school he was not beaten. Lobdell is a graduate of St. John's Military academy. He is 20 years old. Loomis won more points than any other athlete while representing America in last year's track invasion of the Scandinavian countries. He is 26 years old. He won the indoor sprints title of America in the championship A. A. U. meet at New York last winter.

Carry Wounded from Front.

The war activities of the three C. A. A. boys will be entirely in the line of ambulance driving, and will consist in carrying the injured from the front to the field and base hospitals.

Auburn

IF you want to be thoroughly satisfied with the car you buy put your money into an Auburn Six—a car that has never had to make extravagant claims in order to sell.

When you buy an Auburn you get a car that is conceded to be one of the best built cars in America at its price or anywhere near it.

The Auburn Six has behind it 17 seasons of successful motor car building. Auburn makers are among the five or six oldest and soundest automobile manufacturers in the country.

When you buy an Auburn Six you know you will always be able to get service and service parts if you need them—and your Auburn will have much higher used-car value a year or two from now because there is no question about the company's future.

"Most for the Money" is not merely a selling phrase, it is a fact.

Compare the Auburn Light-Six—the 6-39—with all other cars at $1100 to $1200. No other car in this class offers the big size, impressive appearance, beautiful lines, handsome finish and adequate power that you get in the Auburn 6-39 Touring Car or Four-Passenger Roadster at $1145. The same is true of the Auburn 6-44 for seven passengers, at $1535. It is the biggest seven-passenger car selling for less than $2800.

You know that practically all motor car prices have advanced from $100 to $200 within the past year. But the price of the Auburn 6-39 is only $60 higher than a year ago and the price of the Auburn 6-44 is unchanged.

Why not take advantage of these facts and invest your money now in an Auburn while it has the greatest purchasing power

NAME OF DARCY WILL GO DOWN IN RING ANNALS

Losing Fight with Death Ended Game Desire for Vindication.

BY RAY PEARSON.

In the years to come generation after generation of boxing followers will have something to talk about when the name Les Darcy is mentioned. They will talk of him as a fighter, for his feats in the ring will go down into history, but probably the misfortune and the untimely death of this wonderful Australian athlete will be the subject that will be of the greatest interest to those who love to see a man to man contest from the ringside.

There is much that might be written about this Australian kid who was "counted out" by the grim reaper, who plays no favorites, at a Memphis hospital. Enough is known about the misfortune he encountered when he came to this country to show Americans his pugilistic skill and was prevented from doing so by the governors of no less than three states who put the brand of "slacker" on him. So there is no need of repetition on this point here.

Darcy a Real Scrapper.

What Darcy might have done in the rings of this country had he been given the chance is not hard to guess. He was a fighting man of class and he had the one thing essential to success—the punch. He would have been the winner that he was in Australia. So much for Les Darcy as a fighter.

Quiet, modest, and courageous, with intelligence a bit above the average for boxers, Darcy bore no resemblance to a man who would shirk any responsibility placed before him. He was charged with leaving his native land to escape service in the army. Yet he was not of an age to enlist, and conscription was not in effect when he left Australia. But he had determined long before he quit Australia to make a visit to this country to fight the best of the American middleweight boxers. So he came and was branded a slacker in Australia and also in this country, which caused him to be blacklisted from the ring.

Yet Les Darcy died an American soldier.

Australian Not a Quitter.

It is hard to imagine that a man would desert one country only to enlist with another, when the cause is a common one, as it is in this battle with German autocracy. Perhaps Darcy would not have become an American soldier at the time he did were it not for the action of the governors concerning his ring engagements. But as one who had the opportunity and became well acquainted with him to get a fair idea of the stuff of which the Australian was built, the writer can say that Darcy would have answered the call to fight for the allies just as quickly as he would have fought any opponent within the narrow confines of the four ropes.

There are a good many people who knew Darcy who say that he died of a broken heart because of the treatment accorded him in this country. That is all wrong. The writer knows better than that, for while the sting of being called a slacker stung him to the soul, never once did he show the spirit of giving up or quitting. He joined the aviation corps of the United States army in Memphis, but he never had a chance to fight for the country. Instead, he had another battle on hand—that for his life.

Vindication His Aim.

And Darcy fought that battle just as he would have fought for the flag. If he could have gone to France to wage war on Germany he would have had an opportunity to vindicate himself and Darcy always had that in view, regardless of his sore heart. His final and losing battle in the hospital was characteristic of the man. He died fighting.

Just to give an insight into that losing battle the following is quoted from a letter written by Freddie Gilmore, Darcy's pal and manager, to the writer, the letter being received the day before the Australian died:

"Les has been conscious nearly all the time, even during his sinking spells, but at times he talks at random. At times he imagines he is in a contest and that he has taken the count of seven. He said yesterday while talking in a daze, 'I will get up. They only counted seven, and I will win yet.' He tells me time and again of how 'they all think I will die, but I will fool them.'

"The physicians in the hospital who have been attending him say they never saw his equal in gameness, and he always is jolly. He does not seem to realize that he is so seriously sick. He never complains."

So there's the picture of Les Darcy, and they called him a slacker. Judge for yourself.

Hammer to Box Mitchell at Milwaukee on June 15

There's going to be a battle at Milwaukee on June 15. Promoter Tom Andrews yesterday succeeded in matching Ever Hammer of this city, and Richie Mitchell, the Milwaukee lightweight idol, for a ten rounder on that date. Both were knocked out by Champion Benny Leonard, but are hankering for a return match with the New Yorker, who may give it to the winner.

Hammer will arrive in the city today from Sioux City, where he has been appearing in a carnival, in plenty of time to register in the draft Tuesday.

Kid Hogan, the local lightweight, yesterday was named as substitute for Johnny Schiff against Johnny Underwood at Memphis tomorrow night. Hogan left for the scene of battle last night.

Kopin Fouls Billy Kramer in Bout at Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Pa., June 2.—[Special.]—Battling Kopin of Jamestown, N. Y., suffering the remorse of a poor loser, started to use foul tactics against Billy Kramer in the windup at the National A. C. and the referee stopped the bout in the fourth round. Kramer had a big lead when Kopin introduced varieties of fighting not tolerated here. He began by elbowing, and when he changed to butting the referee stopped the bout.

STREAM FISHING ACCESSORIES

THE women folks call it trash; other nonanglers call it junk, but the miscellaneous plunder a stream fisherman accumulates in the course of many seasons' stream fishing occupies one of the warmest corners of his heart. It is, pomo-optically speaking, "the apple of his eye."

We once saw an old trout fisherman weep over the loss of a trout basket that had been carried by his grandfather and his father—an heirloom of a family of anglers. We helped capture the wretch that stole it and the "grand and glorious feeling" of getting back his beloved creel is all that saved the young reprobate from being burned at the stake.

The willow or wicker fish basket is an institution that has been handed down to us from generation to generation, and one can become enamored of an old, battered, smelly creel in a way that passeth the understanding of the poor, benighted folks who "don't care much for fishing."

Every stream fisherman should have a basket, but for week ends they are hard to carry and for this purpose we prefer a folding canvas one. Writers on angling are prejudiced against canvas creels mostly for sentimental reasons and because they have never used one.

Some of these canvas creels are stiffened in the back by a thin piece of metal working loosely on a rivet. That's not the kind to get. The "duplex" type that folds twice and has two metal uprights at the corners in the back is much better, as the "belly band" of the new style sling fits under these uprights the same as it does in the slits in the back of a willow basket. Sousing a canvas creel in the water once in a while keeps the fish cool by evaporation on the same principle as a desert water bottle.

The new style sling, by the way, has the shoulder strap over the left shoulder instead of crossing the body and hanging from the right, and the basket is held close to the body by a belt. This leaves the right arm—the one you use most for casting—unimpeded. They cost from 30 cents to $1.

There are several kinds of leader boxes, from the home made affair utilizing an old tin tobacco box to the elaborate combination leader and eyed fly box. A leader box of aluminum with two felt pads, for keeping the leaders moist, costs something like 15 cents and is plenty good enough.

Some of the older anglers cling to snelled flies and consequently must use a fly hook. The original type with clips to hold the hooks and a coiled spring to keep the snell stretched is more practical than the newer affair consisting of a loose leaf binder holding a number of envelopes.

The younger generation takes more to eyed flies or flies without snells. These are carried in eyed fly boxes which are lined with either strips of cork, mica windowed compartments, or metal clips. Personally, we prefer the clips. There is a big variety of styles and finishes in these boxes, but the aluminum is better looking than the enameled, although the latter is good enough if you are economically inclined.

A good box for anglers who use both bass and trout flies has one side lined with three rows of seven clips, for the larger flies, and the other with three rows of ten clips for the trout sizes, making a capacity of fifty-one flies all told. Price, in enameled finish, $1.25.

Some day some smart man will make a fly box and leader box of a material that will float and thereby prevent many a broken heart. The landing net for stream fishing must be short handled. Some are provided with a button hole to button on your clothing, but one once balked on us (à la Pitt) and refused to come unbuttoned at the critical moment and we went back to using the old fashioned kind with an elastic cord.

This doesn't necessarily prove anything against the button-on type of net, as hundreds of anglers prefer that kind, but it shows how little things govern sportsmen's preferences as to equipment. Perhaps the fact that we lost the biggest bass we ever hooked on a fly through that balky net has something to do with it!

A good sized pocketbook with three or four compartments holds the remainder of the stuff to be carried on a stream. In this go a few tiny spinners, snelled hooks for bait fishing, dry leaders, split shot, and some means of cutting surplus gut. We use one of those pocket manicures or finger nail clips for this purpose and it works fine. If you fish with dry flies you will also need an oil bottle for oiling the fly and perhaps a felt pad covered with "deer fat" (mutton tallow) to renew the grease on your line.

A pair of amber glasses comes in handy when the riffles are throwing the sunbeams into your eyes.

CANNEFAX TAKES FINAL CUE GAME

Bob Cannefax of St. Louis gave August Kieckhefer of Milwakee his only defeat in the all-star three cushion tournament at Mussey's Monroe street room, taking the final game last night, 50 to 45, in 70 innings. The victory gave the world's champion a tie for second place with Maupome, but as the latter had made arrangements to start for Mexico today, they flipped a coin and Cannefax won second prize of $200, Maupone getting $150. Kieckhefer won first money, $250, with seven wins and one loss. The game was slow until the fortieth inning, when Cannefax ran 9, the high run of the tournament. Score at each tenth inning:

CANNEFAX—6 9 14 25 30 42 50. Innings, 70.
KIECKHEFER — 5 12 18 25 29 39 45. Innings, 69.
Referee—Ben Klatcher.

The rapid growth of the three cushion game, coupled with a desire for more compact circuits, has led to tentative plans for the formation of a second league confined to the leading cities of the middle west. It is not intended to make the new organization an opponent of the Interstate league, but to work with it. One suggestion is to have the Interstate change its name to National and to name the proposed new organization the American.

Two St. Johns Teams to Play.

The St. Johns, champions of the Evangelical Lutheran Junior league of 1916 and winner of the Judge Stelk trophy, will play the St. Johns of Forest Park today at Forest Park.

VICTORY BY NECK FOR KING GORIN IN TURF CLASSIC

Garner's Great Ride Wins Kentucky Handicap Before Large Crowd.

Louisville, Ky., June 2.—The 4 year old Transvaal-Ethel Simpson colt King Gorin, owned by R. L. Baker & Co. of Lexington, Ky., under a masterful ride by Jockey Mack Garner, and favored by a light impost of 108 pounds, won the fifth renewal of the Kentucky handicap at Douglas park today by a neck from John W. Schorr's 3 year old Broomstick colt Cudgel before one of the largest crowds that ever saw the running of the stake. Half a length back was Andrew Miller's Roamer, which made his third try for the event.

Boots, coupled in the betting with Ed Crump as the A. K. Macomber entry, finished fourth, beaten for the show money by two length. Old Rosebud, the 9 to 5 favorite, and Opportunity finished in the ruck after setting a terrific pace for half a mile.

The time of 2:04 1-5 for the mile and a quarter was remarkable considering the condition of the track, which was lumpy and slow. Summaries:

Kentucky handicap, worth $12,200 to winner, mile and a quarter—King Gorin, 108 [Garner], $43.50, $21.10, $7.50, won; Cudgel, 103 [Murphy], $14.20, $7.50, second; Roamer, 126 [Schuttinger], $4.80, third. Time, 2:04 1-5. Embroidery, Old Rosebud, Hodge, Ed Crump, Ellison, Boots, Col. Vennie, and Opportunity ran.

Omar Khayyam Sells at Auction Sale for $26,600

New York, June 2.—Omar Khayyam, winner of the Kentucky Derby, sold for $26,600 this afternoon in the sale of running horses from the stables of C. K. G. Billings and Frederick Johnson at Belmont park this afternoon. Wilfred Vihau of Montreal was the buyer.

The price for Omar Khayyam is the largest paid for a thoroughbred at a public sale in many years. Many prominent owners were active in the bidding for the 3 year old star.

Results of the stake races follow:

The Fashion stakes for 2 year old fillies, value $3,500, 5 furlongs—Rosie O'Grady, 112 [Robinson], 14 to 5, 4 to 5, and out, won; Royal Ensign, 112 [Kleeger], 8 to 5, 3 to 5, and out, second; Mazda, 109 [Butwell], 4 to 1, 7 to 5, and 2 to 5, third. Time, 1:01. Myrtle Gale and Empress ran.

The Withers, 3 year olds, value $5,000, 1 mile—Hourless, 118 [Butwell], 13 to 5, 7 to 10, and out, won; Rickety, 118 [Robinson], 10 to 1, 2 to 1, and 3 to 5, second; Skeptic, 118 [Keogh], 15 to 1, 3 to 1, and even, third. Time, 1:39. Campfire and Ballad ran. Omar Khayya mscratched.

Corinthians vs. Swedish in Replay of Soccer Tie

Two important soccer matches are scheduled for this afternoon. The Corinthians and Swedish-Americans, who played a 1 to 1 tie game in the semifinal round of the Peel cup competition last Sunday, will replay their match at Bricklayers' field, Thirty-fifth street and Wentworth avenue. At Slavia field, Forty-sixth street and Kedzie avenue, Harvey and Lincoln Park will meet in the deciding match for the second division title.

PHILLIPS PAIR SWEEPS PREP NET TOURNEY

Exiner and Forster Win Titles in the Midway Meet.

Alex Exiner and Harold Forster of Wendell Phillips won the University of Chicago interscholastic tennis tourney on the Midway courts, and Forster repeated with a singles victory from the field of 100 starters. A. A. Stagg Jr. was the other singles finalist and Berg and Kohn of Shortridge High, Indianapolis, were defeated for the title by the south side pair.

Weather conditions made good tennis even more impossible than good time in the track meet. Wet courts and the high wind led all players to employ easy lobbing tactics. Forster won his title by consistent tennis, for there were few flashes in his play during the three days of the tourney. Paired with Exiner, who survived until the semi-final round in the singles, he played the same steady tennis. Summaries:

WHIST QUERIES

[To the Editor.]—Please decide following score at auction bridge: North deals and buys for two no trump.

North plays A, K, Q, J, 8 of clubs.

East has 5, 7, 9 of clubs. East plays 5 on ace of clubs and then refuses clubs on the K, Q, J, and then claims he is entitled to the 9 of clubs trick when north leads the 8 after refusing clubs three times, and calling north's attention to his own revoke and laying the 7 and 9 face up on table.

North claims he is entitled to 150 for the first revoke and a 100 for the other two, but the point we wish for a decision on is if east is entitled to the 9 of clubs trick after revoking three times and then laying his cards face up and calling north's attention to his own mistake. E. L. D.

Ans.—For the first revoke north was entitled to three tricks or 100 points, as he chose. For each subsequent revoke north was entitled to 100 points.

East was entitled to win a trick with the club 9, but no player may revoke purposely and be considered honorable.

City.—[To the Editor.]—When was the lead of lowest of three [in declared trumps] made a rule, if it is a rule? One used to lead higher of two and top of three. I. D.

Ans.—Highest has always been the rule, but it must often be broken.

RED CROSS MEET FOR NET PLACE

While no prizes will be given, the Chicago patriotic tennis tournament for the benefit of the Red Cross, which begins June 9 at the Chicago Tennis club, bids fair to be the biggest tourney ever run off here. The meet will run from June 9 to June 17, on the fourteen courts of the north side club. The tournament has been officially sanctioned by the Red Cross, and will take the place of the annual city championships.

The thirty-five clubs of the Chicago T. A., which as local governing body will have charge of the tournament, have made great efforts to register every player in the city for the event, and the flood of entries received by Secretary Harry S. Walsh assures a bigger field than in the palmiest days before the war sent sports slumping. Every bit of the proceeds will go to the Red Cross. Entries close Thursday with Secretary Walsh, 1510 National Bank building. Entry fee is $2.

The Minocqua Tennis club at Belden and Sheffield avenues, has begun a campaign to add to its membership roll, playing privileges being open to both men and women. The club now has ninety members and nine hard courts. Correspondence should be addressed to Secretary A. C. Conolly, 2249 Sheffield avenue, phone Lincoln 1857.

The South Parks club has just opened the half dozen new stone dust courts finished since the close of winter on the club plot at Sixty-first street and Calumet avenue.

Chicagoan Gets Golf Job.

Bloomington, Ill., June 2.—[Special.]—H. H. Hart of Chicago has been engaged as instructor by the McLean County Golf club and will report June 6 to remain during the coming season. The first tournament of importance will take place on July 4.

SKAT OFFICIALS LOOK FOR 5,000 IN BIG TOURNEY

BY A. I. LAUER.

The skat tournament to be held at the Coliseum June 16 and 17 is open to all players of the game. The $5 entrance fee covers admission to both sessions on Saturday and Sunday and includes membership in the North American Skat league.

Of the various tournaments held in this country, this being the twentieth annual meet of the league, the coming tournament undoubtedly will be the largest gathering of skat players. At least 500 cities in the central states will be represented. Entries have been received from all parts of the country, some as far as California, Oregon, and Washington.

Arrange for 1,500 Tables.

Not to be caught unprepared, should the threatened invasion of 5,000 or more players materialize, the national officers have made arrangements to have more than 1,500 tables at their disposal. On account of the large number of advance promises, they have thought it advisable to have the drawing of seats begin on Saturday, June 16, at 9 a. m. This drawing for that day's session will continue until the opening of the tournament at 7:45 p. m. by Mayor William Hale Thompson.

The big booster automobile trip undertaken by the national officers is headed by President Niehoff, with the object of arousing the lukewarm skat onkeln to attend the national meet. Reports received thus far indicate great enthusiasm all along the route, with promises of large delegations from all through Wisconsin.

The other members of the party are: Cas Moore, H. S. Herzog, John D. Hoff, John M. Heany, Fred Kohl, B. O'Hara, N. T. Brenner, and Fred L. Blanke.

Bids for 1918 Tourney.

The following cities thus far have indicated their desire to hold the next national tournament: Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Buffalo, New York, Denver, Minneapolis, and Milwaukee. Indications point to Milwaukee as the successful city.

Tufts Ball Team Disbands.

11000 Partners
Working As One to Give Most Miles per Dollar

THE stock distribution by which 90 per cent of the members of the Firestone Organization accepted partnership in the Company, is a further move toward the betterment of the service to the public. It is a vital factor for the development of man power which is the lever of all successful business.

But while you may not be concerned with the ethical side of the partnership, you as a user of tires are vitally interested in its effect on the quality and mileage cost of Firestone Tires.

Now that Firestone workers are owners of the business, it is logical to suppose that there will be improvements all along the line. Efficiency has always been the Firestone watchword, and everybody knows that men are more efficient when personal pride and ambition are involved.

Firestone workers are literally Firestone builders, building not only tires but fame and business success. Action is quickened, ability encouraged, enthusiasm spurred. The results are plain: quality improved, production stimulated, most miles per dollar emphasized.

Equip with Firestone Tires and get the benefit of those long-established values which go with the Firestone name.

THE feature of the week's real estate market, which was exceedingly dull during the early part of the week and unusually active at the close, was the purchase by the Western Union Telegraph company on South La Salle street and its building plans in that connection. Coming at this time, it is of great interest and will undoubtedly serve to help the market, which has been indulging in a case of the dumps for some time.

The faint hearted should take much courage from the statement of General Manager Gaunt that the company looks with confidence on the future as promising a great era of general business and industrial activity.

Remarkable Building.

The company's building plans contemplate, it is stated, the erection of what is said will be the most complete building in the way of telegraph requirements in the world. It will be 100 feet south of Van Buren street, adjoining on the north the Fort Dearborn hotel at the southeast corner of Van Buren and La Salle streets, and will occupy 300x101 feet, which the company has just purchased from the estate of Marshall Field and from Carl Hansen for a total consideration of $594,000.

The building, which will house the general offices and all operating departments of the company, will be a six story and two basement steel structure, of sufficient strength to carry fifteen stories, and will cost $1,000,000. General Manager C. H. Gaunt of the western division of the company, who gave out the announcement of the company's plans, said that altogether the move will cost the company about $2,000,000.

"This large outlay under present circumstances," said Mr. Gaunt, "is sufficient indication of the Western Union company's faith in the future. We are building with every confidence for the greatest trade and industrial era that this country has ever seen, which will develop during and after the war."

The Negotiations.

Albert L. Strauss represented all the parties as broker, conducting the entire negotiations, while legal and other details were attended to by A. F. Burleigh, secretary of the Western Union company; the Chicago Title and Trust company, West & Eckhart, and Wilson, Moore & McIlvaine.

The company acquired from the Marshall Field estate the premises 411-429 La Salle street, 200x101 feet, in two parcels, with three and four story stables and garages, for $400,000, and from Mr. Hansen the premises 431-41, 97x101 feet, for $194,000. The improvements were given no value, making the sale at the rate less than $20 a square foot. The Field estate acquired the property in 1870, the present board of review valuation being $299,889. It will be necessary for Marshall Field & Co., which now occupies the stables, to acquire new quarters. The Hansen property was valued by the board of review at $70,212.

Many Refinements.

In addition to every possible mechanical contrivance to facilitate the business of the company, elaborate plans are contemplated for the purpose of contributing to the health and convenience of the 4,000 employés of the company. There will be large rest and recreation rooms, lecture hall, gymnasium, and showers. The plans of the building will be prepared by Graham, Burnham & Co.

The present building of the company at the southwest corner of Clark street and Jackson boulevard was purchased in 1892 from the Phoenix Insurance company for $1,500,000. It is a ten story structure on a lot 50x213 feet, three-quarters of which is occupied by the company. It also occupies about three-quarters of the Traders building on the south and a large amount of space in the Imperial and Webster buildings.

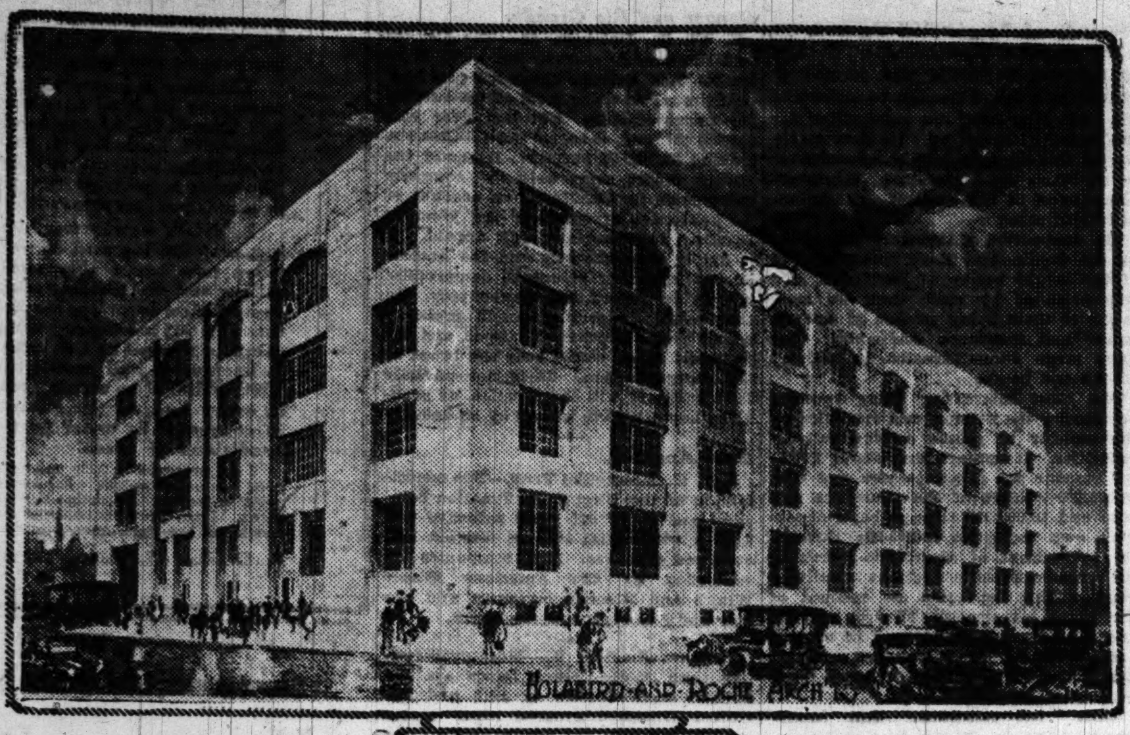
The statement is made that Chicago is the greatest wire center in the world and that the telegraphic traffic of the city has more than doubled in three years. The company expects to occupy its proposed new home in about eighteen months.

Better than Previous Week.

There were other important features in the week's market, which, despite the fact a holiday cut into the business activities of the week, made a much better showing than during the previous week. It also may be said that other large deals are pending in the downtown district, which promise to be closed within the next week or two.

NEW NORTH SIDE FACTORY

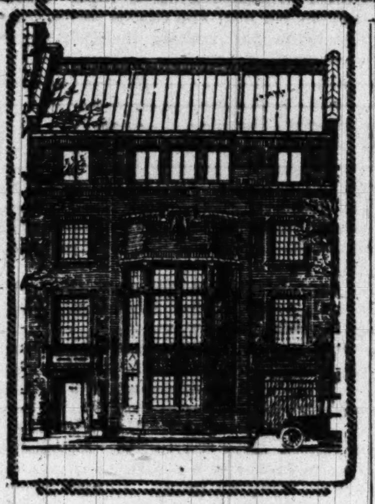
Building Under Construction at Ohio and Orleans Streets for R. J. Ederer Company, Net Makers.



A notable addition to north side factory buildings is the one under construction at the southwest corner of Ohio and Orleans streets for the R. J. Ederer company, manufacturers of nets. The building, which was designed by Holabird & Roche, is four stories and basement, with ground area of 100x175 feet, and will cost in the neighborhood of $175,000.

Another illustration of the development of the north side district for business and professional purposes is the building now nearing completion for the occupancy of Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton, architects, at 814 Tower court, opposite the waterworks tower.

In addition to large reception rooms, private offices, drafting room, library and file room, etc., there will be a garage for the convenience of the occupants and their clients.



MANUFACTURING PROPERTY DEALS MARKET FEATURE

Both Transactions Are on Western Avenue Boulevard.

Manufacturing property, which has been exceedingly dull for some time, was much in evidence last week. Two transactions in it constituted the most interesting feature of the market, with the exception of the big downtown deal. Of much interest also was the fact that both transactions were in Western Avenue boulevard.

The most important of these, and of interest as being one of the largest deals in this class of property in a long time, involved two large parcels at the northwest corner of Western Avenue boulevard and Forty-seventh street, belonging to the Brunswick-Balke-Collender company. There are twenty-three and three-quarters acres altogether, which have been sold by Hodge & Chandler, the Chicago Title and Trust company taking title for the purchaser, whose name is withheld for the present.

The consideration is reported at $30,000, which is at the rate of 41 cents a square foot. The legal details were attended to by Ryan, Condon & Livingston for the sellers and Winston, Payne, Strawn and Shaw for the purchaser.

West Front on Boulevard.

The property has a west frontage of 782 feet on the boulevard and 773 feet south frontage on Forty-seventh street and 1,279 feet east frontage on the railroad right of way, and is served by the Chicago Junction, Pennsylvania, and Indiana roads, and the Chicago river, giving it car load and less than car load service by river and rail at Chicago rates. The purchaser will occupy a part of the property and the remainder will be for sale through Hodge & Chandler.

The part conveyed by the Brunswick-Balke-Collender company comprises the eight and one-half acres fronting on the boulevard, which the company purchased through the same brokers about nine years ago with the purpose of using it as a site for a new plant. The larger parcel, containing fourteen and one-half acres, fronts in Forty-seventh street, and was acquired at the same time by a syndicate headed by Mr. Bensinger.

Extending east from this tract to Lincoln street are the two tracts sold by the same brokers, one of thirty-five acres sold for Thomas Carey in 1914 for $350,000, and the other of twenty-two acres to the Chicago Railway Equipment company, on which the company erected a large plant. These four tracts and the new central manufacturing district in Thirty-ninth street are all in the same square mile of territory.

Deal Covers Seven Acres.

The other property, covering seven acres with a west frontage of 332 feet on the boulevard 300 feet south of Fifty-second street, has been sold by Henry Hogane through Hodge & Chandler to two purchasers. The consideration is not disclosed, but it is understood to have been about $62,000, or at the rate of 20 cents a square foot.

Lot 18 of the tract, which contains about three and one-half acres, was sold to the Hellmuth Cooperage company and another lot about the same size was purchased for investment by Mrs. Jeannette C. Murphy, widow of Dr. John B. Murphy. The property is one of the two industrial sites remaining in the boulevard between Forty-third and Fifty-fifth streets, and it is stated that both parcels eventually will be attractively improved.

Eleven Parcels on the West Side Transferred

There was filed for record the transfer by Anton Olzewski to Joseph J. Elias of eleven parcels of land, three on Halsted, two on Wallace street and Parnell avenue, with single conveyances on other streets in that locality. A short time ago the Universal State bank took over the private bank of Mr. Olzewski, when there were filed for record several transfers by him to the bank. It is thought the present transfers are of a similar

William L. Pugh Acquires Prairie Avenue Corner

Record was made of the acquirement by William L. Pugh of four parcels at the southwest corner of Prairie avenue and Thirtieth street, 100 feet on Prairie by 180 feet on Thirtieth street, from three different grantors, a nominal consideration being given. Mr. Pugh has taken title for the actual purchaser, who is said to plan extensive improvements.

They comprised the property in State street fifty-two feet north of Randolph street, east front, 28x40 feet; Wabash avenue ninety-five feet south of Ninth street, east front, 55x165 feet; Wabash ninety-seven feet north of Twelfth street, east front, 80x165 feet; Wabash 144 feet north of Washington, west front, 48x162 feet; Washington street eighty feet east of Franklin street, north front, 40x182 feet; Madison street sixty feet east of Market street, south front, 40x180 feet; the northwest corner of Lake and Franklin streets, 40x140 feet; River street 225 feet north of South Water street, 34x100 feet; Wabash avenue 333 feet south of Twenty-third street, west front, 66½x181 feet.

Woman's Gift to Church Is Placed Upon Record

Record was made of the conveyance by quitclaim by Mary H. Dole to the New First Congregational church of what is known as the Carpenter hall property in Ashland avenue 106 feet south of Washington boulevard, lot 47½ x185½ feet, east front. It was a gift to the church by Mrs. Dole, who purchased it from the Chicago Theological seminary for a consideration said to have been in the neighborhood of $7,200. The property adjoins the church and will be used by the latter for church purposes.

Staver Motor Company New Service Station

The Staver Motor Car company is to build a $100,000 service station building at the northwest corner of Garfield boulevard and Federal street on land recently acquired for the company. This comprises a plot with a frontage of 110 feet on Garfield boulevard and 241 feet on Federal street, which was included in six transfers just filed for record, in which title was taken by Josephine A. Flynn. The proposed building is to be three stories high and work is to begin at once.

OUTSIDE DEALS MAKE A FAIRLY GOOD SHOWING

Under the circumstances outside business property made a fairly good showing, although there was nothing in the transactions reported or made matters of record of any particular importance.

The row of eight one story stores at 2546-58 North Clark street has been sold by Milton S. Plotke to Dr. B. Miller at a reported value of $45,000, the buyer giving in part payment the properties at 1721 Burling street, 1044-46 Mohawk street, valued at $12,000. Richard A. Connell and George A. Montgomery were the brokers in the transaction.

The property at 6130-36 Broadway, be-

The property at 6130-36 Broadway, being sixty-three feet south of Hood avenue, lot 85x125 feet, improved with a building containing four stores, one flat, and eight garages, has been sold by G. A. Weiland of Crown Point to M. A. Cushman of Michigan City, consideration nominal, but said to have been $83,500, subject to $6,500, the purchaser conveying clear property in Michigan City valued at $11,500. T. W. Wysacker was the broker.

William W. Harrison of Philadelphia has sold to Nathan K. Aranoff the business property at 1018-20 East Sixty-third street. The lot is 45x125 feet and is improved with a four story brick store and flat building, and, while a nominal consideration is given, the property is said to have been held at $27,000. Paul Steinbrecher & Co. were the brokers.

The property at 1424 Milwaukee avenue, 100 feet northwest of Fontenoy place, lot 26x125 feet, northeast front, with store and flat improvements, has been conveyed by Ira E. Green to George A. Graham, a nominal consideration being given, subject to an incumbrance of $23,900.

The property at the southeast corner of Polk and Morgan streets, 70x90 feet, with improvements, has been conveyed by Frank B. Mukantz to the Catholic bishop of Chicago for an expressed consideration of $19,500. The bishop also acquired from the same grantor the property at the southeast corner of Morgan and Hope streets, 44x60 feet, for an expressed consideration of $7,000.

BUILDING SLUMP MOST NOTABLE MARKET FEATURE

The most notable feature of the market just now is the tremendous slump in building as compared with the corresponding period a year ago. Thus, for last week there were only seventy-nine permits issued with a total cost of $824,900, as compared with 215 permits and a total cost of $2,443,850 for the corresponding period a year ago.

For May there were only 619 permits with a total cost of $6,552,800, as compared with 1,207 and a total cost of $13,707,100 for May, 1916.

It is due mostly to the high cost of building material, together with the generally overbuilt condition of the city, the high price of coal, janitors' wages, and everything which goes into the operation and maintenance of buildings.

MEDIUM PRICED FLAT PROPERTY NOT SO ACTIVE

Despite Falling Off, Aggregate Movement Is Satisfactory.

Although apartment property did not cut the same figure in the week's market it did during the previous week, the showing was far from a bad one. There was some falling off in medium priced property, but the aggregate movement was fairly satisfactory.

The most important transaction covered the thirty apartment building at 5001-09 North Ashland avenue, lot 110x167 feet, the apartments being of four and five rooms, which was sold by Albin Nelson to Peter Hoeffner for a reported consideration of $100,000, subject to an incumbrance of $55,000. It is said to have a gross annual rental of $14,000, and the purchaser conveyed in part payment a block of vacant on Montrose boulevard, between Richmond street and Francisco avenue, 250 feet on Montrose by 252 on Richmond and 177 on Francisco, at a valuation of $40,000. Also the ten flat building at the northeast corner of Richmond and Beuteau avenues, lot 49x125 feet, at a consideration of $21,500, subject to $16,500. John W. Dunklau of R. G. Ludwig & Co. represented both parties.

Campbell Avenue Sale.

The fifteen flat building of four and five rooms, lot 68x120 feet, at the northeast corner of Eastwood and Campbell avenues, with annual gross rent of nearly $7,000, has been sold by William MacDonald and wife, May, to Morris J. Herzman for a reported consideration of $58,000, subject to $34,000, the purchaser conveying the store and flat building at 1032-36 North Ashland avenue, valued at $30,000, subject to $11,000. L. Loewenstein & Co. represented the purchaser and I. J. Schiller & Co. the seller.

The eighteen apartment building at the southeast corner of Fifty-fourth place and Ellis avenue, with 66x150 feet of ground, has been sold by Edward M. Bertha, the builder, to Frank Benko for a reported consideration of $75,000, subject to an incumbrance of $43,000. The purchaser conveyed in part payment the store and flat property on Commercial avenue near Ninety-second street, South Chicago.

Kimbark Avenue Deal.

The high grade six apartment building, with 50x160 feet of ground, at 6224-26 Kimbark avenue, has been sold by Dr. M. H. Mack and wife, Ida, to George D. Bockus, a nominal consideration being given, subject to an incumbrance of $24,000, but the actual figures are said to have been $35,000. The apartment contains six rooms, sleeping porches, etc., which rent for $65 month. In part payment Mr. Bockus conveyed the property at the northeast corner of Ridge boulevard and Ingleside avenue, valued at $10,000, which subsequently was conveyed to James I. Loeb, the latter giving in part payment the ten room brick residence at 4530 Oakenwald avenue. Samuel Boyll and C. W. James of W. K. Young & Bro. were the brokers.

The twelve flat building at the northeast corner of Sixty-ninth place and Harper avenue, having a gross annual rental of $6,300, has been sold by Anna Baird to Lucy M. Tindall for a reported consideration of $45,000. The sale was negotiated by George T. O'Brien of Bowers, Liebrandt & O'Brien. These brokers also report the sale of a new six flat at 6743-45 Cornell avenue for Carl Palmquist to Joseph F. Herman for a reported consideration of $30,000.

The extra high grade two apartment building at 7619 Sheridan road, lot 50x150 feet, west front, has been sold by William K. Mitchell to E. W. Elliott for a reported consideration of $30,000, an unusually high figure for a two apartment building. The transaction was negotiated by L. J. Dwyer. It is interesting to note that this property was sold in February, 1916, by Mr. Dwyer for John S. Bayes to Mr. Mitchell for $28,000.

Flat Changes Hands.

The apartment property in Ellis avenue, 267 feet south of Thirty-fifth street, lot 88x126 feet, west front, has been conveyed by Arthur Weinreb to Joseph M. Connor, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $26,500.

W. L. Klewer has sold to A. C. and Flora A. Cole the eight apartment building at 4620-22 Magnolia avenue, with 50x165 feet of ground, for a reported consideration of $26,500, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. W. G. Young & Co. represented both parties.

Leases and Loans

LEASES of business space in the downtown district were largely confined to mechanical restaurants, there being nothing of much importance outside of this. The Horn & Hardart Automat Company, of Illinois and Charles Weeghman were the lessees in both of the restaurant leases, the former company closing its third lease within the last three weeks. The company has leased from Martin A. Ryerson for a term of years the first floor and basement of the building at 16-18 East Randolph street, on the north side of the street, between State and Wabash, opposite Marshall Field & Co.'s retail store. The property is across the alley east of the Masonic temple and has a frontage of 33 feet with a depth of 170 feet.

The rental is said to be in excess of $15,000 a year. The company has taken possession and will remodel at once under the supervision of Marshall & Fox. It is expected to open for business some time in September. David S. Simon, in the office of Albert L. Strauss, negotiated the lease. It is said other leases will be announced in the near future.

Mr. Weeghman has leased through Willis & Frankenstein from Modie J. and Sidney M. Spiegel the store at 105 South Wabash avenue and 57-59 East Monroe street, being an "L" shaped piece, for a term of years from Sept. 1 next for a term rent of $200,000. Mr. Weeghman, who some time ago purchased the American rights to a Swiss patent automatic device, will, as indicated, occupy the premises with a mechanical restaurant. He also is now opening an automatic restaurant at the northeast corner of Van Buren street and Plymouth court. He also plans to open the store recently leased in the Tacoma building at Madison and La Salle streets as an automatic restaurant.

The Burrell Belting company has leased from George S. Carrington for a term of years the four story and basement building at 413-17 South Hermitage avenue together with the connecting one story office at 1719 West Van Buren street, a mill constructed building containing 40,300 square feet of floor space, for a term rent of $60,000. The lessee manufactures canvas belting. W. H. Lichty of J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co. was the broker.

There was filed for record the lease by Ella F. Kennett to Charles D. Horton of Dayton, O., and Frank G. Worden of Newark, O., of the Metropole hotel at the southwest corner of Michigan avenue and Twenty-third street. The lease, which dates from Jan. 28, 1907, runs to Jan. 31, 1922, and provides for an annual rental of $45,000, payable monthly. The lease was assigned the following April to the Metropole company.

There was nothing of any great importance in loans during the week. Loan agents generally report an exceedingly light inquiry, but an unmistakable tendency toward higher interest rates.

The State Bank of Evanston is trustee in a loan of $50,000, seven years at 6 per cent, to Louis J. Sherland, secured by the Sherland building at 1569-71 Sherman avenue, Evanston.

The Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $50,000, five years at 5½ per cent, to Charles Greve, secured by property in Dickey's subdivision in the township of Lyons.

Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company is trustee in a loan of $70,000, five years, at 5½ per cent, to Arnold H. Goss of Detroit, Mich., on the thirty-six apartment building, lot 120x197 feet, in Sheridan road, near Pine Grove avenue.

Joseph Rothschild has given a trust deed to B. Kulp to secure a loan of $65,000, seven years at 6 per cent, on the Hotel Edwards and the Maywood Opera House block at the southeast corner of Fifth avenue and Charles road, Maywood.

E. N. Duerlein & Co. have leased for K. I. Herman company to the Ideal Sheet Metal works, manufacturers of automobile radiators, the first floor of the four story building at 213-23 North Morgan street, containing 13,000 square feet, for a term rent of $20,000.

Abandon Plans for New Hotel Building

There was filed for record the transfer by May Kasper to Josephe B. Dibelka of the property in Surf street 216 feet west of Sheridan road, north front, 53½x298 feet, consideration nominal. It was announced some time ago that the property was to be improved with a seven story hotel building, but it is stated these plans have been abandoned for the present.

COLUMBUS PARK AND NORTH SHORE TRACTS ARE SOLD

Acre Properties Enjoy a Week of Unusual Activity.

There was considerable activity of an important character in acres, including city and north shore property.

The city transaction was the purchase by William H. Britigan & Co. from W. F. Higgins of a tract of fifty-three acres between Austin boulevard, South Menard avenue, Twelfth street, and the new Columbus park. The tract comprises four blocks east and west and three blocks north and south of residential and business property and is to be subdivided into 407 lots. It is to be known as Columbus Park addition. The consideration is said to have been on the basis of $3,900 an acre. Mr. Britigan believes it should prove to be one of the best subdivisions he has handled.

North Shore Deal.

The north shore deal was the sale by Charles A. Birney to William H. Johnson of Glencoe of a tract of forty-one acres in the north part of Lake Forest, adjoining the properties recently purchased by Stanley Keith and John A. Spoor. It is the last large tract of acres east of the railroad, and it is one of the most attractive properties in that neighborhood. It is handsomely timbered and is marked by picturesque ravines. The consideration is not disclosed, but it is said the property has been held at $3,000 an acre. Murray & Terry represented the seller and F. M. Lowe, the purchaser. Mr. Johnson is said to have sold to John Griffith of Lake Forest.

South Side Transaction.

The property at the northeast corner of Sixty-third street and Eberhart avenue has been sold by the Washington Park club to S. Fisher and C. Le Fevre. The property is 122x125 feet, and while the consideration is not disclosed, it is said to have been around [illegible]. This is the last piece of the old Washington race track subdivision to be sold, which extended from Sixty-first to Sixty-third streets and from Cottage Grove to South Park avenues, comprising eighty acres, which is now all built up with apartment and business buildings.

Record was made of the transfer by John M. Klein to George A. Kokalaris of Austin, Minn., of the property in Sheridan road at the northeast corner of Lunt avenue, 187x130 feet, consideration nominal. There is a nine room residence on the inside fifty feet, the rest of the lot being vacant.

Action of wheat prices yesterday was startling, but the volume of business represented was moderate. July jumped 22c above the previous close, but fell back again later and finished 8c higher. September at one time was up 17c, but it finished only 9c higher. Attempts by shorts to cover caused the bulge, the buying coming at a time when there was little or no wheat for sale. There were some jumps of 7c and 8c between trades. Toward the last prices eased off on free selling of July wheat by Bartlett-Frazier, believed to be for eastern longs. Missouri state report for June makes condition of wheat 57, against 52 a month ago and 57 a year ago.

Cash wheat was relatively easy, with sales of No. 2 red and No. 2 hard winter at 65c over July price. Local shipping sales were 5,000 bu. Clearances of wheat and flour for the day were 705,000 bu. Clement-Curtis report estimated winter wheat crop at 410,000,000 bu and spring wheat at 281,000,000 bu. Primary receipts were 754,000 bu.

Further Bulge in Corn.

Corn had a further sharp advance, active months finishing 3⅝@4c higher and December 1¾@1⅞c higher. Active and persistent buying of corn by Wagner was teh feature. Logan & Bryan also bought freely and there was much short covering. The relatively stronger cash corn market, the big bulge in wheat, and the fact that wet weather is holding back the country movement were buying incentives. Commission houses had corn for sale on the advance, with Block-Maloney, Blum, and Armour conspicuous on the selling side. Missouri state report for June estimates corn crop condition at 86, against 84 a year ago.

Cash corn was 4@8c higher, with active demand from all classes of buyers. There was some talk of export inquiry, but no sales were reported. Local shipping business was 15,000 bu. Clearances of corn for the day were 171,000 bu. Primary receipts totaled 1,121,000 bu. Clement-Curtis report places corn acreage at 124,000,000, with a big crop indicated.

Mixed Trade in Oats.

Trade in oats was mixed. Commission houses worked on both sides of the market. Price tendency was upward in sympathy with the strength in corn. Closing quotations were unchanged to ½c higher. King-Farnum and Blum sold oats freely. Wagner bought early and sold later. Crop and weather news was bearish. Missouri report makes crop condition 92, against 88 a year ago. Cash oats were steady to 2c higher, with local shipping sales 85,000 bu, including 50,000 bu for export. Clearances for the day were 655,000 bu. Primary receipts totaled 769,000 bu.

Provisions were again irregular. Lard showed a decline at the finish, while pork and ribs were higher. There was further selling of lard by foreigners, while the buying of meats was credited to packers. Purchases by the Belgian commission are understood to have been large, and to have included a fair amount of lard. Liberal United States government orders were also filled. Western markets received 429,200 hogs for the week, against 532,000 last week and 500,800 a year ago. Local meat shipments this week were 17,268,000 lbs, against 14,197,000 lbs a year ago, and lard shipments 3,938,000 lbs, against 6,686,000 lbs last year.

Rye Quiet and Steady.

Rye was quiet. Cash No. 2 quotable $2.37 nominally. Part car No. 4 sold $2.10. Receipts, 1 car.

Barley ruled unchanged. Malting was quoted $1.30@1.50 and sold $1.28@1.36; feed and mixing quotable $1.15@1.35, with sales at $1.25@1.26; screenings were quoted 50@90c and skimmings 70@80c, with former selling at 55@85c. Receipts were 12 cars.

Timothyseed was quiet. September closed $9.00 bid and $9.25 asked and October $9.15 asked. Cash lots sold at $7.25. Cloverseed was easy. Cash lots quoted $12.00@18.000 and spot prime $18.65.

Flaxseed closed 4c higher. Cash quoted $3.10@3.16. Duluth and Minneapolis as well were 4c and Winnipeg 4@5½c higher.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, June 2.—COFFEE—An easier turn in milreis prices at Santos seemed to discourage bullish sentiment in the market for coffee futures this morning, but there was scattering liquidation by brokers with cotton trade connections. NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

The cash demand for corn continues active, and cash prices were strong, following the futures, 4@8c higher. The offerings from the country are not heavy, and the prospect for any material increase in stocks is not particularly bright. High prices for live stock, especially for hogs, is making the country independent. The shipping demand is fair, and offerings are absorbed without difficulty. Premiums yesterday for cash corn were about as strong as ever. Cash sales were 15,000 bu. Oats sales were 85,000, with prices steady to 2c up. Sales of oats included 50,000 bu to exporters.

Spring wheat acreage is increased in all states except the Dakotas, according to reports received by Clement-Curtis. The total increase is estimated at 19,132,000 acres, or 1,176,000 acres more than a year ago. Oats acreage is placed at 2,744,000 acres more than a year ago. The condition of oats is placed at 88.4. Crop indicated on June 1 was 1,403,000,000 bu. Total acreage of corn is expected to be around 124,000,000 acres, which, on an average condition and yield, would produce about 3,250,000,000 bu. The abandonment of winter wheat is responsible for the tremendous increase in corn acreage.

Cash premiums for wheat hold steady relatively, and with the enormous discount at which July is selling under the contract grades the prospects for any big hedging pressure are remote. It is expected mills and exporters will absorb the first run of winter wheat as fast as it is available, and few traders are of the opinion that much wheat, if any, will be available for delivery on July contracts. Northwest mills will also be in the market for winter wheat, and the supply usually received from Nebraska will be missing this year.

Wheat shorts suffered yesterday from too aggressive selling recently. While there has been no outside buying of consequence, there has been considerable selling of wheat short. Prices declined so long as this selling continued, but following the upturn in coarse grains there was a letup in the selling, and prices began to harden as soon as the demand from shorts increased. July had a range of 22c from the previous close, selling up to $2.20 and reacting to $2.06. On the bulge commission houses sold more wheat. Prices for September were also bid up sharply.

The St. Louis, Minneapolis, and Kansas City grain exchanges will close on June 5, registration day, as well as the Chicago market.

Crop prospects in the United Kingdom are now reported fair. Foreign arrivals of grain are said to be increasing. Native supplies are about exhausted. Crop outlook has improved in France. Import needs are large, however, and there is a slow arrival of foreign grain. In Argentina the weather is fine and seeding of wheat has made good progress, with germination excellent. Corn movement is light, while the export demand is urgent. Exporters are active buyers of Argentine oats.

Liberal arrivals of oats are reported in the United Kingdom, with the markets easy. Barley and rye continue firm, with moderate offerings. Increased wheat arrivals have caused an easier market for flour. Corn is strong at Liverpool, due to firmness of Argentine markets and unfavorable weather in America.

The Missouri June crop report, as wired by King of Toledo, makes the corn condition 86, against 84 last June and 64 in October; acreage planted, 90 per cent, against 82 per cent last year; acreage indicated is 8,000,000 acres. Wheat condition, 57; May, 52; last June, 57; crop estimated at not over 15,000,000 bu. Oats condition, 92; year ago, 88.

McLaughlin & Co. regard oats as too high with a total visible supply of 19,731,000 bu, or more than 5,000,000 bu larger than a year ago, and ample stocks to supply needs to new crop, especially with prospects for an enormous crop.

Smoked meats are too high, according to some provisions men, while lard is easy, due to the extensive substitution. The foreign trade is said to have been quiet lately, and stocks at leading centers are fairly liberal.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 10 cars; corn, 58 cars; oats, 92 cars; rye, 1 car; barley, 12 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 36,000 head, and for all next week, 130,000 head.

The International Institute of Agriculture at Rome estimates the import requirements of Italy, France, and Great Britain at 560,000,000 bu wheat for the coming season.

The Price Current-Crop Reporter has issued its annual year book of grain and provisions statistics.

The rate of interest for June has been placed by the finance committee at 6 per cent per annum.

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 100,000 bu for one day.

ARMOUR OWNS $3,200,000 IN BANK STOCKS

Continues to Be Largest Individual Holder of Local Shares.

Ogden Armour continues to be the largest individual holder of Chicago bank stocks. The list for 1917 shows him the owner of 9,460 shares of Continental-Commercial National. His holdings in five other banks make the total 13,162 shares, valued at $3,200,000.

The N. W. Harris estate has holdings of 9,573 shares in the Harris Trust and Savings bank, being the largest holdings in any individual institution, but in this instance it is an estate and not an individual. The Harris estate holdings are valued at over $5,800,000.

F. H. Rawson, president of the Union Trust company, ranks second as an individual holder of bank stock, his shares in the Union Trust company totaling 9,387.

Patten a Big Holder.

James A. Patten is a considerable holder of bank stocks, with a total of 5,378 shares. His principal investments are 2,467 shares in the Continental-Commercial National and 1,050 shares in the Illinois Trust and Savings bank.

E. H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, is a large holder of Chicago bank stocks, being credited with a total of 5,260 shares. His largest single holding is in the Continental and Commercial National, 4,035 shares.

Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, has materially added to his holdings in the Central Trust, having 3,100 shares. Dawes Brothers, Inc., controlled by Charles G. and Rufus Dawes, hold 5,480 shares of Central Trust.

Changes Are Small.

The year's changes in general bank stock investments have been small. For two years the bank stock market has been extremely dull. In 1914 earnings were poor and continued poorer in 1915. In 1916 considerable improvement was shown and the quoted values of stocks which had previously fallen off from 20 to 60 points began recovering. The record of earnings was due to the low rates of interest which have obtained since the federal reserve bank system was inaugurated in November, 1914. Prior to that date, or rather prior to the beginning of the European war, the market for bank stocks was lively and changes in ownership were numerous. In 1916, however, large holders remained about as they were the previous year.

Women have become considerable holders of bank stocks. Their largest showing is in the shares of the Merchants Loan and Trust, Corn Exchange, Illinois Trust, First National, and Continental and Commercial National. The largest holdings by women are in the latter institution, the total being 49,944 shares.

SHEEP.

Prices of sheep and lambs underwent sharp downward revision this week, aged and yearling sheep closing $2.00 lower than a week ago, while lambs were off $1.50@1.75. Receipts for the week showed a decrease, but the demand was greatly curtailed and receivers had to make concessions to clear offerings. Lambs topped the week at $19.75 and sheep at $15.00, but these prices were not available at the finish.

Majority of People Rail Owners.

The National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities was formed at Baltimore a few days ago to undertake the task of getting due recognition for the rights of investors. Its first active step in this direction will be an endeavor to convince the interstate commerce commission of the need of an advance in freight rates.

The convention of investors was called by the Continental Trust company, one of the larger banks of Baltimore, and was attended by more than 400 men, many of them being officers of savings banks and insurance companies that have large sums invested in railway stocks and bonds.

The most interesting thing brought out during the session was statistics on the number of people owning railway securities. It appears that about 1,000,000 persons are direct owners and that 46,000,000 holders of life insurance policies and 10,000,000 savings bank depositors own securities indirectly through the investment of about one-fourth of the funds of these institutions in railway bonds. This list takes no account of the large investments of fire, marine, and casualty companies and of schools and benevolent associations, all of which are held for the benefit of great numbers of individuals.

Thus "the railroads," that demagogues have denounced, that city councils have baited, that legislatures have hampered, and that congress has oppressed, really are a majority of the people. If the new association does nothing but get this one fact not only known but realized and digested by everybody, it will have accomplished a valuable work.

Denver and Rio Grande.

E. W. B., Dubuque, Ia.—The Denver and Rio Grande railway has been earning its fixed charges about one and one-half times and using most of the surplus for improvements. Net last year was $10,084,437 and charges were $6,269,349, leaving $3,815,088 surplus. Recently the United States court held the company responsible for $32,272,274 on account of its guarantee of bonds of the Western Pacific. The company will appeal. If it finally loses the suit and the holders of the judgment refuse to compromise it may be forced into bankruptcy. In that event underlying bonds probably would be undisturbed and stock and adjustment bonds would bear the brunt of the reorganization. It is not unlikely that creditors will compromise, as probably they can save money by so doing.

Brief Answers.

J. P. E., Knoxville, Tenn.—The consolidation of the West Penn Traction company and the West Penn railways will save a substantial sum in interest and overhead expenses. Both companies are controlled by the American Water Works and Electric company and are now under the same management.

F. A. S., Sheffield, Ill.—More conservative than Anglo-French bonds are the French secured loan of 1919 and the United Kingdom secured loan. These bear 5½ per cent and can be had a fraction below par, making the yield 5¾ to 6 per cent.

'ROUND ABOUT THE NEW YORK CURB

NEW YORK, June 2.—[Special.]—There was a general lack of initiative to the trading on the Broad street curb during the past week, with the mass of stocks simply following the important shares on the exchange in their price movements. Decided tone, however, was shown in a number of issues, with Central Foundries assuming a prominent position, the common advancing from 26½ to 33 and the preferred moving up from 46 to 53½. Curtiss Aeroplane was another strong feature, moving up from 27 to 30.

Arrangements for financing Aetna Explosives by connections of important banking interests were accompanied by an advance in that stock from 3½ to 4⅛. The halt in buying was attributed to the necessity of controlling interests devoting attention to the completion of arrangements to extend the scope of activities, and for the time the market for the stock was neglected.

Submarine Boat, which had been made strong in the preceding week, reacted from 34 to 30¾, but rallied at the end of the week.

The sugar stocks were strong, with Federal Sugar advancing 3 points to 81. Air Reduction ranged from 86½ to 82.

Independent oil stocks were irregular. Metropolitan Petroleum, which sold early in the week at 3½, declined to 1 15-16. Merritt Oil ranged from 28½ to 26½, with a rally to 28¼, and Midwest Refining sold down from 140 to 134. Knickerbocker Wyoming, in which there are important western oil interests, were traded in during the last half of the week, the common selling at 1@1¼ and the preferred sold at 9@9¾. Cosden & Co. sold at 13¼@12¾.

Chevrolet Motors sold at 104@95, with a rally to 98. United Motors sold down from 32⅛ to 27¾.

In the mining stocks most interest was attached to the trading in Butte Copper and Zinc, which advanced 11⅝ to 13½, with the buying accompanied by reports of a coming dividend. Magnate Copper advanced from 81c to 93c. Big Ledge ranged from 4 to 3½, with a rally at the end of the week to 3¾. Magma ranged from 48½ to 43, but recovered practically all its loss.

Bonds were generally in demand at fractional advances, with gains of over one point made in American Smelting 5s and Long Island 5s. Russian 6½s dropped from 85 to 81, and the 5½s sold at 78 to 75.

Permanent organization of the Knickerbocker-Wyoming Oil company has been perfected by the election of the following officers and directors: President, R. H. Walsh, Sheridan, Wyo.; vice president, William H. Grimes, Baltimore; secretary-treasurer, F. E. Brightman; director, L. N. Rosenbaum, New York.

This company was recently incorporated under the laws of Wyoming with an authorized capital stock of $1,000,000 preferred and $9,000,000 common. The former is 7 per cent cumulative and participating, with a par value of $10.

HEAVY DECREASE IN BANK SURPLUS SHOWN FOR WEEK

Changes Generally Are Due to Government Financing.

The surplus reserve of the New York banks showed a large loss for the week just ended. It was over $79,500,000 and due to a loss in cash of more than $82,000,000. The changes for some time, however, may be expected to be extraordinary and without the usual significance because of payments to the government for treasury certificates of indebtedness.

The loan account showed a moderate contraction, although business in the markets was active. Deposits fell away about $96,000,000. The figures:

Local Curb Prices Firm.

Trading in the local unlisted securities market was on a rather small scale. Emerson Brantingham preferred changed hands at 45, stock was offered at this price at the close and 44 was bid. Deere preferred was in demand at 98½. Avery Co. preferred was wanted at 100, with offerings at 100½. The demand for Inland Steel advanced the price of that issue some ten points, stock changed hands at 210—market closing 206 to 210, ex dividend 2 per cent.

Motor Shares Strong.

The motor securities continue strong—Reo Motor Car sold as high as 30¾, closing 29 to 30. Paige-Detroit was offered at 30¼. Hupp sold between 2⅞ and 3⅛. Continental Motors was traded in at 8, closing 7⅞ to 8. Butler Brothers improved some seven points to 252, closing at 249 to 252. Bucyrus common sold at 10½, closing 9 bid, offered at 11; 63 was bid for the preferred.

Some inquiry existed for Albaugh Dover around 56 to 57. The Sugar group was quiet, Holland-St. Louis was offered at 15¼; Columbia, 12¾ to 13¼. Other sales were as follows: Northern States Power common, 91 to 92½; Middle West Utilities preferred, 69¾; Cities Service preferred, 85½ to 87½; Cities Service common, 290 to 295.

Federal Sign Earnings.

Gross operating income of the Federal Sign system in the fiscal year ended March 31 were $2,355,217; expenses, including the cost of manufacture and depreciation, $2,254,042, leaving a net income of $101,175.

From the surplus of $287,907 available March 31, 1916, amounts aggregating $80,049 were written off on account of accumulations of previous years. The balance, $207,858, added to the net income for the fiscal year 1916-'17, gave the company a surplus of $309,033 on March 31 of this year.

National Enameling.

Officials of the National Enameling and Stamping company say that earnings are continuing in as heavy a volume as one year ago, whereas the fiscal year's returns showed a balance of 13.6 per cent on the common stock. All branches of the company's business in the east report heavy sales, with continued demand in sight. There has been a large business in enameled hospital wares sold to Red Cross units, and it is expected the company will benefit through impending government orders covering army and navy needs.

Good Ore Year Predicted.

Trustees of the Great Northern Iron ore properties have issued the annual report for the year ended Dec. 31, 1916. It shows after taxes and expenses a balance of $2,068,884, or about twice the balance shown the previous year. Concerning 1917 the trustees say:

"We contemplate the coming year with a feeling of hopefulness, though general conditions are unsettled. The situation is such as to indicate another year favorable to business connected with the metal trades."

Chicago Securities.

Chicago stocks were again irregular, the features being declines in Diamond Match and Public Service common. The former was off 2½ points from the previous close, as was also Public Service. The latter, however, recovered one point in the course of trading. Stewart-Warner was off 1 point and Wilson & Co. was fractionally lower. Sears-Roebuck advanced ¼.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

It is reported that officials of the United States Steel corporation and other iron and steel companies in the Shenango valley have under consideration a plan to employ girl clerks to take the places of the young men who have enlisted or are subject to conscription.

A New York banker with an income above $1,000,000 annually is quoted as saying: "The income tax has resulted in checking a great deal of stock market liquidation from interests who enjoy incomes ranging from, say, $100,000 annually upward. I know many such people who hold stocks. They purchased 50 and 100 points below current levels. As an example, one man owns 40,000 shares of the capital stock of a corporation in which he has a profit of 50 points, or $2,000,000. If he sold this stock the supertax would deprive him of nearly one-half of the profit realized. There are hundreds of people who bought Utah, United States Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Central Leather, Inspiration, Republic Iron and Steel, and other issues before the war and have not sold. There would be a great deal more realizing in these and other issues were it not for the government war tax."

On the basis of business in the first four months of the current calendar year a sales record for the American Tobacco company in 1917 of $82,000,000 on strictly tobacco business is declared to be well within the range of possibilities. This does not include the American Cigar company, which does about 14 per cent of the cigar business of the United States. Earnings of the tobacco company proper for the four months ended April 30 increased $5,000,000 over the corresponding period in 1916. Of the four months April represented the largest gain, the increase being nearly $2,000,000.

At a meeting of the directors of the United States Realty and Improvement company the bylaws were revised so as to reduce the directors from fourteen to nine and abolish the executive committee. The members of the board are now C. E. Mitchell, H. Bonner, H. S. Black, F. A. Vanderlip, J. F. Harris, C. E. Herrmann, A. L. Holmes, W. S. Kinnear, and Paul Starrett.

It is announced that in the American Car and Foundry company's war business all the shells were delivered in record time and the last lot was finished March 31. About one-fifth of 1 per cent of all the shells contracted for were rejected. The company is now engaged on shell work for the United States government. This should be completed in about two months.

Active market interests close to United States Steel officials are now reported as again advising the purchase of the stock. They say the May earnings will exceed $50,000,000.

The output of copper by the Anaconda company in May was 28,400,000 lbs, against 20,300,000 lbs in April and 31,-300,000 lbs in March.

MARKET ERRATIC AND HEAVY.

New York, June 2.—Profit taking occasioned by the usual week-end closing of outstanding contracts and next Tuesday's holiday probably accounted for the irregularity and heaviness of today's market.

The short interest also derived some encouragement from the further decline in Russian exchange to a point approaching its minimum and the decision of the interstate commerce commission ordering a suspension for six months of schedules on domestic storage within the limits of New York harbor.

Unsettlement began with the seaback in St. Paul issues, the common recording a gross decline of 3⅜ points and the preferred 3. The movement spread to other grangers, also Pacifics, coalers and trunk lines, recessions extending from one to two points.

Motor Stocks Also Weak.

Motors were another element of weakness, their extreme losses running from two to three points, while equipments and shippings yielded one to two points. United States Steel fell 1⅜ to 128⅞, after having sold up to 131⅛, and affiliated shares supplied equal reactions with sugars.

Noteworthy exceptions were provided by the so-called Mexican group, Mexican Petroleum scoring an extreme advance of five points, other oils rising one to two and one-half, and American Smelting two, with an average of a point for other coppers. Most of these gains were effaced in the heavy offerings of the last hour.

United States Rubber retained the greater part of its two and one-fourth point rise, but Industrial Alcohol and American Woolen also forfeited their early advantage.

The bond market was irregular. United States and Panama bonds lost from ¼ to 1 per cent on call during the week.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, June 2.—COTTON—A further advance encountered heavy offerings in the cotton market today and there was a sharp reaction. The general list closed steady at a net decline of 21@26 points. The market opened at a decline of 5@10 points under profit taking, but the tone was steady and the early offerings were quickly absorbed. Demand tapered off, and the market soon turned easier under realizing, with the close at the low point of the day. Port receipts today were 7,223 bales, and 6,828,-795 for the season; exports today, 19,700 bales, and 4,939,341 for the season; stock, 833,371 bales. Futures:

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 2.—COTTON—Displayed strength for a while today and rose to new high levels on fresh buying, but a pronounced reactionary tendency put prices down at the close to a net loss of 9@12 points. Futures:

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, June 2.—SUGAR—No further changes occurred in raw sugar as far as Cuban grades were concerned, but Porto Rico showed a further decline on sales of 5,000 bags due at Philadelphia, equal to 5.73c for centrifugal. Buyers were in the market for Cubas at 4⅞c cost and freight, but holders asked higher prices. The close was steady at 4⅞c for Cubas cost and freight, equal to 5.89c for centrifugal and 5.01c for molasses. Refined sugar was steady, but demand was slow. Sugar futures were quiet. The opening was 1 point lower, but prices rallied, closing 1 point lower to 1 point net higher. Sales were 4,150 tons. July sold from 5.05c to 5.08c, closing 5.07c; September, 5.16@5.18c, closing 5.17c; December, 5.01c, closing 5.01c; January closed at 4.77c.

—"sample" this source of active capital

In these days of rapidly expanding business even a liberally financed Manufacturer or Wholesaler may be temporarily short of ready money for some important purpose like carrying new accounts, discounting bills, picking up spot cash bargains, or starting a new selling campaign.

To raise this money by selling stock or taking a partner means a permanent division of profits. To secure acceptances for discount usually means concessions to your customers, and always means annoying them and suggesting financial dependence.

Far better to let us release part or all of your capital now tied up in active accounts receivable. It costs less than the discount you probably offer your customers, they know nothing of the transaction, and you can "Sample" it by selling us a small amount of your accounts.

If you like the method, you can sell us more. If you don't, your accounts will soon pay out, and the transaction is closed. Our very brief little rate booklet explains our plan very clearly. We should like to send you a copy. Or our nearest representative will call on request—not otherwise.

A customer rated $100,000 to $150,000, good credit, writes us: "Our experience of some two years proves that wide-awake firms can use your plan and make more money with less financial worry."

ADDRESS C H 516, TRIBUNE

COUNCIL AIDING SCHOOL DISCORD, MAYOR CHARGES

Delay of Appointments Prevents an Inquiry, He Says.

Unwillingness on the part of the city council to confirm Mayor Thompson's school board appointees means continued existence of the "present trouble," the mayor said yesterday. The mayor said he did not care to comment on the report that the Chicago Teachers' federation and the Federation of Labor are working in support of his appointees.

"You can say anything you want to," added the mayor, "but the fact remains that opposition to the appointees to the school board is the support of Loeb in keeping up the trouble that has been going on over there. Lack of confirmation of the appointees means a continuation of the wrangle over there, and a move to let the old board remain in office for another two years. There is only one way to help Mr. Loeb's gyrations and that is the blocking of the appointments. It will also prevent an investigation of the acts of the present board."

Plans Week's Delay.

As announced in THE TRIBUNE, the mayor said he would ask that his two new appointees—slated to take the places of Trustees Kreutgen and Piggott—together with the present appointees, lie over for one week.

The council, therefore, will take no action on the school board until its meeting a week from tomorrow.

All pay rolls of the board of education were approved yesterday by the city civil service commission. Capt. Percy B. Coffin, president of the commission, denied that any pay rolls were held up because of the controversy between President Loeb and the mayor. Mr. Coffin's absence from his office all day yesterday gave rise to the rumor that the pay rolls might not be approved.

New Slate Contemplated.

Ald. A. A. McCormick said yesterday he believed a majority of the members of the council would stand by a resolution he has prepared asking the mayor to submit an entire new slate of appointees. He said he drafted the resolution in the interests of harmony, and he asserted it was aimed neither at the mayor nor Mr. Loeb. The mayor, when informed of the alderman's statement, laughed.

"Whom would he recommend for appointment?" he asked. "Members of the Chicago club?"

It was in the Chicago club that Ald. McCormick, at a luncheon tendered eight other members of the council, explained the purpose of his resolution.

Wind Takes Its Spite Out on One Tree of Long Row

Three o'clock and all was well on Harper avenue.

Now and then snores from the sleeping workers enjoying the half-holiday broke the silence.

Four o'clock and all was well.

In front of 6009 Harper avenue there is a long row of trees forty feet high and a foot in diameter. They are planted about fifteen feet apart. Wo-o-o-o-o! Along came a big wind and picked out one of these trees to uproot and lay across the sidewalk. The other trees remained untouched.

Five o'clock and all was well on Harper avenue.

Boy Killed by Train.

Charles Mitch, 8 years old, was killed yesterday afternoon by a passenger train on the elevation of the Chicago and Alton railroad near South Ashland avenue. The boy resided at 8022 Lock street.

JURY INDICTS D. F. KINNALLY FOR PERJURY

U. S. to Sell Property to Satisfy Forfeited $10,000 Bond.

Daniel F. Kinnally, notorious professional bondsman who got himself in bad when he swore falsely to an affidavit when he "qualified" as a bondsman for George Irwin, indicted blackmailer who is now a fugitive from justice, was indicted yesterday by the federal grand jury for perjury. His bond was fixed at $10,000.

The indictment of Kinnally comes as a direct result of the testimony given by him before Judge K. M. Landis some months ago when that jurist suspected that there was "something rotten in Denmark" in the bond situation and conducted a sweeping investigation of all professional bondsmen.

District Attorney Charles F. Clyne announced yesterday that the property scheduled by Kinnally, which was deeded to him by State Senator George F. Harding, and that of A. C. Jones, another professional bondsman whose property was also scheduled on the bond of George Irwin, will be offered for sale by the government this week to satisfy the judgment on the bond, which has been forfeited.

Jurors Complimented.

Members of the federal grand jury who finished their arduous month's work yesterday were complimented by Judge Landis, who came especially from La Crosse, Wis., to receive their report, for the work accomplished by them.

"I have watched your work with great interest, and I wish to thank you for the splendid work you have accomplished," he said.

"Your work as members of the grand jury is a labor of love. You have to thank congress, not me, for not receiving any financial remuneration for your services. Many of you have forsaken your families and your business at a financial loss to do your duty to the government. Again, gentlemen, I thank you for your services."

Other Indictments.

In addition to the "egg" and "war plot" and Kinnally indictments there were true bills against the following:

Dr. Arthur L. Blunt, for violation of the Harrison drug act.

John J. Kilcoyne, for running a lottery.

Henry B. Nabor, for running a lottery.

Morris Kraus, Joseph Kloud, and Isidore Markus, doing business as the Garden City Furniture company, for concealing assets in bankruptcy.

Giuseppe Leto, for Black Hand threats.

Joseph Gernst, for violation of the postal laws.

Frank M. Consalate, for Black Hand threats.

Clinton M. Hurlbert, for counterfeiting.

If You Have $50,000 to Invest

Here is a Farm—in the heart of the Corn Belt—which, with Average Crops and Average Market Prices, in Normal Times, will yield an Income of over $8000 a year.

This is not a poor man's farm. It is an investment for capital, combining the highest degree of safety with a certainty of splendid income returns. Whether you go on this farm yourself, or buy it merely as an investment, it will pay enormous profits, as prices of grain will remain at very high levels for many years. However, under normal conditions, such as those which prevailed in 1913-14, this farm would pay a better return than any other equally safe investment on the market.

This farm is located in Paulding County, in Northwestern Ohio, within two miles of two good market towns on stone pike roads. It contains 237.66 acres, thoroughly tiled on an average about every 4 rods apart, all under cultivation except a 4-acre grove of splendid forest trees seeded in grass, giving a park-like setting to the buildings. The top soil is the finest quality elm and cottonwood loam with an average depth of 6 to 8 feet. The sub-soil is joint clay.

The buildings consist of a new two-story nine-room house; new barn 24x50 that will accommodate ten head of horses; a second barn that will hold ten cows; new corn crib and granary 28x50x16 that will hold about 12,000 bushels of grain; large implement house; hog house; poultry house; ice house; smoke house and stock scales; all in good repair. Fences are woven wire and in good condition.

The price of productive cultivated farm land is going up. Values in this rich farming country have increased steadily in the past at the rate of about $10.00 per acre a year. With the present high prices on all farm products and a certainty that this higher price level will continue, farm land must go up even more rapidly in the next few years. It will be a matter of only a short time until only the very rich will be able to buy and own half sections and quarter sections in the territories in which the above farm and our other farms are located.

Under the Straus plan the city investor can buy a farm purely as an investment, or he can go on it himself if he desires. If he buys the farm merely as an investment, we can manage the farm with our organization, selecting a good tenant, looking after planting and marketing of crops, payment of taxes, etc., rendering at the end of the year a complete statement of crops and income, accompanied by a check to cover the owner's share of the farm's earnings, that will represent a bigger return on the investment than any safe bond on the market—and there is no more bother and no more detail involved than in any bond investment.

This Farm Will Earn from 8% to 26½% This Year

From the rough plat of this farm, given below, you will see that on this year's plan of crops, figuring only average yields in this territory and average market prices, the gross earnings will be as follows:

23 acres of hay, yielding 1½ tons per acre—total 34½ tons at $12.00 per ton	$ 414.00
125 acres of corn, yielding 60 bushels per acre—total 7,500 bushels at 80c per bushel	6,000.00
80 acres of oats, yielding 50 bushels per acre—total 4,000 bushels at 50c per bushel	2,000.00
Total earnings of the farm	$8,414.00

There is a possibility of difference of opinion as to the meaning of average yields and average market prices. Just to show you that our figures are conservative, corn in this territory has yielded over 100 bushels to the acre and 80 and 90 bushels to the acre is not an uncommon production. Corn is selling today at from $1.50 to $1.60 per bushel, oats is bringing about 60 cents per bushel, and hay is selling at about $20.00 a ton.

Investigation will convince anyone that our figures are absolutely safe, and that if anything we have under-rated rather than over-estimated the probable income.

Our Price on This Farm is $215.00 Per Acre, Making the Total Investment $51,096.90

See what these figures mean to the man who buys this farm and operates it himself:

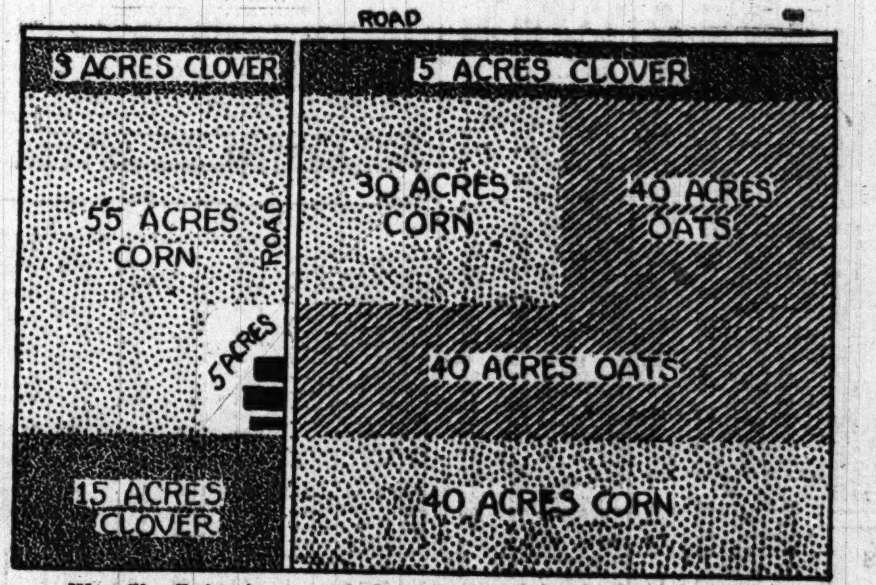
Total income of farm as shown above		$8,414.00
Expenses for taxes, etc.		240.00
Net income		$8,174.00

This figures a return of 16% on the total investment of $51,096.90, without taking into consideration the certain increase in the value of the land.

Suppose that the amount of your investment is 50% of the total cost of the farm, or $25,548.45, and that you give a mortgage at 5½% on the remaining 50% of the purchase price, The figures will then work out as follows:

Total income from the farm		$8,414.00
Expense for taxes, etc.	$ 240.00
Interest on mortgage	1,405.16
Total expense		1,645.16
Net income		$6,768.84

This figures a return of about 26½% on your investment of $25,548.45, without taking into consideration the certain increase in the value of the land.



We will sell this farm—with date of settlement March 1, 1918, or we will sell with settlement as of March 1, 1917, subject to the rights of the present tenant to March 1, 1918. March first is the customary time of settlement in all farm land transactions. If sale is made with dating of March 1, 1917, we will give the purchaser $4,000.00 as cash rental for the farm this year or the purchaser can assume the rights of the landlord at once and receive the income from his full landlord's share of the crops raised this year.

See what these figures mean to the man who buys this farm merely as an investment and who operates it with a tenant:

Owner's income (one-half total income of farm)		$4,207.00
Expenses for taxes, etc.		240.00
Net income		$3,967.00

This figures a return of nearly 8% on the total investment of $51,096.90, without taking into consideration the certain increase in the value of the land.

Suppose that the amount of your investment is 50% of the total cost of the farm, or $25,548.45, and that you give a mortgage at 5½% on the remaining 50% of the purchase price. The figures will then work out as follows:

Owner's income (one-half total income of farm		$4,207.00
Expense for taxes, etc.	$ 240.00
Interest on mortgage	1,405.16
Total expense		1,645.16
Net income		$2,561.84

This figures a return of 10% on your investment of $25,548.45, without taking into consideration the certain increase in the value of the land.

With a probable crop-yield greater than average and with market prices far above normal, the income from this farm during the next few years is certain to be much higher than the figures given.

Our book records show that during the past eleven years 119 men have each invested $50,000 or more in Straus Quality Farms. The total of their investments alone has run to over $10,000,000.00. Some of these men have been farmers—some have been bankers and business men—some have purchased our farms to work themselves—some as straight investments. All, however, have made splendid profits from their investments—an annual income from the crops better than the return from other equally safe investments, and a substantial increase each year in the value of their lands.

We offer eighteen other improved farms of this general size and character. We have also a big selection of improved farms both larger and smaller than the one shown—in Northwestern Ohio, Northeastern Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota and North Dakota—some also in Southern Ontario, just across the river from Detroit—all well improved corn farms, right in the best corn belt territory—where the soil is the richest in the world—where rainfall and sun and other climatic conditions are right—where the land is level and well tiled—with good buildings, good fences, good roads and splendid market facilities. These farms are already producing big crops of corn, wheat, oats, etc., and they can be depended upon to produce big crops year after year. Each farm is a finished established business, now operating at a profit, ready to produce an immediate revenue for you.

In buying a Straus Quality Farm you are dealing with the oldest and largest merchants in improved farm lands in the United States, with an honorable business record covering fifty-seven years, with a present capital and surplus of over $3,000,000.00.

We own every farm we sell. We have investigated each and every one and know that they are excellent investments for capital. We know these farms and are willing to embody in the written contract every representation which may influence you in making your investment.

A personal inspection of our farms will convince you of the value of Straus Quality Farms from the investment standpoint. We will be glad to arrange such personal inspection to suit the convenience of the investor.

TOO BIG A BIRD FOR THE TREE—The biplane was returning from one of those night trips in the dark along the British coast, about which the public hears nothing, when it landed in a tree. The aviator escaped injury and climbed from the machine to a limb and thence made his way to the ground. The machine was securely caught in the tree's branches.

"OVER THE TOP"—This remarkable photograph shows a British officer leading a charge against the German trenches. The officer mounts the top of the trench first and his men follow after him. An opening has been cleared in the barbed wire entanglements and the artillery has done its work preliminary to a charge, as is indicated by the bursting of the last shell in the background.

Keep floors free from infectious dirt

As a housewife, you use every precaution to destroy the menace of disease that dust from the street brings into your home. In the cracks of the floors and woodwork, street-dust leaves contagion to breed. You know that mere soap or cleaning preparations make floors and woodwork clean only to the eye.

Do not expose children who play on the floor to the contagion that lurks in cracks and crannies.

Protect the health of your family

Fight disease with Sylpho-Nathol, the sure disinfectant for waste-pipes, garbage-can and scrubbing. In your mopping and scrubbing always put a tablespoonful of this powerful disinfectant in the pail.

Take no chances in choosing your disinfectant. U. S. Government Bulletins point out that many widely sold disinfectants have no more germ-killing value than water.

Use Sylpho-Nathol. It is a germ-killer three and a half times stronger than the U. S. Public Health Service standard. It is entirely safe. New England housewives have been using it for more than thirty years.

The great hospitals of New York and New England use it constantly. Let your home profit by their choice.

Ask your druggist for Sylpho-Nathol

Sylpho-Nathol comes in bottles of four sizes—10c, 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sent prepaid on receipt of price if your druggist hasn't it.

You have Real Need of A Conklin Pen

Because—day in and day out the CONKLIN will respond unfalteringly to your needs. It writes the instant you touch it to paper—no need to coax or shake it to get the ink to flow.

With no attention but filling, it will write as long as you want to write, with never a blot, scratch, skip or sputter.

The CONKLIN can be, should be, fitted to your hand, because there is a special point fashioned to write precisely as you write. Then it will be as comfortable in the hand as the proverbial old slipper upon the foot.

Filling is a matter of seconds—the need for it infrequent. The extreme ease and quickness of the CONKLIN filling operation is due wholly to its "Crescent-Filler"—by far the simplest and most positive filling device, and the only one distinctive in appearance. The "Crescent-Filler" also prevents the pen from rolling off the desk.

Dealers everywhere will gladly demonstrate the CONKLIN—$2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00, $5.00 and up.

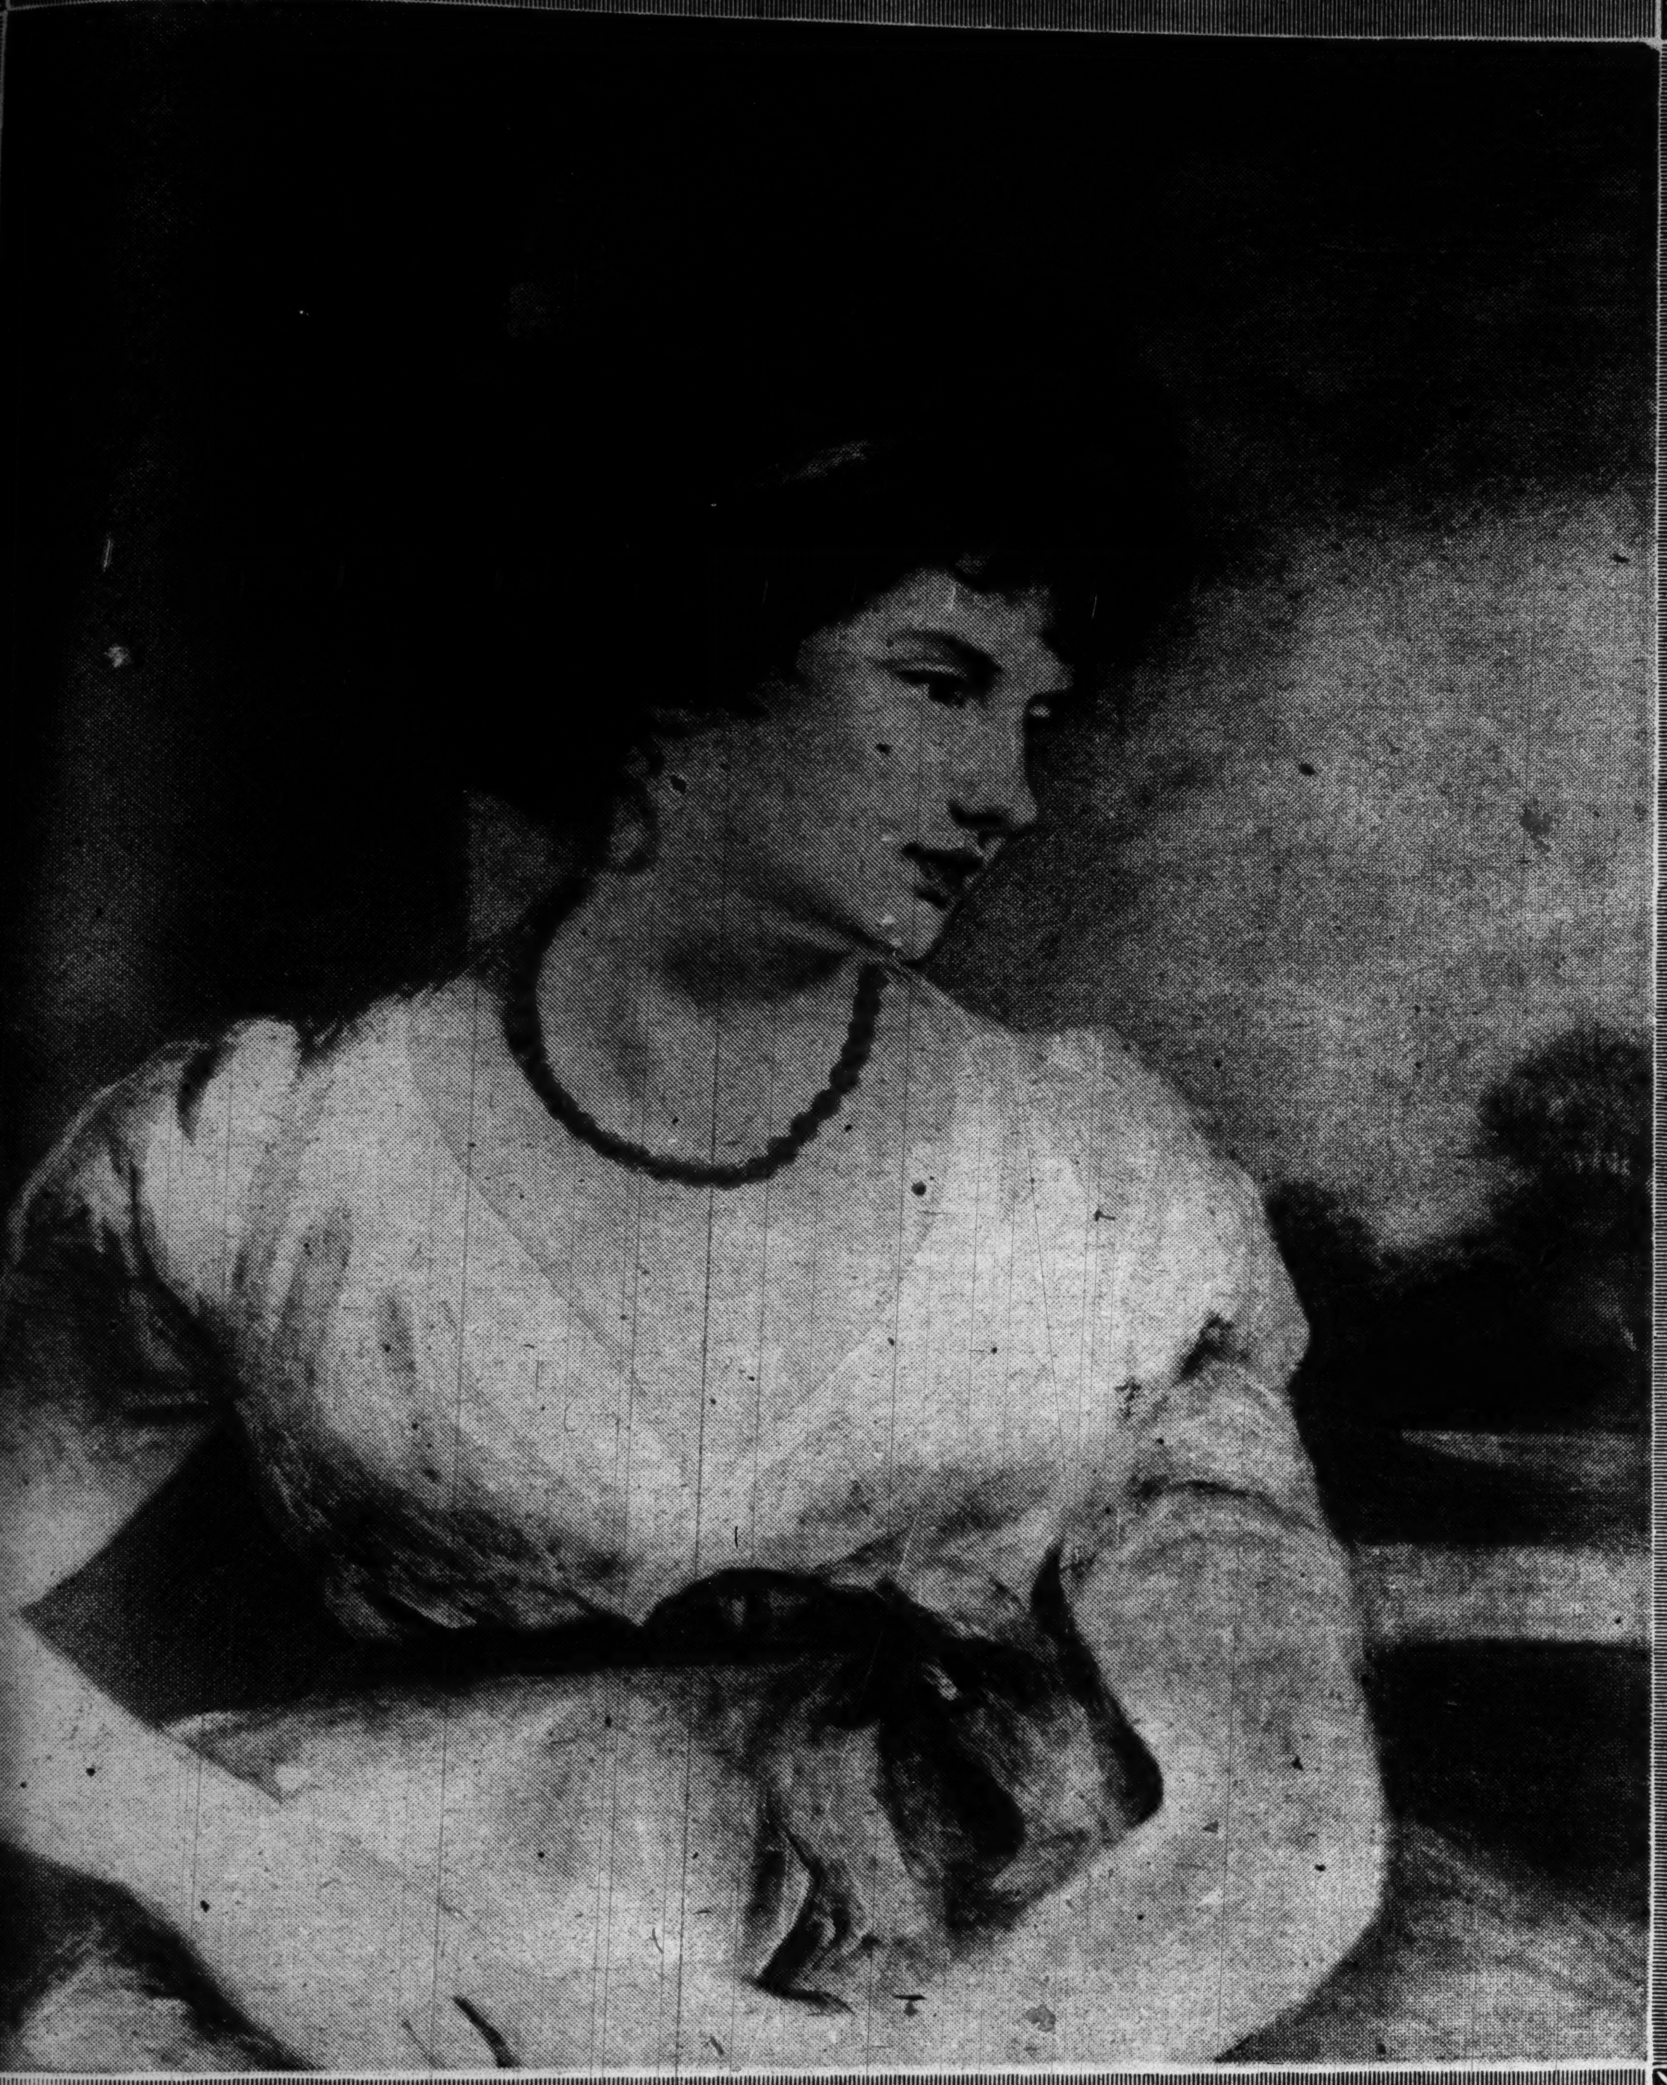
The Countess of Oxford

by—John Hoppner



BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

"The Countess of Oxford," by John Hoppner. National gallery, London.
A. R. A. R. A. [1759—1810.]

IN the midst of abundant and flattering successes artistic Hoppner flaunted a boast which nearly proved his undoing. He claimed for his feminine portraits a purity of look as well as of style, and accused the faces of his most powerful rival, Lawrence, of being stamped with a certain lascivious laxness indicative of the general moral laxness of the times.

Unfortunately for the substantiating of this rash claim Hoppner's clientele chanced to be among the gay and fashionable ladies of the court of the Prince of Wales, later King George IV. This prince, indeed, so loved wine and women and the music of fair feet in the dance that none of serious mind was long tolerated about him.

It chanced, too, that Lawrence's following consisted of the dignified ladies of quality about the court of King George III. at St. James and Windsor. And the men laughed and wondered how Lawrence, limner to probably the purest court in Europe at the time, should manage to bestow suggestive looks on the meek and sedate women of that most sober minded coterie, while Hoppner, who catered to the really notorious Prince of Wales' circle, should bestow on some of its giddiest ornaments a simplicity of manner and a Quakerlike sobriety of expression.

Somewhat surprising it is, too, that the ladies in question, after the spreading of this sarcasm, promptly showed a preference for Lawrence. The loveliness of virtue made no special appeal to the fair women of the prince's choosing, and Hoppner found the faces he had to paint growing less and less numerous.

All this is interesting in the light of his rendering of the Countess of Oxford. She it was who, some ten years after the painting of this picture, formed a liaison with Byron who was quite enamored by her rich autumnal charms. He insisted that she resembled a landscape by Claude Lorraine, with a setting sun in the background.

At the time this portrait was painted she was 23, a bewitching creature with huge gray eyes and red-brown hair, the daughter of the Rev. J. Scott and wife of the fifth Earl of Oxford. As the years went by her morals suffered serious disintegration. She went from one love to another, but those who knew her best agreed that she was wonderfully attractive in spite of her errors. She was full of affectionate kindness to her friends, and, however changeful and capricious in her affaires d'amour, she was stanch and loyal in the matter of friendships.

This painting in all its softness of color and loveliness of execution was first exhibited at the Academy in 1798 and bequeathed to the National gallery by her daughter, Lady Langdale, in 1873. There is another painting by Hoppner in the same gallery called "The Portrait of a Lady," and his portrait of the Prince of Wales in the Wallace collections ranks high among his works.

Hoppner is considered the greatest of all the followers after Reynolds. His mother was a German lady in waiting, and it was through the patronage of the Prince of Wales that he early achieved his opportunity to become a portrait painter to people of wealth and position.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

CAPTIVATING MARY CARSTAIRS

SYNOPSIS.

Elbert Carstairs, estranged from his wife and longing for the sight of his daughter, Mary, engages Larry Varney and Peter Maginnis to take the Carstairs yacht, the Cypriani, to Hunston-on-the-Hudson, there to kidnap Mary. On arrival in Hunston, Varney and Maginnis as a blind enlist with the reform element to throw out the political grafters who are running the town. By accident, Varney learns that Mary Carstairs is not a 12 year old girl, but a beautiful young woman. Varney's close resemblance to Ferris Stanhope, author of pink tea literature, who has got himself into bad grace in Hunston through affairs with girls, makes Varney's presence in the town hazardous. The political gang, working under the direction of Boss Ryan and through Coligny Smith, editor of the Hunston Gazette, use the lever of Varney's resemblance to Stanhope to balk Varney's help in the reform movement. A scurrilous article about Stanhope and a picture finish Varney in the eyes of the townspeople. Hammerton, a local reporter who is correspondent for the New York Press, by a ruse learns that Varney's real mission to Hunston is to kidnap Mary. Maginnis buys out the Gazette and thus steals a march on Ryan, and he and Varney win Hammerton over by making him editor of the paper. Varney gets Mary aboard the yacht intending to take her to her father, but he loses heart and turns back. Varney assaulted by a thug is carried into Stanhope's house. While he is there a mob coming to punish Stanhope, storm the house and Varney goes out. He is seized and beaten into insensibility in a terrific fight from which he is rescued by Maginnis.

EIGHTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

Peter Visits the Invalid.

In Hunston there followed next day a whirl of police activity, of which the net results were tame in the extreme. Of all the fierce band which had stormed the house of Mr. Stanhope, only poor old Orrick and Mr. British, the bookseller—he who had been pulled out senseless from under the beams of the porch—were identified. Mr. British flatly and resolutely declined to testify as to who his comrades were, and old Sam Orrick, terrified though he was by prospective horrors of the law, loyally perjured his immortal soul by swearing that the men were all strangers to him and that he believed them to be visitors from another city.

The count against these two proved to be only assault and battery, though for three days and nights it was a toss of the coin whether they would not have to answer for a graver charge. Peter's joy had soon proved premature and the doctor's smile faded in unexpected bewilderment. The sick man did not improve in the least. Delirium followed hard upon deadly stupor and there seemed no rousing him from either.

The yellow cottage with the trampled flower beds and smashed windows, which looked so bare faced with its front porch shaved away, had passed to Peter for the moment by right of conquest. In it everything that conduced to the comfort of the ill man had been quickly and lavishly installed.

Everybody was wonderfully kind and thoughtful. Mrs. Marne, who reached the cottage with Mrs. Carstairs half an hour after the doctor the first night, and had done wonders before the nurses arrived, was simply invaluable. Hare came night and morning, horribly formal and ill at ease, begging for something to do. Flowers and inquiries from total strangers were an hourly occurrence. From Charlie Hammerton came a quart of magnificent Scotch, followed on the second day by a pile of clippings from the Gazette's exchanges which must have gratified the injured man extremely if only he had been able to read them. His own leading article, headed "Laurence Varney, Hero," Editor Hammerton modestly suppressed. By the hand of sad faced McTosh came a hideous floral piece, in fact, a red, white, and blue star, bearing the label, "From the sorrowing crew of the Cypriani." Mrs. Carstairs, whose emotions at the time were hardly fully understood in the yellow cottage, called daily and sent beautiful roses and chicken jelly. The roses faded and the chicken jelly was considerably enjoyed by the nurses. But from Mrs. Carstair's daughter, whose filial relations had invoked all these things, there came neither flower nor word.

The fight had taken place upon a Thursday night. On Friday the Hunston doctor, at his wits' end, had asked for a consultation. On Saturday the great doctor from the city had spent an hour in the sick-room, first examining the patient in a bodily way, and then prodding him with a tireless stream of questions, however futile—anything to make him talk. At the end of that time he had whispered awhile with the town doctor and drawn Peter into the study downstairs.

"What's the matter with him, Mr. Maginnis?" he asked abruptly.

"Matter?" echoed Peter. "Wasn't he beaten to a pulp?"

"Kicks don't kill a man with that kind of physique. What has he got on his mind?"

"I don't know" said Peter, miserably. "The last time I saw him — —"

"Find out" said the great doctor briefly. "If you don't, he may die. He seems to have had a shock of some kind. You must work upon that line. There is nothing the matter with his body that he can't throw off. But he will not get well unless you put the idea into his head that he must."

And glancing at his watch, he bowed stiffly, and was whirled away to the station.

Peter was utterly at a loss. He had no idea what had taken Varney up the road to Stanhope's that afternoon, much less of any shock that could conceivably have come to him. But he set himself to find out. By the next morning, partly through inquiry, partly through patching two and two together, he had worked out a theory. Guesswork, of course, was rather dangerous in a delicate matter such as this; but the doctor's report after breakfast had been the very worst yet. Peter never faltered. He picked up his hat from the study table, in front of which he had been figuring these things out, and started down the hall.

Mrs. Marne was sitting quietly on the bottom step of the stairway, her dark head in her hands; and Peter was glad to see her.

"I've found out a little about that," said Peter, in a low voice. "I believe it was—to see Miss Carstairs that he came up the road that day."

"Yes," said Mrs. Marne. "I [illegible] heard that, too."

"She struck me," said Peter, "as a nice little girl. Probably she doesn't understand the situation. I am going to see her now."

"She won't see you," said Mrs. Marne.

"Yes, she will," said Peter quietly, and started for the door.

But Mrs. Marne caught him by the hand, protectingly, like an elder sister, and drew him into the parlor and shut the door.

Half an hour later Peter came out and went up the stairs. At the landing he paused to take off his shoes, and went on up in his stocking feet.

It was Sunday morning, near 11 o'clock, a brilliant morning all sun and wind. The far church bells of Hunston were ringing on the clear air like chimes from another world. Never afterward could Peter hear the Sunday bells without thinking of that moment. At the door he met Miss Nevin, the day nurse, coming out. She said she was going to telephone the doctor.

Peter slipped into the darkened room and shut the door noiselessly behind him. After a moment he tipped over to the bed and sat down in the nurse's chair, silently. The bed looked very fresh and white and unrumpled, and that was because the injured man had for two days lain almost wholly quiet. The thin coverlet defined his long frame perfectly. Many bandages about the limbs and trunk made it look grotesquely bumpy and misshapen. One arm, wrapped from shoulder to finger tip was outside the coverlet; now and then the hand, which was muffled large as a boxing glove, moved a little. Cloths ran slantwise about chin, brow, and head, leaving only breathing space and one eye uncovered.

Presently, as he became more used to the darkness, Peter observed that the eye was open and regarding him incuriously: and he started in some confusion. "Do you feel much pain now, old chap?" he began rather huskily.

"Pain?" repeated Varney, vaguely. "No, I don't feel any pain."

"No pain! That's fine!" said Peter with lying cheerfulness, for he knew that this deadness to sensation was the worst feature in the case. "That—left leg is rather badly bruised, it seems. I was a little afraid that might be troubling you some."

Silence.

"Did Miss Nevin show you all your flowers? They've just been pouring in all day every day. We could turn florists today without spending a penny for stock. Couldn't we, Larry, eh?"

"Yes," said Varney laboriously. "We could."

"Everybody has been so kind," continued Peter, desperately, "that upon my word it's hard to pick and choose. If I were asked to say who had really been kindest—let me see—yes, I'd name—Mrs. Carstairs. Flowers and something to eat, some little dainty or delicacy, twice a day. The fact is, old chap, to put it plainly, though I don't want to distress you, you know—she is blaming herself about this. Blaming herself greatly."

"She, oughtn't to do that," said Varney after a time.

"Of course, she oughtn't to. Yet it's natural enough in a way. Of course, I'm blaming myself, too—like the mischief—I'd had so many warnings, you know. Little Hare is blaming himself. And Mr. Carstairs—poor old fellow! I'll show you his letters when—the light's a little better for reading. They're fine, honestly. Of course, he wanted to come on right away, but I wouldn't let him."

Silence again.

"So you see how many of us," continued Peter, nearing his awkward climax, "have been worried, personally, about this—trouble. And how much, well—how much—happiness is bound up in your getting well. And by the way—I declare I nearly forgot Miss Carstairs—I declare!"

There was a long silence, which Peter resolved not to break. Through the shuttered window, the distant bells chimed faintly into the room. The sick man's stray arm moved restlessly on the coverlet, but otherwise he lay quite still.

At length Varney said: "When did you see Miss Carstairs? She hasn't—been here——?"

But poor Peter's errand was not so easy as that. He had no glad shaft of promise with which to pierce that deadly Nessus coat of apathy.

"She couldn't come here, old chap," said Peter, very gravely. "You hadn't heard, of course. Miss Carstairs is very ill."

"Miss Carstairs is very ill," repeated Varney, not inquiringly, but like a child saying over a lesson.

"Awfully ill," said Peter encouragingly. "It seems that she came home Thursday night a little after 7, looking very pale and badly, but insisting that there was nothing the matter. She sat upstairs with her mother until about 8, when somebody called her down to the telephone. Well, she didn't come back. So after a while Mrs. Carstairs sent down to find out why. The maid found her in the hall—in fact, on the floor, I believe. She had fainted, you know. Yes—that was it. Fainted dead away—poor little girl."

After what seemed an eternity of waiting, Varney asked: "What was it—do you know? At the telephone?"

"Yes. It was Mrs. Marne. She called up Miss Carstairs in the first excitement of—of your accident, it seems, and I'm afraid she gave a very exaggerated and alarming account, you know. They put her to bed," continued Peter clearing his throat, "and there she's been ever since. The great shock, you know. Mrs. Marne saw her this morning—the first time she had been admitted. It's all quite sad. Quite sad. We'll talk of it again when—you're feeling a bit stronger."

Varney, who had lain like a statue for two days and nights, had begun moving a little under the coverlet, stirring first one swathed leg, then the other, as though seeking vainly to shift his position. Now he said at once: "I want to hear now."

Peter gave a deep sigh. He thought, and rightly, that this was the best thing that had happened yet.

"Well, it's all very strange, Larry. When I said that it was the shock of the accident that had made her ill, I did not tell the whole truth. It seems that she is suffering from a terrible hallucination about it. She feels in some strange way that the responsibility for all this—is hers. She told Mrs. Marne that she was responsible for your being on the road that night, and that she had been unfair about something or other, and that but for that the—trouble would never have happened. I don't pretend to understand it. But feeling as she does now—if anything were to—to go wrong, the poor child would count herself—she would count herself——"

"Don't!" said Varney very clearly and distinctly.

His face looked all at once so ghastly that Peter's heart stopped beating. He thought in a horrible flash that the end had come, and that he, Peter Maginnis, had brought it by tearing at the worst wound his friend had. His clumsy diplomacy fell from him as at the last trump. He dropped on his knees beside the bed with a groan.

"For God's sake, Larry, don't leave that mark to a child like her. Don't give us all that sorrow to carry to our graves——"

But Varney had pulled his arms free and was clutching wildly at his head bandages with heavily swathed fingers.

"You needn't worry about me," he said in a sharp anguished voice "Great Scott! What's—what's wrong with my head! It's killing me."

He recovered with a speed which puzzled the old Hunston doctor even more than his previous lethargy had done. Five days later he was well enough to be lifted downstairs to the small back piazza, and here he lay blanketed up in a reclining chair for half the sunny afternoon.

A bundle of letters and telegrams lay on his covered knees; and going slowly through them, he came presently to one from Elbert Carstairs, arrived only that morning:

"My dear boy: Words are feeble things at their best, and I know of none that would convey to you my great joy at the news that you are out of danger. By the same mail, I have learned that my other dear sick one in Hunston is quite herself again, and I say to God in gratitude upon my knees that my cup is full."

A pause in the reading here. The long hand of the nurse's clock on the window sill had crawled half around the dial before Varney raised the letter again from his blanketed lap:

"There is much in my heart to tell you, much to beg your forgiveness for, but I shall keep it to say to you face to face. Just now the keenest point in my grief is that all this suffering I have brought upon you has been worse than unnecessary. Light has come to me in these sleepless nights, and I see now that there was a much better way to seek what I sought, a far happier path."

The letter slipped down upon the swathed knees again, and he lay staring at the blown and sunny treetops. Presently the door at his side opened; a man started to come through it, stopped short, and stood motionless on the threshold.

Varney slowly turned his head. In the doorway, to his dim surprise, stood Mr. Stanhope's man, Henry, bowing, unobtrusive, apologetic, ready to efface himself at a gesture like the well trained servant he was.

"Why—is that you, Henry?"

"Harskin' your pardon for the hintrusion, sir," said Henry with a wooden face. "I didn't know you were 'ere, sir. 'Opin' you are feeling improved today, sir—if you please, Hi'll withdraw——"

"Henry," said Varney, "that is no way for you to speak to me—after the way you stood up for me that night. Come here."

And he disentangled from his covers and held out a rather maimed looking hand.

Then he saw the soul of the man whip through the livery of the menial like a knife, and Henry, stumbling forward with a working face, clasped that hand proudly in his strong white one; only he dropped on one knee to do it, as if to show that, though gentlemen might be pleased to show him kindness now and then, he perfectly understood that he was not as they.

"Ho, sir," he broke out in a tone very different from his well controlled voice of service, "I never seen a pluckier thing done, nor a gamer fight put up. You make me too proud, sir, with your 'and—man to man . . . I was shamed, sir, till I couldn't bear it when I came to and learned that I 'ad not stayed with you, sir, to the end. Three of them closed in on me, sir, and harskin' your pardon, sir, I was whippin' hof 'em to a standstill when one of them tripped me from be'ind, sir——"

"Stand up, Henry," said Varney, rather agitated, "like the man you are."

Henry stood up, with a jerky "Thank you, sir," striving with momentary ill-success to get a lackey's mask back upon that quivering face.

"I'll always remember you," said Varney with some difficulty, "as a good and brave man. I don't think I'll ever forget how you disobeyed an order—to try to save me. And now tell me—what became of your master?"

"'E's in the village, sir," said Henry rather bothered by his throat. "I'm expecting 'im in any moment, sir——"

"In the village?" repeated Varney, surprised. "Mr. Stanhope is in Hunston?"

"Mr. Stanhope!" said Henry with an insufferable contemptuousness for which he at once apologized. "Harskin' your pardon, sir—I thought you inquired for my master. Mr. Stanhope, I 'ave 'eard, sir, has sailed for Europe."

"Well, who's your master, then?"

"Mr. Maginnis is my master, sir."

Varney deliberated on this, and slowly smiled. "Well, you've got a good one, Henry."

"Thank you, sir. That's 'im now, sir. I 'ear 'is motor in the road. If you'll excuse me, sir—I'll go and let 'im in."

And he bowed and went away, only pausing in the entry to attend a moment to his blurred eyes with the back of a supple hand.

Peter stepped out into the porch with a cheery greeting and dropped into a rocking by Henry Sydnor Harrison chair, looking worn and tired. The instant his heavy anxiety over Varney was relieved, he had thrown himself back into the fight for reform with a desperate vigor which entirely eclipsed all his previous efforts.

On Saturday the great doctor from the city had spent an hour in the sick room.

"We-ell," he said in answer to Varney's question, "we're humping along—just humping along. Time's so confoundedly short, though. You know, Larry, this business the other night is proving the best card we've got. Fact. I havent' tried to tell you how worked up the people have been about your—accident, and how most of them don't stand for it for a minute. It's pretty well understood around town that politics was back of it all in some way, though nobody can state a single fact, and I've scoured the town for evidence without finding a scrap. Anyway, it's the solemn fact, and the committee can prove it, that that feeling is bringing over a lot of votes that we never could have reached otherwise with a long distance phone."

"Praise be that they're coming over, anyhow."

"This fight," continued Peter, absorbedly, "is confoundedly interesting because it is typical of what's going on all over the country. Hunston is just a dingy little microcosm of the whole United States of America. You can't blame these poor beggars here much, afraid of their jobs as they are. It takes courage to make a break for virtue when the devil's holding you by your bread and meat. But—well, I'd hate like the mischief to lose, particularly since we've managed to come in for such a beautiful lot of limelight. You know this fight is being watched all over the country since that trouble? And hang it, it does make a difference when the Associated Press carries half a column about you every night. Do you remember that first night in Hunston, Larry," he continued, "when you said that our part in the town's affairs must be that of quiet onlookers only? Quiet onlookers! And now everybody in the country is playing quiet onlookers on us. Our names are household words in California, and I'm credibly informed that they're naming babies after you all through the middle west. Funny, isn't it?"

Varney assented with a laugh. Presently he said rather constrainedly: "Peter—I want you to tell me a little about that night. Who was caught?"

Peter named the two. "They wouldn't testify," he explained, "and I couldn't. Old Orrick was the only man I spotted. He will get punished for assault. I don't see that they've got a case against British. He was knocked out when the porch fell, and he hadn't done a thing then except yell, probably. You can't hang a man for yelling in this state."

"No. Did you—you—was anybody killed?"

"Bless your heart, no!" cried Peter. "Why, it was only a little kicking match and hair pulling, you know, hardly worse than a college rush."

Varney looked suddenly and strangely relieved.

"I'm mighty glad to hear that," he said, and presently added: "Have you seen—Smith?"

"Smith! He went to New York some days ago. I remember—it was the very day you pulled up and got well. Why, what about him?"

"Didn't you know? He was there that night," said Varney. "Right in the thick of it, helping me."

"Helping you! Smith!"

Varney nodded. "The minute they closed in on me," he said after a moment, "and we all bunched together, I felt that there was somebody in their fighting on my side. Pretty soon I heard a voice in my ear; it said: 'Keep on your pins as long as you can; these dogs'll trample you if they get you down.' I said, 'Is that you, Smith?' and he laughed and said, 'Still on my studies.' Then somebody hit me over the head with something and I went down and he went with me. He had one arm around me, I remember. I've been thinking, ever since I could think at all, that they might—might have finished him. I believe he saved my life, Smith did."

"Well—bully for him!" said Peter slowly, much impressed. "What on earth struck him to do that, do you suppose? Well, well! I'll certainly look that old boy up in New York and shake him by the hand."

There was a considerable silence. At just the moment when Varney was about to put another question, Peter opened his mouth and answered it.

"However," he said, an irrepressible note or irritation creeping into his honest voice, "even that was not the strangest thing that happened that night. Not by a long shot."

Varney's gaze fixed with sudden interest. "Higginson? You don't mean to say that he turned up?"

"I do. And got away with it again—confound his soul!"

"What happened? Any more dirty work? Did anything get into the papers?"

"No—O, no! You've got that sized up wrong, Larry. He's no yellow journalist or anything like that. He's only the slickest underground worker this town ever saw—with his confounded apologetic, worried looking mask of a face. As for more dirty work—well, I guess the bloodshed the other night scared him up so——"

"But go on and tell me! Where'd you see him? What did you say and——"

"Sitting in our front parlor, if you please, like a dear old friend of the family."

The remembrance of the way he had been affronted and outwitted chafed Peter's spirit uncontrollably. He rose and began pacing up and down the little porch, hands thrust deep into his trousers pockets.

"About an hour after we put you to bed," he exploded, "I slipped downstairs to tell Hare to keep everybody off the place. However, a lot of people had already come in. I glanced in at the parlor and it seemed full of them—Mrs. Carstairs and Mrs. Marne—they were the first to get here after Hare's delegation—Hammerton and another man from the Gazette, the committeemen, and several I'd never laid eyes on before. Well, there in a corner, looking like a hired mourner at a nigger funeral, sat that fellow Higginson. You could have knocked me flat with a pinfeather. I'm as sure as I stand here that it was he who worked up that mob for Ryan, and the whole dirty scheme—and then coming around with his tongue in his cheek to inquire after the victim! Can you beat that gall?"

"Not easily. What happened?"

"They asked me how you were. I told 'em. Then I said before the roomful: 'I was very sorry to find you out this afternoon, Mr. Higginson, when I called at your hotel." The fellow looked white as a sheet and mumbled something I couldn't catch. Well—I couldn't smash him there before all the women, so I said: 'Please don't go away this time until I see you. I'm most anxious to have a little private conversation with you.' O, of course that was a mistake—I hate to think about it! But—well, I was a good deal worried just then," he explained, rather sheepishly, "and fact is, for the minute I wasn't thinking very much about Higginson. I needn't add that he had sneaked when I came down again. Had the cheek to leave behind a message with Hare saying he regretted to miss me, but felt it his duty to escort the ladies home."

Varney, though he had grounds for animosity which Peter never even guessed, laughed aloud. But it was a brief laugh, which quickly faded.

"And he's never been seen or heard of from that day to this? Well, for my part," he went on, rather constrainedly, "I'm almost ready to believe the man's a myth—a mere personification of evil—an allegorical name for the powers of darkness——"

"Myth!" cried Peter. "You'll see! Why, he's certain to turn up again, Larry—absolutely certain. You couldn't keep him away with a flock of cannon. If he doesn't come before, it's dead sure that he'll appear among us again on election day—four days from now—just to see the results of his pretty work. And when he does——"

"Well?" said Varney, amused through his own heartsoreness by Peter's vehemence. "When he does?"

"I've got two men watching every train, day and night," said Peter. "When Higginson sets foot in this town again, one man trails him and the other runs for me. . . . Well, I'm a generous and forbearing man, Larry, and I recall that you haven't had much fun here. I'll—yes, hang it all!—I'll bring the old rogue to you, dead or alive, and stand by in silence while you speak him your little piece."

. . . .

From the roaring ovation which followed Peter's brief remarks there emerged again the sudden, clean cut silence. Mayor Hare—mayor by the narrowest margin in the heaviest vote ever cast in that town—stood upon the improvised little stand and looked out over the packed square. He rested one small hand upon the gay clothed rail, and many people saw that it quivered. The showy "demonstration" of Peter's planning, brilliantly launched the moment the count was announced—the imported brass band, the triumphal procession with the bugles, the streamers, and the flag wrapped carriages, and now the rostrum ready set and waiting in the heart of the dense crowd—all had taken him completely by surprise.

His face showed it; yet he was not thinking of that exactly. All at once the mayor's mind had harked back to another moment, not so many days before, when he had stood in this square to make a speech; and at the rushing thought of the great contrast between that moment and this there rose in him a sense of gratefulness so deep that it took palpable form and stuck, suffocatingly, in his throat.

The square swam before his blinded eyes. He took off his glasses and wiped them frankly. Stiff formality left him, without a nod at parting, carrying along the "few remarks" he had nervously thrown together in his Roman progress up Main street.

"The modesty of the man who has just addressed you," he began unsteadily, "will deceive no one. You all know what I owe to him—what our town owes to him. You all know that if I am almost too proud and too happy to speak at all just now it is because a kindly chance sent Mr. Maginnis to Hunston."

Cheers, more cheers, and yet again cheers; cheers running on and on as though they never meant to stop; spontaneous waves of applause that meant, what nearly all knew, that Maginnis personally had captured Hunston and that his efficiency with a chair leg had reared him into a kind of demigod among certain rough fellows of the baser sort.

The speaker was resuming, not yet through with his tributes. His eye flitting over the shouting crowd had fallen upon a face.

"I know that both honesty and logic were on the side which Mr. Maginnis, coming here a stranger, elected to support. But honesty does not always make a winning cause, nor does logic. What I may call sympathy is often better than both. The splendid help that we got from Mr. Maginnis received this supplement. Sympathy came to aid reform. A brutal outrage sullied the name of our town—an outrage which, there is sad reason to believe, was born of politics. The victim of that outrage, and the hero of that terrible night, is happily with us today. I will not offend him with any words of praise. But may I not say in the market place what is the truism of the committee room—that when this gentleman did what he did he brought to reform the sympathy which has made me mayor of Hunston."

Every eye followed the direction of the speaker's glance and his grave bow; and by the chance of good position it happened that nearly all could see. Upon a dingy porch, a few yards up the Main street side of the square, stood a tall young man leaning on a cane, a wide felt hat shading a rather badly marked face. And—there was no possibility of any mistake—it was Jim Hackley's porch that he stood upon, and—yes—it was Jim Hackley himself, a sober and genial Jim Hackley, who stood by his side, in intimate pose, and grinning somewhat sheepishly into the glare of fame which suddenly enveloped him.

What part Hackley had borne in the events to which the orator had referred was never officially known, but it may be said without exaggeration that there had been suspicions abroad against him. His present friendliness with the victim of those events, therefore, seemed the gauge and symbol of penitence and reconciliation.

It was the first time that Hunston had seen Varney since the night he was hurt and the first time that most of Hunston had ever seen him. The story of his deeds and his sufferings, doubtless considerably embellished and known to every one, made him a figure of keen popular interest, and the cheers and handclappings now were thunderous, compelling him to lift his hat again and again. Some even started a swift descent upon the Hackley residence with the evident intention of carrying the young man to the stand on their shoulders. But Hackley came down to his gate to meet them and buffeted them away, explaining loudly, like an old friend and generally acknowledged sponsor, "He ain't up to it today, boys! Stand back!"

"Go on with your speech," said Peter in a fierce undertone to Hare. "He's going to faint."

"Let us give honor to whom honor is due," cried Hare hastily and so resumed his remarks.

Peter's melancholy prediction, though it spread quickly among the crowd after Varney left the porch, was quite unfounded. Varney had not the least idea of fainting. At Hare's tribute, which was as unexpected as he felt it to be totally undeserved, and the sudden rain of eyes upon him, an unaccountable dizziness had seized him while he stood reluctantly bowing; he had thrust out his hand and caught hold of the post. This blackness passed as quickly as it had come. The next instant he felt as fit a man as ever; and to the tender requests of his host, Mr. Hackley, that he should withdraw into the house for a "leetle rest up" he returned a laughing refusal. For this was his last appearance in Hunston, as well as his first in recent days, and very strongly did he desire to make it testify to his warm interest in the town's great day and the personal triumph of his friend, Peter Maginnis.

What removed Varney so abruptly from the Hackley porch and the public view was the sudden fulfillment of quite another prediction of Peter's; the one about the return to Hunston of the gum shod Mr. Higginson.

The news came without warning. At just the moment when the mayor replunged into his interrupted oratory, Varney became aware that a low, anxious voice behind him was insistently calling his name. He turned and saw the figure of a man standing in Hackley's entry way, just inside the door; he had evidently slipped in from the rear; and now, catching the young man's eye, he began mysteriously beckoning and making signs.

"Kin I speak to you a minute, Mr. Varney?" he called in the same dramatic whisper.

THE TEENIE WEENIES

BY WM. DONAHEY

The Teenie Weenies Are Called to the Colors.

NOTICE! All enlisted men of the Teenie Weenie army are hereby notified to report at the armory for spring practice not later than Monday morning; June 4, at 10 o'clock. By order of the General.

THE above notice was printed neatly on a large piece of white paper about the size of a postage stamp, and pasted up in front of the old hat which served the teenie weenies as a schoolhouse.

"O, goodie, goodie!" shouted the Dunce when he read the notice. "Now we can have some fun." And most of the other little fellows felt the same way, for the soldiers always had wonderful journeys, filled with exciting times on the army training trips.

The second floor of the schoolhouse was used as the armory, but as school was now over for the summer, the entire hat was filled with the many things needed for the upkeep of a big army. Picks and shovels had to be taken along for trench digging, pulleys and hammers, and the many pans and kettles belonging to the Cook. A whole spool of thread had to be taken along as well as tents, cots, medicine and food for the army. It was necessary to carry a great quantity of cheese for the mice, as the General had hired six mice to pull the wagons and the heavy cannon.

"Well, Captain," sad the General as he walked up to The Old Soldier, who was looking after the loading of the wagons, "is everything going smoothly?"

"Yes, sir, except for the Cook. He says we are not taking along enough beans."

"How many beans had we planned to take?" asked the General.

"Seventy-five," answered the Old Soldier.

"Well, you'd better add ten more," advised the General, "for an army can eat an awful lot of beans."

It was a most fortunate thing for the Teenie Weenies that the army was in readiness, for the day before they had planned to march away, a most dreadful thing happened.

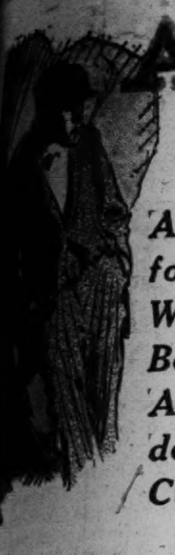
A Couple of Hundred—Honest

by Courtney Ryley Cooper



A Windfall for a Crook, Who Becomes an Ambassador for Cupid.

A STREET CAR ground slowly up the long slope toward aristocratic Capitol hill, and Eddie Girard watched it lackadaisically. Not that Eddie was interested. It merely took his mind off of things, that was all; off the fact that back in the big town, Fourteenth street with its lights and its clanging crossing at Broadway, was gone to him, that the spidery form of the L structure down at Third avenue would be only a memory now, that "the gang" far down in Greenwich village would speak of him sorrowfully for a while, then forget. It took his mind off the fact that he was sitting on a bench of Denver's capitol grounds, an exile.

Eddie wished he could talk to some one, but of the long row of benches which fronted the sidewalk before the great, worn stoned old capitol, Eddie was the only occupant. He would have walked down to the corner and chatted with the policeman, except for the reason that if there came a slip in the rock ribbed path he had set for himself the fewer policemen who knew him, the better. And so Eddie Girard merely sat there, his checked cap pulled low against the morning sun, his thin, long fingered hands deep in his pockets, and watched the street cars.

For Eddie Girard, late of the Cinder gang, had more reasons than that of being an exile for feeling blue. Time was when Eddie's cheerful little grin had been his biggest asset—Sheeny Jake had told him that when he started, a boy, in the pickpocket school down on Fourteenth street and even the warden of the College on the Hill had remarked something about it when Eddie got his first "fall," after a bit ot an episode in the crush following the docking of a Hamburg liner over in Hoboken. But that was a good while ago—and the little grin seemed to have vanished now. Eddie Girard was staring toward the stone wall—with little beyond. Today would come the bacteriological report, and should it be positive——

Eddie winced at the thought, then turned his head. In the moment of concentration he had failed to notice the man who had approached, seated himself beside him, and now was staring hard ahead, a rolled newspaper in one hand, the other deep in a pocket. With his old, unconscious trick of appraisement, Eddie figured that he must be worth money. The clothing was stylish, the monogrammed fob indicated a good watch at the end of it, and the diamond on the finger was flawless. Besides this, Eddie also noticed three other things, that the man beside him was young, that he was good looking, and that he liked him. That was a habit of Eddie's—he formed his impressions at the beginning and changed not. He waited a moment and fathomed a glint in the young man's eyes, a glint which told of sober thoughts beyond. Then he hunched himself a bit nearer on the seat. Here was companionship of a type he had not looked for.

"What's eatin' on—you?" he asked, looking up from under the brim of his cap. The other man turned.

"Beg pardon?"

"What's growlin' at your door? You're starin' a trapdoor through the asphalt."

Then the man laughed a little and turned, too.

"Was I?" he asked cheerfully. "Just thinking, I guess. A fellow gets a bit homesick when he comes back to the old town and doesn't know any one."

"Been away, huh?" Eddie was glad of the chance of conversation.

"Been down in the Andes——"

"Where's that?"

"South America. I had a stopover on the way back east, so I just took a day off. Live here, do you?"

Eddie straightened and the old grin came back, sarcastically.

"Kid, honest," he asked, "do I look it? On th' level now, do I? Where you goin', back east?"

"New York."

"New York! Gee!" Eddie whistled and his eyes went painful. "Gee, New York!" He whistled again and the man regarded him quizzically.

"Are you from there?" he asked.

Eddie leaned forward. "Don't ast me about it," he begged. "Gee, New York—an' Coffee John's, an' Sharkey's, an'—aw nix!" he burst forth, "what's th' use, huh? An' me waitin' for th' geek what looks through th' long glass to say, 'Yes, you got 'em!' What's the use? Talk about hard luck! Me out here where I can't get away, where I can't even fan a soft one or nip a poke! Me——"

"What-t-t-t?" The other man's question was long drawn out with wonderment.

Eddie leaned forward and clasped tight his hands.

"Aw, I'm up against it," he burst forth at last, all the piled up worry of days of loneliness flooding to the surface, "I'm from the Cinder gang, see? You've heard of 'em; they hangs out down Greenwich way. I ups and gets a fall in Boston and they shoots me to Deer island. I comes out with this hack-hack thing in me chest. I don't know whether I've got 'em or whether I ain't. So th' gang ships me out here, sayin' they'll take care of me an' tellin' me to see some cough shark an' find out. So I does, see? I writes back to th' gang an tells 'em what it's goin' to cost, an' where I'll get off at—an' all I gets back is that they're all in dutch; they can't send me a shiner! An' me out here where I can't even nip a turnip without somebody gettin' jerry to me and sendin' me up th' long road to th' boardin' house on th' hill. A fine chanct, wot!"

He was silent then, and the other man moved a little closer.

"You're a crook then—or that is, you were? O, I'm not a detective——" he laughed a little at the queer expression on Eddie's face—"I just asked because I was interested in you."

Eddie flipped a bit of dust from his coat sleeve.

"That's it," he answered. "I never done nothin' else since I came out of Sheeny Jake's —that's a phoney joint where they shows you th' ropes," he added.

The other man watched him intently.

"And you're having a bacteriological examination made, I take it?"

"You're jerry." Eddie watched another car as it ascended the hill.

"When will you know?"

"This afternoon, th' geek said."

"How much is it going to cost——" There was an attorney like something about the man's questions. But Eddie did not seem to mind.

"Twenty-five."

"And you haven't got the money."

"Say"—Eddie Girard had straightened suddenly—"what you think, anyway? If I'd had th' kale I wouldn't have slept all night on this here bench, would I? If I'd had th'——"

"I didn't know that part of it," the other man smiled. "I was just asking to find out."

"Well, you've got it." Eddie spoke the sentence with a stoical sort of sarcasm. He eyed the fob out of a corner of his eye and noticed that the man had taken his hand out of his pocket. Then he gave up the thought. There wouldn't be a chance—with a policeman on each corner. He settled back in his seat and spread his arms wide. There came a feeling of indifference into his heart.

"Well," he said at last, "they say the main guy up at the boardin' house on the hill's a decent sort of nut at that. Lets the cons get out an' work an'——"

"But you never tried that, did you?" The man was smiling a bit.

"What? Work?" Eddie straightened once more, then slouched again. "Do I look like it? But if I've got to fall some time I'd rather fall in a place like that than——"

"I don't think you need to—right now," the other man was looking hard ahead. His eyes narrowed. "They say that a crook won't turn on a friend——"

"That's straight."

"And"—he turned and looked long into the eyes of Eddie Girard—"I'm going to give it a trial. Do you want to make a couple of hundred dollars easily—and honestly?"

"And what?" Eddie shook his head. "It ain't done. Not that easily stuff, anyhow."

"We'll see about that part of it." The man's face had gone serious. "Look here——"

"Eddie—Eddie Girard."

"Eddie, suppose I should want you to go to Glenwood Springs and find out something—for two hundred dollars. Would you do it?"

Eddie Girard drawled. It was too good to be true.

"Does a duck ——" Then he stopped suddenly. The man was talking and there was something in his tone which impelled attention.

"I'll have to tell you a little story first. I've—well, I've got a good deal of money now. I didn't always have it. The fact is, I didn't have it six months ago—then I struck a hole in a mountain with gold in it and I've come back with plenty. But that's not the point, exactly," he added hastily. "You see"—he hesitated—"it's about a girl."

"I knowed that when you started." Eddie looked hard at the pavement. "I've got a Moll myself. Go on."

But the man beside him seemed not to know just how to begin. He rolled the newspaper in his hands just a bit tighter, then ran a finger under his collar, as though something felt tight and choking there. Then he seemed to forget Eddie Girard, sitting there beside him.

"It isn't much that I want you to do," he began at last. "Just to find out a little something. You see, the little girl and I don't know each other now. But we were engaged once. It was my fault—I lied to her, Eddie, and that's what killed her. And I lied to her because I loved her, because I loved her better than anything else in the world, because I wanted her above everything else. I——"

He stopped and Eddie filled in the breach.

"How'd you do it?"

A pause and then:

"Every man has his excuse. I have mine—her mother. The little girl wasn't like the ordinary run of women, Eddie. I guess, though, that the one we care about never is just like any one else. But beyond that, there was something different, don't you know. And I felt that I'd do anything in the world to get her. Why"—and he smiled—"many and many the time I can remember when I lived on practically nothing down here in Denver just so that I could run up and see her. And that was one of the things that was bad, Eddie. It gave the impression that I had money—and I fostered the impression. They had plenty—and her mother had taught her that when she left her own home, she must go to one just as good. She herself wouldn't have cared—she wasn't that kind—but it had been drummed into her.

"Why, many and many's the evening we've sat at dusk in the big parlor up there, she playing the big piano and singing some old song, like 'When You and I were Young' or 'Mavourneen,' or just playing the 'Melody in F' real softly just for herself and me, and there was something about it all that told me that if I could just get her to myself she wouldn't care for the money part of life. But I couldn't do it. So I lied—I lied about what I had—and she found out. Then she sent me away. That was two years ago."

His voice trailed off, and Eddie Girard, pickpocket, looked up.

"Well?" he asked, reaching forward to snap a twig in two, "where do I get in?"

The man reached into his pocket again and when the hand came forth a roll of bills came with it.

"I'm going to give you two hundred dollars," he said slowly. "Maybe you'll steal it. I'll never miss it—so that part doesn't make much difference. But if you want to be honest by me, and if you want to remember that I've tried to help you a little, too, in helping myself, you'll go up to Glenwood for me and find out what I want to know."

"And what's that?"

"Just that she's happy," and the face beside Eddie's showed pain. "That's all I want to know. I just want you to find out if she's really happy—then maybe I'll feel a little better. A man never gets over grieving for a wrong he's done, Eddie."

The old grin, such as he had worn in the rustling, hurrying crowds at the landing of the liners back here in the big town, returned to the face of Eddie Girard. He reached forward for the bills, and thrilled a bit at their crinkle.

"Sure, mister," he said. "I'll do that. Sure—gimme your name and address—and hers. I'll find out. Sure."

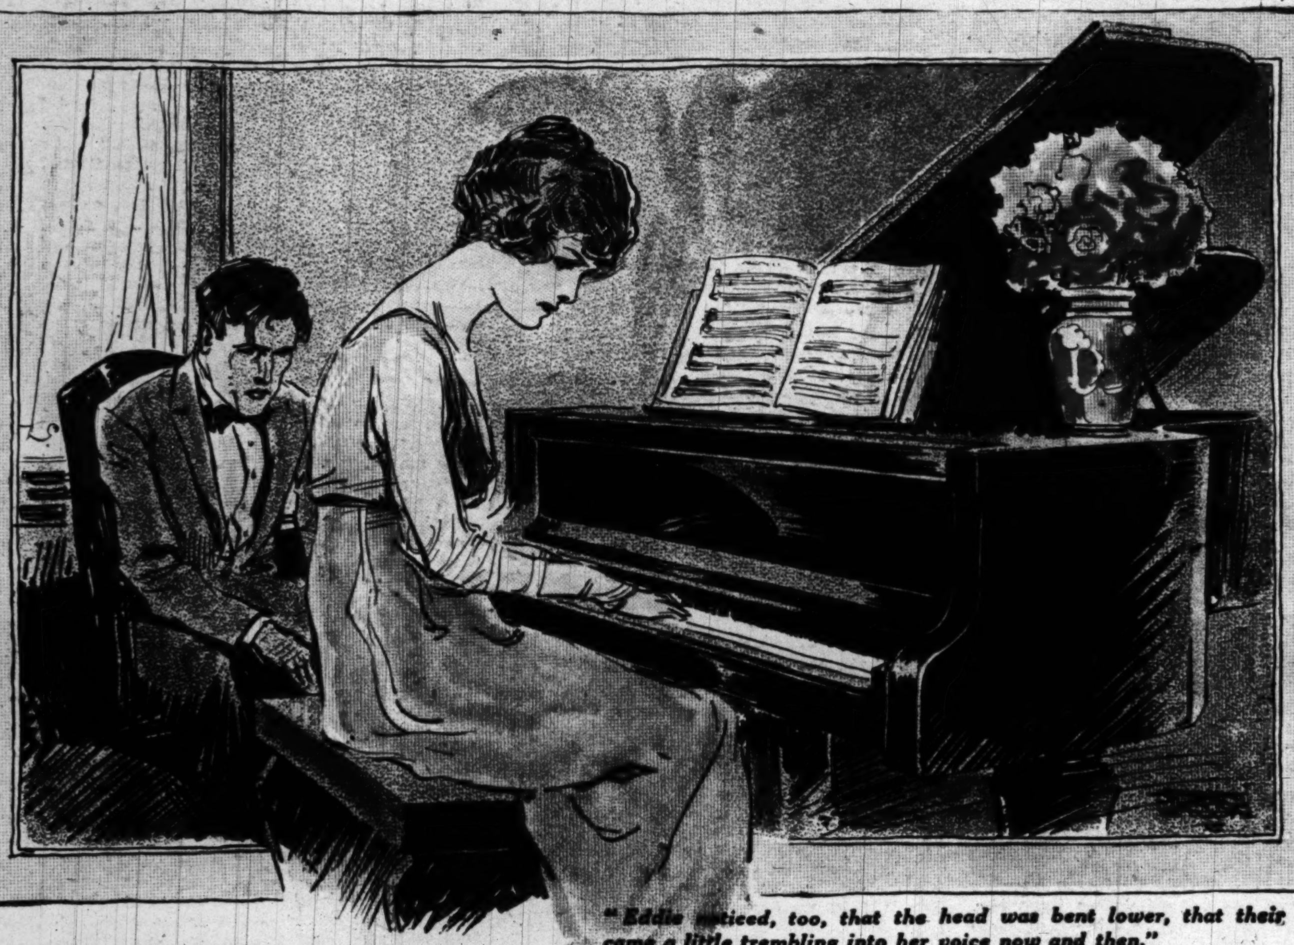
He watched the writing of the card. Then he stuck forth his hand again to say good-by.

"I got this right, have I?" he asked. "Mr. Winston, at the Churchill. And hers is Celia Andrews, ain't it?"

"That's right. You'll——"

"Go up there? Sure, Mr. Winston. I'll grab the first rattler. Sure. I'll call you up when I get back—sure! S'long."

Then he sat and grinned to himself again as the straight, broad shouldered figure faded down the street and lost itself at the maze of the street car junction. He grinned, then whistled a bit. He rammed his hand far into



"Eddie noticed, too, that the head was bent lower, that their came a little trembling into her voice now and then."

his pocket to feel the crinkle of the bills.

"Sure—I'll go—I've got a picture of meself doin' it," he mused. "Sure, I'll go—an' get somethin' to eat!"

He rose and sauntered to a restaurant. He ate, then roamed the downtown streets to a haberdashery store, for cashless days had brought a need of repairs. He whistled and grinned. He even went so far as to stop and joke with a policeman. Then he looked at the great clock of the tower far down the street and hurried for an office building.

"Well?" he asked five minutes later, and the grin had faded. He was facing a rather thin faced man of earnest demeanor and white coat in an office of many charts and instruments. "What's the sentence?"

The physician hesitated, then forced a snap into his tone.

"Positive, Mr. Girard—I'm sorry."

"Positive?" there was a little gasp in Eddie's voice. "Then I've got it?" He had hoped in spite of himself. "I've—I've got it?"

The physician seated himself at his desk and pulled forth a slip of paper.

"The microscopic slide is extremely positive," was his answer. "Now about the treatment——"

But Eddie Girard had walked close to the desk and interrupted.

"Nix on that treatment stuff," he began, and his voice was strange. "It ain't no use with me. I wouldn't keep it up—never did keep anything up. How long do you give me to go?"

The physician's eyes narrowed.

"Six months—the way you live."

Eddie Girard sneered.

"Well," and he pulled forth the bills of payment, "them six months'll be crowded, that's all. S'long, doc!" He thrust forth a hand that was cold and trembling. He turned and left the office. His head bowed, he walked slowly down the street, bumping now and then into a hurrying pedestrian and forgetting to apologize. "Six months," he murmured once; "but it'll be back in th' big town!"

The depot loomed ahead. He walked on. He entered, then stopped. The rasping, rolling voice of the train announcer had met him, and the words brought a faint memory of the old grin back to his face.

"All 'board Glenwood Springs," he requoted. "Sure—I'm goin'—sure, Mr. Winston. I'll——"

Then he stopped and the policeman near by wondered a bit at the action of the undersized figure in the checked cap. For Eddie Girard had taken a roll of bills from his pocket and was staring at them, staring and talking to himself.

"He gives me th' kale to beat it back to th' big town an' I gyp him!" he murmured. "I meet one square guy an'——" He whirled. He sought the ticket office and crowded a man aside. "Round trip—Glenwood Springs," he ordered.

Thus it was that late the next afternoon a small figure shunted past the great hotels of the summer resort and sought, down a side street, a second hand shop. Ten minutes later he had emerged, a small black tool kit over his shoulder, and looked about him. He called back into the store and once more asked directions. Then he started forth. Far into the residence district he wandered, then turned where a great house threw its great roof against the sky. He rang the bell imperatively and walked past the butler when the great door swung open.

"From the telephone company," he said. "I want to see Miss Andrews."

A moment more and he faced her, and stared wonderingly at the spun gold of her hair, at the childishness and the prettiness of her small molded form, her perfect features. Then he raised his checked cap a bit.

"I'm th' gent from th' phone company what talked to you over th' wire a little while ago," he began. "I've come to fix it up. Where is it?"

Miss Andrews smiled.

"But the phone sounded all right to me," she answered.

Eddie Girard wagged his head. "Sure it does," he averred. "That's th' trouble. It's all right comin' in an' all wrong goin' out. It's off in th' box somewhere. If you'll show me th' way——"

She led the way to an alcove darkened by curtains, and Eddie smiled a trifle to himself. That was what he had been wishing for. Hastily he stepped forward and drew the clippers from his tool bag. He snipped the wires and unscrewed the instrument. Then he stepped to the curtained doorway and glanced suggestively toward the big living room, where the light streamed through the great glass by the window seat and threw its flood upon the massive piano near by.

"It's awful dark in here to do careful work," he hinted. "If you don't mind I'll beat it over there to th' window an'—want to see me fix this up?" he asked boyishly.

The girl nodded and smiled. Eddie watched her until the last crinkling little lines about the mouth faded—then started a trifle from his absorption. The man on the bench had been right. She was different—different in the sweetness of her smile, different in the depth of her eyes, in the childishness of her interest—different from any girl Eddie ever had talked to. But then Eddie's scope of womanhood had not been the broadest in the world. He walked forward and sought his place in the window. He motioned toward the piano bench.

"Mebbe if you'd sit there——" he suggested.

"Can I see all right?" the interest thrilled Eddie a little—he did not know why. He stuck his cap into a pocket and opened his kit.

"Sure; I'm just goin' to stir up th' transformer a little."

What it all meant Eddie did not know, or care whether it meant anything. Eddie Girard was sparring for time. He brought forth his screwdriver and opened the box. Then he looked up.

"I ain't been in Glenwood Springs long," he said.

"No?" She was sitting there, her hands folded before her, her lips smiling, and a friendliness in her eyes that gave Eddie Girard an uncontrollable desire to leap forward and—— But he held himself back and continued talking.

"Just a week or so. I came out here from down-south. It's kinda lonesome when you don't know nobody, ain't it?"

"I suppose it must be. I never was away from home much—that is, without my mother or some one with me. But I know how it is. Mother and father are in Europe and I'm all alone here, and it gets mighty tiresome sometimes. So I know how you must feel."

Eddie gave thanks for two things—first, for the information; secondly, for the fact that her interest had been taken from his supposed work. He allowed his hands to fall idle.

"But then you've got a home and all that sorta junk," he said. "I've just got a room over Pringle's second hand store. Say," he asked with sudden interest, "you play?"

Celia Andrews' right hand wandered to the keys and fingered them lightly.

"Yes," she answered, and smiled. "Why?"

"O, nothin'—that is—well, it is somethin', too——" Eddie raised his screwdriver and studied the end of it with wonderful attention. "Only I'm—I'm afraid to ask it——"

The light of the great window was fading a bit. There had come deepening of the shadows in the big room. The girl leaned forward and her eyes grew serious at the expression of the pickpocket's face.

"What's wrong about asking?" she queried.

Eddie continued to look at the end of his screwdriver. "Nothin'—only you'd think me fresh or somethin'," came his reply slowly. "Me nothin' but a telephone geek what you never even saw before an'——"

"Well?"

"But I've—I've been so lonesome for things like they was down home—course it wasn't nothin' like this here place—but anyway sis used to sit at th' piano in th' evening like it's gettin' now an' play, an' when I seen you there at th' piano I—I——"

She smiled again in the growing dusk and turned. Her hands rested on the keyboard.

"I'll play for a you a little—if you want me to," she said, and there was kindliness in her tone. "Then I must turn you over to Henry, the butler. He'll help you with the telephone. Now, what shall it be?"

Eddie struggled hard with memory. Then he leaned forward.

"Sis used to play 'When You and I Were Young,'" he suggested. Gee—but it was pretty!"

His eyes narrowed then and he watched intently. For the smile of the girl at the piano had suddenly faded, faded to give way to an expression of deepest seriousness. Her hands hovered over the keys for just a second, then dropped in her lap.

"I—I haven't played that for a long time," came slowly. "I'm afraid I——"

"I wish you could remember it—honest." Eddie Girard's voice was pleading. "I've just been sittin' in me room o' nights rememberin' how sis used to play it, an'—won't you please?" he begged.

She turned her eyes downward. There was silence for a moment, then the hands raised slowly and touched the keys. Full toned, yet softly, there came the melody of the old song, flooding through the shading room, sounding forth from the great piano prettily and sweetly and tremblingly. Eddie Girard leaned back in the big seat and was silent, for there had come something into the features of the girl at the piano which gripped and held him.

Softer the music grew and more soulful. Eddie Girard seemed to be forgotten now, for the gaze of the eyes of her who sat there was far in the beyond. Her lips moved. She was singing, singing again the old words of the old song, singing them to herself and to a memory. Eddie Girard watched and listened. Then he leaned forward. The voice and the music had ceased.

"Gee, that was pretty!" he said, and there was a trifle of huskiness in his voice that was genuine. Eddie Girard had never experienced anything just like this before. "That's prettier than sis ever played it. I wonder if you'd mind—if you'd—you'd play 'Mavor——' you know what I mean?"

"'Mavourneen'?" There was a queer little something in her glance as she looked at him.

"That's it. Would you mind?" There was eagerness in his tone. "Gee, I like that. Sis——"

But she had obeyed, and once again Eddie Girard, pickpocket and ex-convict, lounged in the great window seat and wondered at the something which throbbed through him. The voice had come again and the old Irish melody floated softly, enchantingly through the room. Eddie noticed, too, that her head was bent lower, that there came a little trembling into her voice now and then, that once there seemed a choking. Suddenly he leaned forward at the sight of a pearly something in the dimness of evening. He touched her shoulder, ever so slightly.

A start, a bit of a discord, and the girl had whirled from the piano seat. A hint of a scream, but the look on Eddie Girard's face halted her. He had risen now and was leaning over the piano, the telephone box forgotten, the screwdriver on the floor.

"I didn't mean to do that," he said slowly, "but I couldn't help it, Miss Andrews. So you ain't forgotten, then?"

"Forgotten?" There was surprise in her voice. "I don't know what you mean."

"I mean just this here," and Eddie Girard stepped closer. "I ain't no telephone man. I don't know th' first thing about one, except how to rob a pay station. I'm just a plain, ordinary, everyday crook what got treated white, an' I'm tryin' to pay it back. I'm a pickpocket—dips an' gun mobs we calls 'em—I'm a con man, an' I'm a general all around gangster what's tryin' to do a decent thing for the first time in his life."

"A thief!" There was a little gasp to her voice.

"That's it—an' I've done my time for it. Throw me out if you want to, Miss Andrews. But that ain't what I'm here for. You could show me every piece of junk you've got in th' place an' I wouldn't cop a jitney's worth. That ain't what I'm after right now. I'm after your happiness—an' somebody else's."

"My happiness?" Her eyes had grown wide with wonder—and yet she did not retreat from him. There was something impelling about Eddie Girard as he stood there before her, his hands clinched tight, the determined glint of his eyes showing strong and glistening in the now spluttering light from the street arc outside. He dragged his cap from his pocket and twisted it. He tried to smile and failed.

"That's it—your happiness," he began again. "Not the happiness what you've got—th' happiness that you ain't had for a good long time. And you haven't had it, have you? I know you haven't—I seen that when you was a-playin'. If you'd 'a' smiled an' laughed I'd 'a' gone away an' never said nothin'. But you didn't—and that's why I'm here—and that's just why I'm goin' to stay here until I tell you what I want to tell you, Miss Andrews."

He paused, but she did not answer. He stepped closer, but she did not seem afraid. Eddie Girard's voice dropped low. "The doc gives me six months, Miss Andrews—but that ain't got nothin' to do with things, much. Except this: I'm sittin' on a park bench a-wonderin' what to do—I'd slept there all night—when up comes a fellow an' sits down beside me. He's got on good clothes an' diamonds, but he ain't ashamed of me. He sits there an' he hears my spiel. He knows I'm broke an' he wants to help me. An' he hands me a roll o' bills an' tells me to come here. 'Eddie,' says he, 'you've told me you's a crook. But I'm goin' t' trust you. It ain't much for you to do—just to find out if a certain person is happy—mebbe then,' he says, 'mebbe if I knew she was, mebbe me conscience would rest better.' And then he tells me all about it, Miss Andrews——"

"Told you?" The eyes of Celia Andrews had gone wide. She started forward. "You mean——"

"I mean Mr. Winston. Yes, he told me—he told me th' whole thin', clean an' straight an' right from th' heart—he told me because it was somethin' that'd been on his mind, just th' same as what I'd been afraid of had been on mine. He told me, an' he didn't spare himself, Miss Andrews. An' he didn't ast me to do nothin' but to find out if you was happy—that was all. He didn't ast me to come out here—he didn't ast me to talk to you—he didn't ast me nothin' but to find out that one thing. An' you can't blame a man for that, Miss——"

"I don't blame him"—Eddie Girard noticed that in the light of the street arc her hands had gone white where they gripped the back of the chair—"only——"

"That he trusted a crook to do it." Eddie's voice carried a snap with it. "I knew that'd come sooner or later. He trusted a crook, Miss Andrews, because it all shot into his brain before he knew it—because that crook had slept all night on a park bench an' he wanted to help him. He trusted a crook because he thought that crook could be trusted—because he thought that maybe he'd be grateful. An' he never ast' for nothin' more'n just what I've said—just t' know if you was happy—if you'd forgotten. He ain't never stopped blamin' himself, Miss Andrews. In th' time he's been away he ain't never stopped lovin' you or—or——"

He stared. A tear had dropped upon those white gripped hands. Eddie Girard's voice trembled a bit—and he did not know why.

"He ain't never stopped lovin' you, he ain't never stopped grievin' for what he done, Miss Andrews"—the words were pleading now—"he ain't never stopped wishin' for you—an' don't you think that mebbe he's paid up for it now? Don't you think that mebbe he's suffered enough?—a man that'd do a crook thing just for th' fun of it wouldn't suffer none for it. An' he's been sufferin'—honest—you can see it behind th' smile on his face, just like I could see it behind th' smile on yours. He's sufferin' an' he wants you—wants you minute after minute and hour after hour an' day after day. He's a-wantin' you an' a-beggin' for you an' a-sufferin' for you—but all he ast, all he felt he deserved, was to know whether you was happy. So won't you give him a chanct, Miss Andrews, won't you—won't you, please? They ain't been nothin' done to this here phone—I could fix it up an' connect it in a jiffy if you'd just say the word—so we could get Denver an' tell him an' so you could talk to him—an'"—Eddie Girard moved closer—"I'd hold th' receiver while you came in here an' played them old songs for him over th' telephone, just like you used to in th' evenin' when he'd sit there in th' big window an' look at you and let th' love in him grow an' grow an' grow until it just ran away with him! Won't you let me do it? Won't you please—please——?"

Where the lights blazed bright the next night on Denver's little Great White Way a small, bent figure dodged down the steps to a place of drinks and glaring lights, where the cabaret singers roared from the platform to the tuneless banging of the never quiet piano.

A waiter sidled from somewhere and lounged beside his chair. "'Lo, Eddie; what's up?"

The bent little figure turned. A slight smile came to his lips.

"The biggest thing in the world, keed," came the answer of Eddie Girard. "I'm beatin' it back to th' big town. You know—th' town with th' subways an' big lights an' all that sort of junk. Say, what's th' highest priced drink you got in th' house?"

"Crême de cocoa."

"Gimme one."

The waiter's eyes opened a bit. "Say, guy," he announced, "that thing costs sixty cents."

"That's all right, gimme one." Eddie Girard handed forth a dollar and laid it on the table. "And say, keed," he ordered as the waiter picked up the coin and started away, "bite that before you give it to th' cashier, see?"

"Bite it—why?" The waiter turned the slightest bit.

Eddie Girard's eyes went into the distance. "It's a little unusual, that's all," he answered. "You see, that's the first honest dollar I ever made in me life."

by Berton Braley

Advertising Plus Psychology, But Mostly Psychology.

THE Cyclonic Comedienne had finished her turn and retired into the wings after taking seven calls. The curtain went up on the acrobatic act that usually closes the bill. Phil Moses, big league scout, and Hank Curran, baseball writer, joined the outgoing crowd.

"Well," said Hank, as they reached the lobby, "what do you think of the head-liner?"

"The dippy dame?" questioned Phil.- "Great! She sure has speed."

"But no control," suggested Curran.

"Gets 'em over, some way, though," replied the scout. "Lookut the way the crowd fell for her."

"A good press agent is a great asset," said Curran, "and advertising pays. She has 'em eating out of her hand before she comes out of the flies.

"Advertising is certainly one grand little trick," the sport man went on; "it's made the show business."

"It's made baseball, too," added the scout, "even if half the bonehead players and managers do think the baseball reporters otta be kept out of the parks. Speaking of advertising, there was a team once——"

"Tell it to me inside," said Curran, pushing the nearest swing door. "It's a fine night to stay out of the open air. What's yours?"

"Long and dark," responded Moses. "Shall we sit at this table?"

"Yep," acquiesced the newspaper man. "Brother of Bacchus, send Ganymede over with a highball and a dark beer. Gentlemen, be seated. There was a team once——" he repeated, suggestively.

"There was a town once," the scout corrected him, "down in the southwest somewhere, not so awful far from Marlin, though far enough so nobody from there ever got around the training camps much. And that town had a baseball team.

"There was a sort of a kind of a league around that country, not a professional league and not exactly an amateur league. Nor you couldn't precisely call it a semipro league. Might be a demi-semi-pro league. And it wasn't even what you'd call a league if you cared for the absolute truth. There was maybe half a dozen, maybe seven or eight teams that used to play a makeshift schedule with each other and after they couldn't play no more, late in the fall, they'd row about who was champion.

"They was the kind of teams where they took in enough money to give the boys a few dollars now and then to buy extra chewing tobacco or a suit of clothes, and once in a while a team would have enough backing to hire a pitcher. Mostly, though, the players would come from the sawmill, and the dry goods store, and the telephone company, and the seed store, and them places.

"Marionville was the town I started to talk about, and they sure was fond of their team there. When there was a game on the whole town would quit work and go out to watch the boys play. But the place was pretty poor and 10 cents a head was about all they could charge ordinarily. There ain't no big salaries paid on 10 cents a head, even if the Federals did figure on doing it. Fact was that in spite of the popularity of the team and the fact that the boys mostly played just for the fun of it—with a five or ten dollars throwed in now and then—they had a deficit every year. And the leading citizens had to make it up.

"Most of the leading citizens wasn't rolling in it, but they come through noble. Col. Heady was the only one who had what you could call money, and he'd dig regular year after year. He dug deeper'n' anybody else, so, of course, he sort of ran the team. Never missed a game, the colonel didn't, neither.

"Heady'd made all his money out of a novelty factory. It employed more people than the sawmill, and, though it was in a small town, it was known all over the country. You'd know it if I was telling real names in this here recital. And he'd built it up by advertising.

"The colonel was a bug on advertising. Called it 'commercialized psychology' and believed it could do almost anything. If business was good the colonel'd advertise strong and if it was bad he'd advertise stronger. He used to say that you could make hell a popular summer resort if you'd advertise it hard enough.

"Consequently the local team was a well advertised proposition and that was one reason for its popularity. But even the colonel couldn't make it pay, because the town had just so much money to spend for baseball and it was spending it all—which wasn't quite enough.

"So the colonel dug like a man and never hollered. But there was one thing that was getting his angora. The Marionville outfit had never been able to win much from Hollister. And when it came to the end of the season series of five games Hollister always copped. Once in three years maybe the locals would hold the visitors to two and two, but the fifth game would always go to Hollister.

"Six or eight years of this was getting on the old man's nerves. Hollister and Marionville was rival towns and the colonel and all of the rest of the Marionville folks would rather lose all season to other teams than lose one series to Hollister. The Hollister team had a little more money, but that didn't quite explain why they had it on Marionville. Old Col. Heady used to insist it was psychology.

"'We've just got the idea they can beat us, so they do,' he said, 'though they haven't really got anything on us. We've got to do something sensational to cure this stage fright.'

"Well, the colonel spent most of the summer season trying to figure how to break up a game or a series on the Hollister crew, and some of the things he put over was ingenious, all right. He got the local reporter to fix up a line of chatter for the coaches to use, and then made the coachers learn it by heart; it rattled the Hollister crowd, all right, but not enough. He hired a steam calliope to toot derisively—or that's how he said it—whenever the Hollister players fanned or popped; he distributed cowbells among the local rooters and gave 'em these devilene whistles, but it wasn't any of it any good; the Hollisters still had it on Marionville.

"Finally just before the end of the season series one year the colonel said he had to go north on business, and after he'd taken the train the rumor went around that the old fellow had gone north after 'big game.'

"'The old fox wants a winning team,' the fans said, 'and you can bet he'll come back with the goods. Nuthin' to it this year but Marionville. The old boy'll murder the jinx if it costs a wad.'

"This was the wise opinion around those parts, and it sort of percolated through the town till everybody was grinning as if he knew a nice warm secret from everybody else. Some of the local sports quietly grabbed all the Hollister bets they could at 2 to 1 and 8 to 5.

"All this rumor and talk had the town so excited that when the Clarion come out with the news that the colonel would be home the night before the Hollister-Marionville series, the whole town got ready to meet the train.

"That was in the time when Mosely, the New York star, was in his palmy days. You've heard of Mosely, of course, even if he was before your time. Tall, handsome, rangy guy, a generous, friendly, big hearted boy, and one of the great pitchers of the game.

"Matthewson at his best wouldn't have anything on that bird, and his face was pretty near as familiar as the president's, it had been in the papers so much.

"One of the colonel's proudest boasts was that he'd met Mosely several times and had taken lunch with him once, and whenever he came back from a trip north he'd rave for hours about Mosely, and what a regular fellow he was, and how he'd do almost anything for you if he liked you, and all that.

"So when the colonel dropped off the train and a tall, long, rangy guy dropped off with him the crowd that was at the station took a look at the young fellow's face and gave a cracking big cheer. None of 'em had ever seen Mosely before that time, but they knew his face from the pictures.

"Besides, the mob remembered that the colonel knew Mosely and had talked about how willing he was to help his friends, so they were wise right away that the old man had persuaded the great pitcher to come down and pitch for Marionville.

"They yelled 'speech! speech!' but the young fellow only grinned. Then the colonel clumb up on a baggage truck and gave 'em something like this:

"'Ladies and gentlemen, it is a great pleasure to find so many of you here at this station. But I know you're not interested in seeing me so much as in knowing what I have done for the Marionville Weasels. I am not at liberty to give you a definite announcement, but this young man (get up here, Mose—I mean Patterson, and show yourself) this young man will have a good deal to do with our coming and long awaited victory over the Hollister Grangers. We needed a pitcher; here he is.'

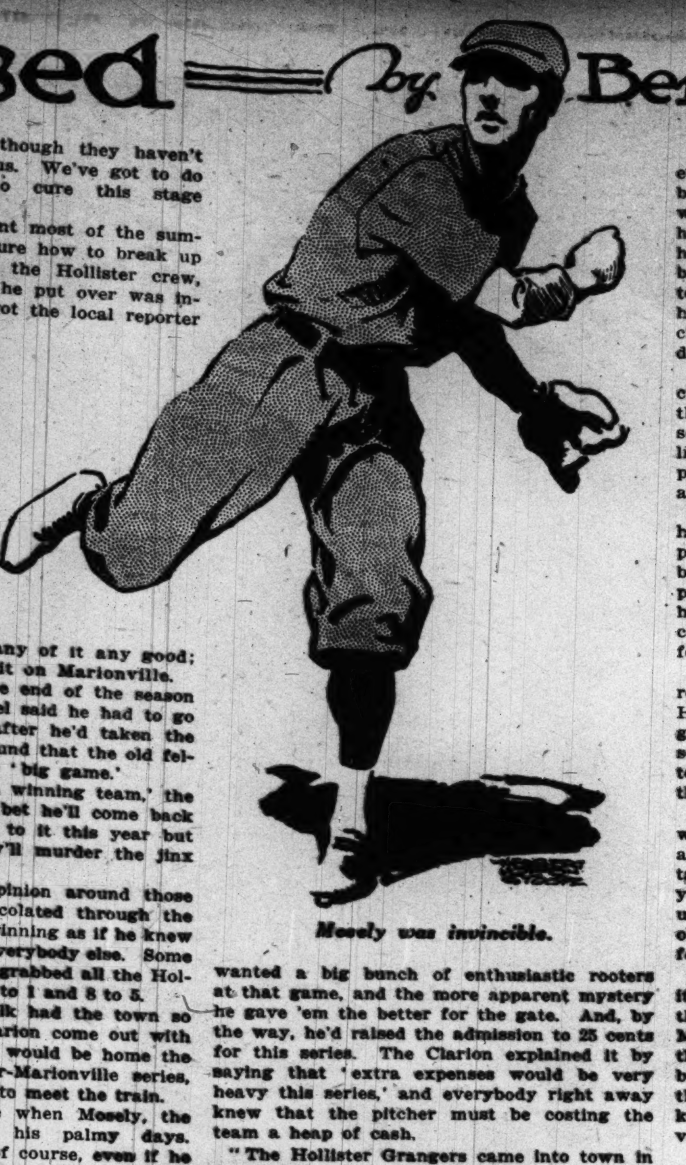
"The young chap got up on the truck and stood there, bowing.

"'I repeat that I am under pledge not to reveal officially any arrangements that I have made,' said the colonel, 'but Mr. Mose—Patterson, I mean—has come down from New York, where the big league season has closed, to pitch a game or two for us. With his aid we feel confident of reversing the usual defeat we have had in the past from the Grangers.'

"When he'd said that much he got down. Well, of course, everybody was wise at once. Simple as could be. Twice the colonel had started to say 'Mose—' and had said 'Patterson.' And what was that about the big league season closing in New York? Why, of course, it was a cinch. The old colonel had been so darned anxious to win a series from the Grangers that he'd gone to New York and hired Mosely—the incomparable Mosely—to come down and pitch a game or two for the Weasels. Game old sport, the colonel, didn't care what it cost him.

"And that night everybody in Marionville knew what the colonel had said, and when the next morning the Clarion came out with a front page story about the 'unknown new pitcher' full of hints and suggestions that the unknown wasn't so darned unknown after all, and that he was incog, because he didn't want it known he was pitching even a few games for a small town team—well, by that time the whole burg knew just who the stranger was and laughed itself sick over what was going to happen to the surprised Hollister crew when they came over.

"The colonel's ringer didn't floss around town much, he kept pretty close to his room. That was part of the colonel's policy of stirring up curiosity among the crowd. He wanted a big bunch of enthusiastic rooters at that game, and the more apparent mystery he gave 'em the better for the gate. And, by the way, he'd raised the admission to 25 cents for this series. The Clarion explained it by saying that 'extra expenses would be very heavy this series,' and everybody right away knew that the pitcher must be costing the team a heap of cash.



Mosely was invincible.

"The Hollister Grangers came into town in the morning and they hadn't been in town fifteen minutes before they heard about the new pitcher and got a pretty strong impression of who he was. Nobody told 'em direct, you understand, just hinted around delicate—about as delicate as Rube Waddell at a pink tea. So all the Grangers knew was that they was going up against a new pitcher who came from New York, who was named 'Mose—I mean Patterson,' and who didn't have anything but speed, control, and brains.

"They were a husky, free swinging bunch, those boys, and it was that batting edge that always won for them against Marionville before. They'd been up against some mighty good local pitchers, too, and one fellow from a bush league who afterward made good in the majors. But when they walked out on the field and took a look at that long, rangy, confident chap warming up and saw the 'New York' on his suit they felt a sick kind of feeling at their stomachs. The 'New York' didn't show very plain because the letters had been taken off, but it showed because the place where they'd been sewed was whiter than the rest of the suit.

"When they looked him over as he warmed up he appeared just as dangerous as they'd thought he would—and it seemed to them that the ball fell into the catcher's glove with a kind of plunk that was different than they ever heard before. 'He puts something on that pill, all right,' they agreed among themselves on the bench.

"And they marched up to that plate like little lambs to the slaughter. It was the saddest thing you ever saw. The stranger had the bee on them from the start. They stood and whiffed like schoolboys batting at butterflies. At first the pitcher slammed 'em over hard and gave 'em a few curves, but after a while he saw that they were just fanning themselves, and he floated them up as big as balloons. And the Hollister rooters were as sad as a bunch of Englishmen having a jolly time, while the Marionville coachers was panning the hide off everybody in the Granger aggregation.

"That Hollister bunch of fence smashers were victims of the most awful case of stage fright you ever seen. Nobody travels much down there, and it's off the main lines, so none of the players and none of the rooters—with a couple of exceptions—had ever seen big league players in action. A bunch of boys off a back lot in New York would have tried harder than that Hollister outfit because they'd know that sometimes anybody can get a hit off any pitcher.

"But this Hollister crew had an idea that Mosely was invincible; that a small town batter couldn't hope to hit him, and they were so busy thinking that way that they couldn't see a soft one as big as a watermelon when the pitcher lagged it over.

"Well, there's no use dwelling on the sad story. The locals took the game by 6 to 1—that one being due to a man who'd walked, stealing home when the catcher got careless.

"'There, boys,' said the old colonel after the game, 'you see what confidence does. Of course, Mose—Patterson, I mean—is a wiz of a twirler, but the way you slammed the ball today you could win without him. He ain't tired and says he'll pitch tomorrow, and I want you boys to roll up another big score just to show that you can hit right along. Yon can do it if you think you can. It's psychology that counts; psychology, boys.'

"Next day they played in Hollister, but it didn't make no difference. The pitcher had 'em so buffaloed they played like 10 year old girls. They couldn't hit him at all—he even kidded them by actually tossing one ball over, and the guy who was at the bat whiffed on that. Just like the day before, he didn't need to show any stuff—all he had to do was to raise his arms and let the ball slip. When the game was finished he told one of the catchers he guessed he'd have to play a few sets of tennis for exercise. And he told Col. Heady he'd pitch next day if the colonel wanted him to.

"It looked like a walkover, all right. The crowd would of been disgusted if it wasn't that they'd been waiting so many years to see this thing happen. The third game opened like the others—one-two-three the Grangers pushed their bats against the atmosphere, and one-two-three they went out.

"In the third inning there was one man had popped and another was walking to the plate when the Granger manager called him back for a second. Then the player took his place in the batting box—while the crowd hooted him—the pitcher let fly a wide curve, careless like—and the batter leaned against it for a homer.

"The pitcher sort of gasped, and the local rooters give a groan. And the crowd from Hollister—it had got small—but it was there—gave a long howl of joy. The next man up seemed to have a lot of confidence and ease, too—and he began talking the second he got to the plate.

"'Mosely, eh?' he says. 'Well, come on with the famous cheese ball, Mose, old scout, and watch me waft it into the dim d—— distance. Or maybe you've got a dope ball. Have you got a dope ball? Aw, come on; show us a dope ball—one with a hop to it, Mosie, old dear!' And that batter whanged one for two bases.

"The change of attitude looked bad. And it was bad. Those Grangers kept on hitting the leather hard. And the sudden break shot Marionville all to pieces for a while, until the pitcher told them to stiffen up and get behind him. They got behind him, all right; they had to. And their fielding was what kept the score where it was, which wasn't very low.

"The pitcher wasn't pitching bad ball at all. He quit being careless mighty early in the game after they began to slug his offerings, but, though he gave 'em everything he had, they whooped into them all about the same.

"After the fifth inning the manager of the Weasels took Patterson out and put in one of the local pitchers. Hollister hit him hard, too, but the game wasn't lost yet. When the regular Marionville pitcher went in old Col. Heady got the Weasels together and said:

"'Boys, the man I brought you has copped two games in succession—you can't expect much more than that. He can't do it all. You've got to do some of it. Now, you get behind MacGregor [that was the regular pitcher] and back him up like you did Patterson. And then you hit and hit and hit. If our star pitcher ain't in that don't keep you from hitting, does it? And if you can get fourteen hits one day and sixteen the next with him you can do it without him. Get busy; it's psychology you need. Think you're going to hit and you will hit. Go after 'em; go after 'em!'

"And the boys 'went after 'em' and won out, after all, by 12 to 11. The jinx was dead.

"Now, if you want to know what come so near busting up the game and why the Hollisters got back their batting eye so sudden, I'll tell you.

"Just about the third inning of the third game a big guy came in and drifted over to the Hollister bunch. He was a New York newspaper man who'd come home to Hollister on vacation. When he heard the team was playing in Marionville he come over.

"'Who's the bird in the box for Marionville?' he said. 'Looks a lot like Mosely.'

"'He is Mosely,' Mullins, manager of the Grangers, said. 'Calls himself Patterson, but it's Mosely, all right. Old Col. Heady brought him down from New York and rung him in on us. Must of cost him a pot o' money—but the lad's some pitcher. We ain't hitting him at all!'

"'Some pitcher, maybe,' the newspaper man agreed, 'but it ain't Mosely. I saw Mosely in New York forty-eight hours ago, and you say this bird's been pitching two days here. Mosely couldn't even get here in less'n thirty-six hours.'

"'If he ain't Mosely who the h—— is he?' says Mullins, but the other guy shook his head. 'I dunno,' he said.

"Well, Mullins sure did some talking to that bunch on the bench right that minute, and when they find it ain't Mosely they get back their nerve—and that's how the rally started. But it come too late at that.

"'What was the idea, colonel?' the newspaper man said to old Heady after the game was over.

"The old chap grinned like a kid. 'Advertising, son, plus psychology,' he said. 'Advertising made Mosely's name and fame familiar to 'em, and when this lad blew in on Mosely's reputation they got stage fright and he didn't have to do anything. And that's psychology. If you think you're beat, you're beat.'

"Then the colonel told how he'd borrowed an old Giants' uniform for his young friend and how they'd ripped off the letters just so it would look as if they was trying to conceal that it was a New York uniform—and not getting away with it; and he told how he and the Clarion reporter worked together to make the local fans and the Hollister bunch think this bird was Mosely without coming out and lying about it. The colonel was a truthful man. And that was how they put it over."

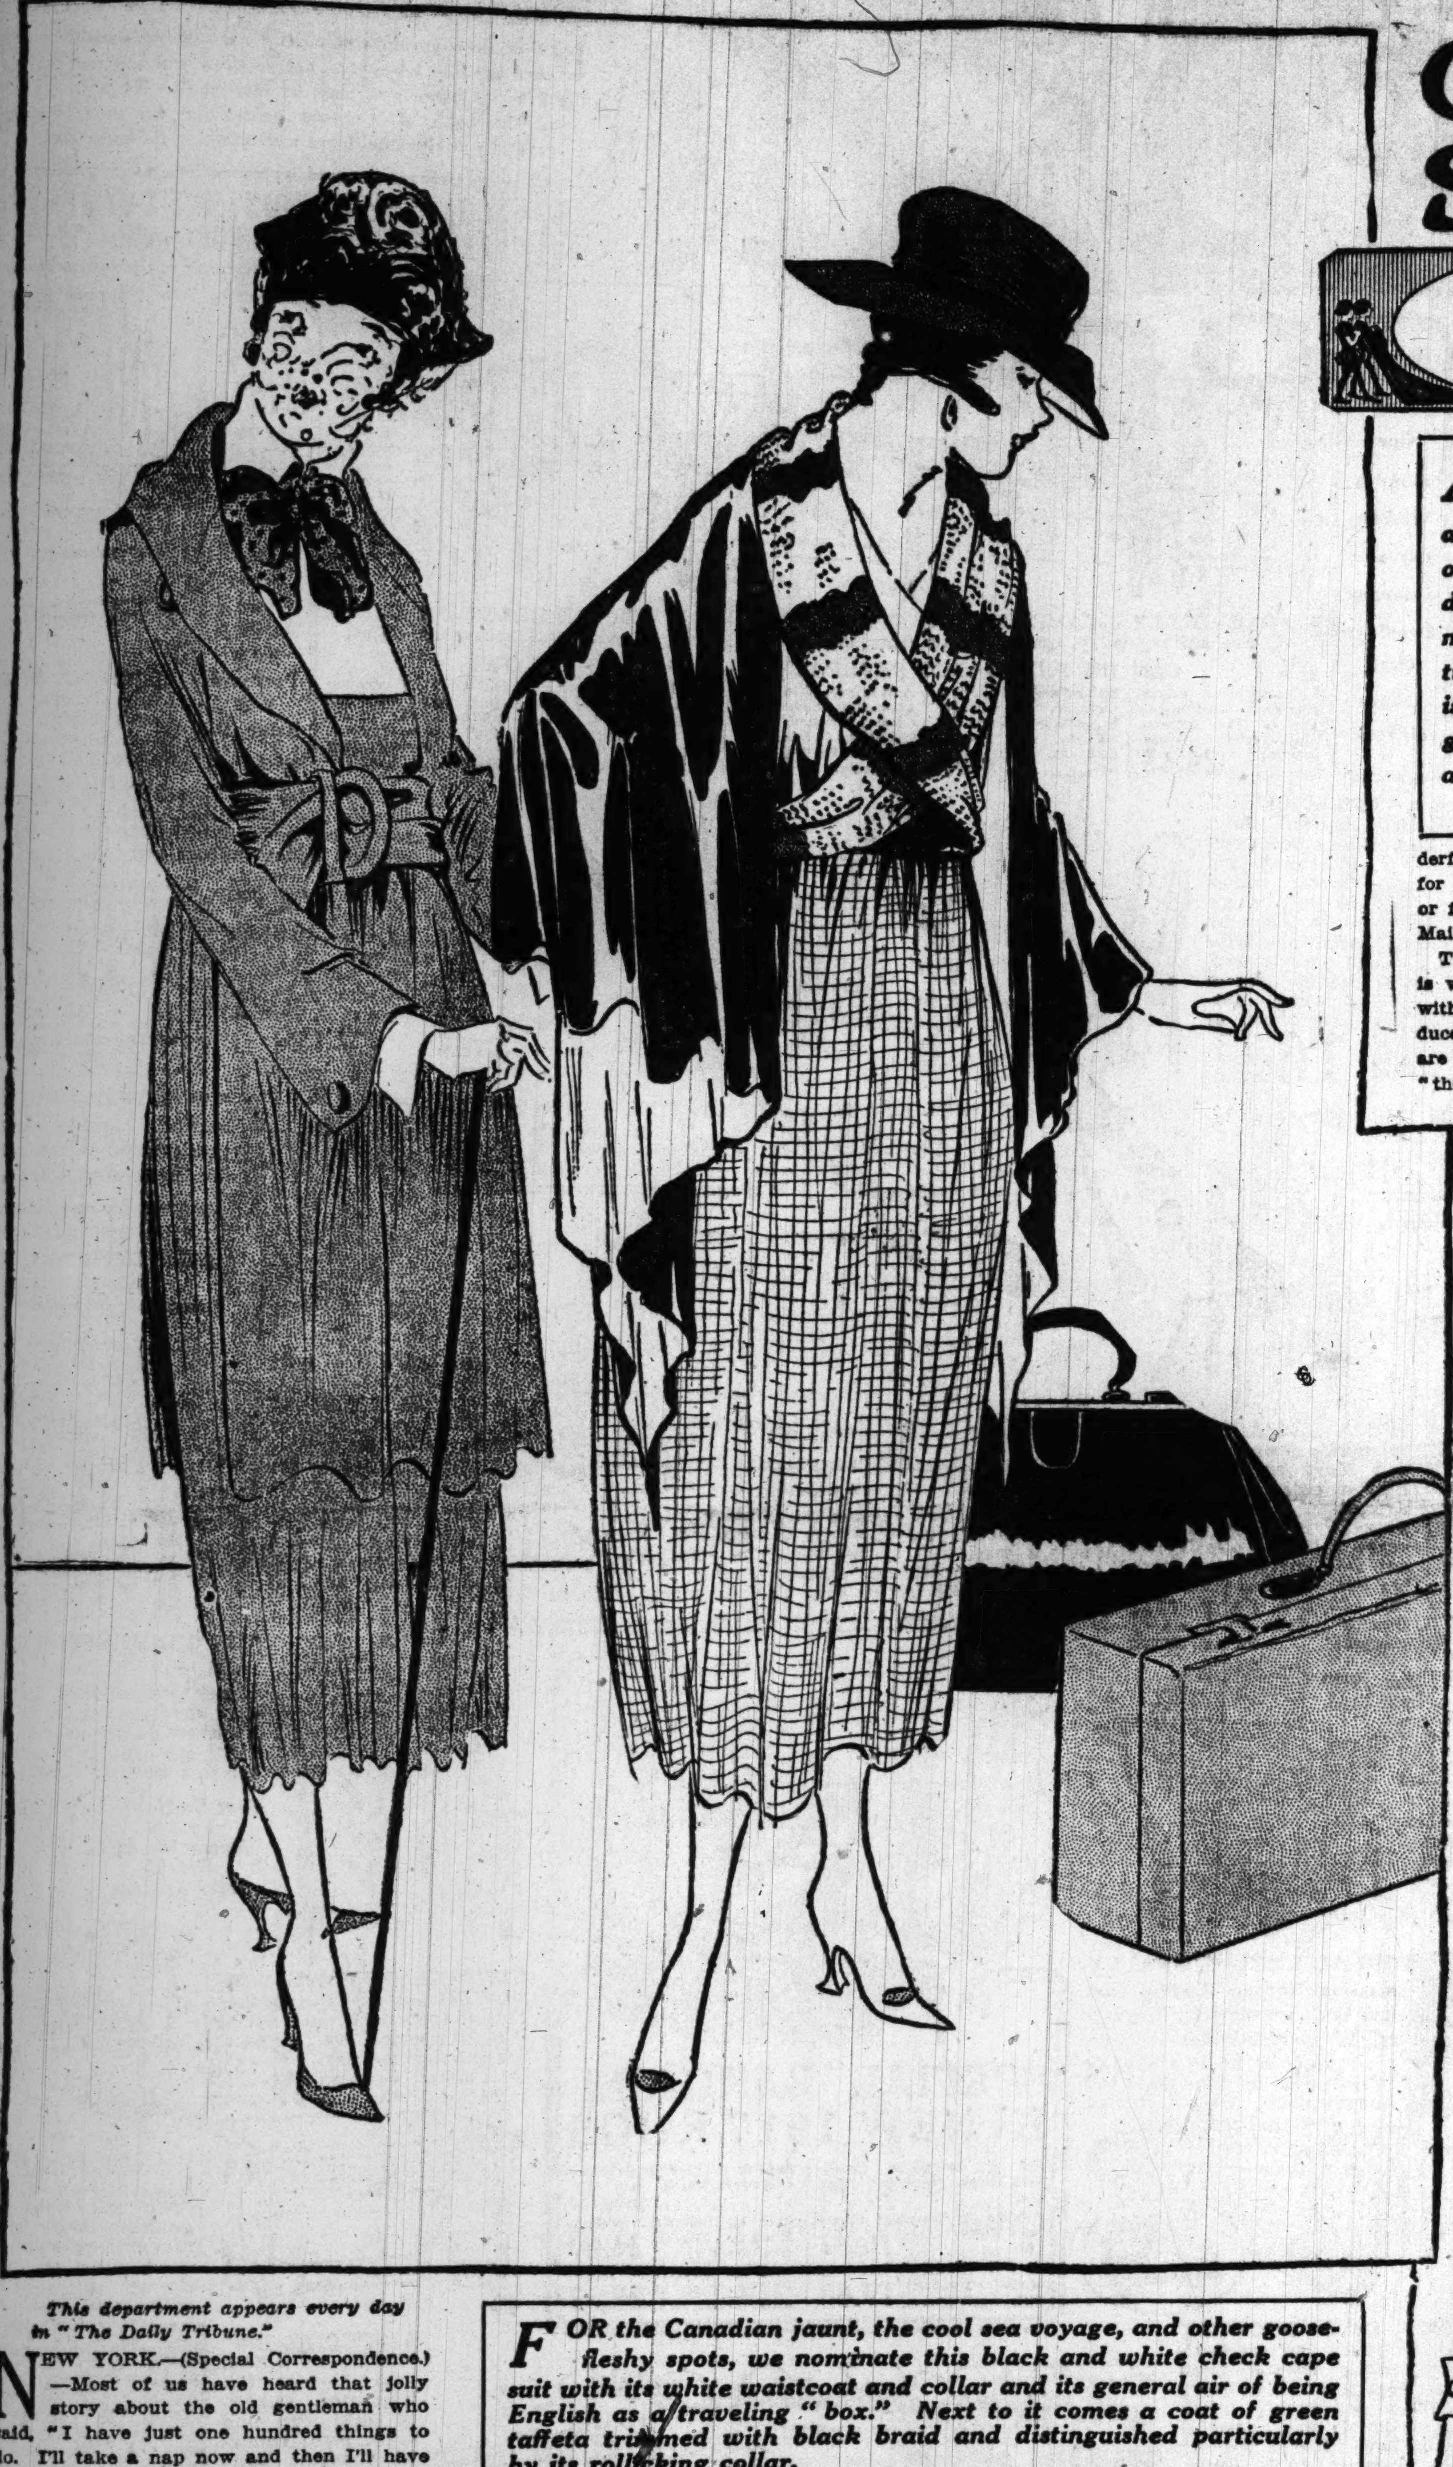
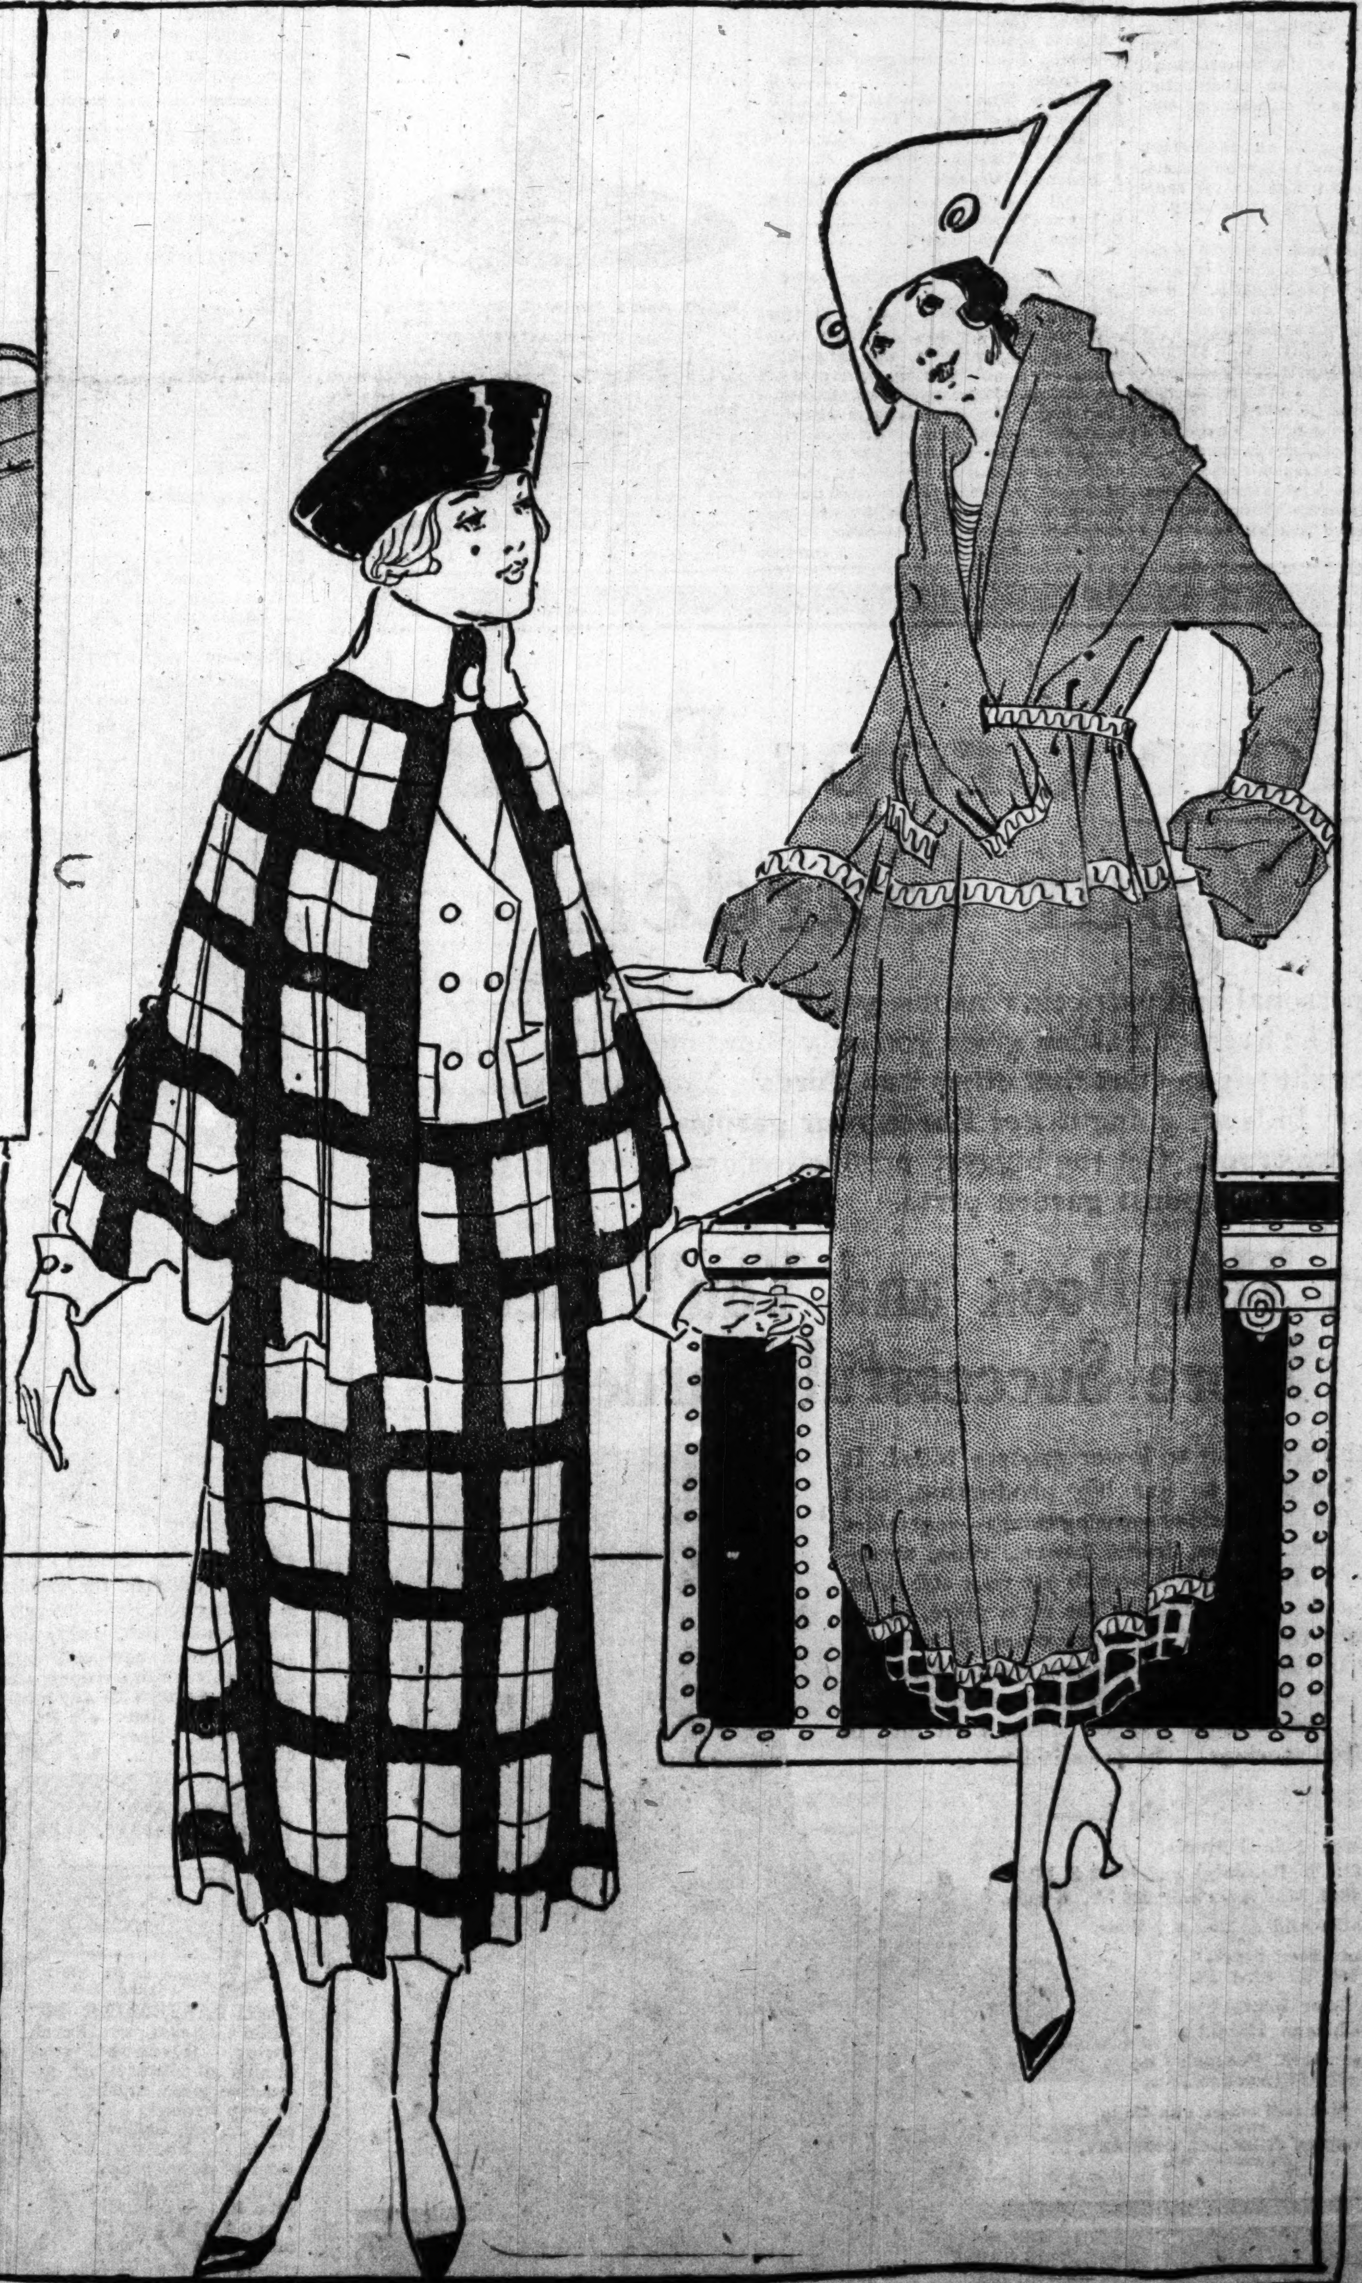
CLOTHES FOR THE SUMMER TRAVELER

by CORINNE LOWE

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK



A TUSSAH suit will fit into as many emergencies as a hair pin. To the left is shown one of these companions in dark blue and with no trimming—only an original and enticing cut. The cape near by is of black satin lined with green satin and its collar straps are—yes, truly—of knitted green and white wool!



FOR the Canadian jaunt, the cool sea voyage, and other goose-fleshy spots, we nominate this black and white check cape suit with its white waistcoat and collar and its general air of being English as a traveling "box." Next to it comes a coat of green taffeta trimmed with black braid and distinguished particularly by its rollicking collar.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Most of us have heard that jolly story about the old gentleman who said, "I have just one hundred things to do. I'll take a nap now and then I'll have only ninety-nine." If women established their traveling clothes as a sartorial nap and attended to that detail first they would frequently find that they did not need to bother at all about the ninety-nine other types of summer garments. As a matter of fact, traveling garments are now so varied and inclusive that they constitute an entire wardrobe in themselves.

Undoubtedly the foundation of traveling comfort is either a suit or frock of silk and "I believe in navy blue" is the first creed of the traveling religion. As between the two, the suit is rather a wiser choice, for, although in a transcontinental trip it levies rather heavily upon the carefully chosen items of suit case or traveling bag, the fresh shirtwaist each day is sure to repay in the added sense of personal comfort and cleanliness. In addition to this, the suit skirt and shirtwaist are easier to get into than the average frock and in case of stopovers they are infinitely more satisfactory.

The fact of it is that the problem of the one costume for a prolonged railroad journey has five dimensions. Is it light enough? Is it heavy enough? Is it serviceable? Will it look well when I stop off? Can I get into it easily in the collicky upheaval of my berth or amid the competitive crowds in the morning dressing room? The answer to this question is contained most ably in one item—the tussah suit of dark blue, and it is this costume which is sketched at the left of today's drawing.

Tussah is undoubtedly one of the most popular fabrics of this season and it has every reason to be. If it is an extremely hot day and one feels as irritable as a giraffe with tonsilitis, tussah is cool enough to soothe the savage breast. If, on the contrary, winds are cool, there is yet a certain lurking warmth in this politician fabric. This being the case, tussah suits are featured now by all the smart shops and in a great number of instances that gentle tussah takes no other trimming than itself. Some of the suits display the round yoke so fashionable this spring and a smock-like coat belted at the waist. The only whisper of ornamentation comes from the silk stitching, either in self or contrasting color, which defines yoke and cuffs and girdle.

In the model shown here it will be seen that the sole fleck of trimming comes from the fabric colored buckle and the fabric covered button locating each sleeve. The cut, however, with the rather high vest, the plain skirt, and the back and front panels of the coat, is entirely distinctive and original. With it is worn a shirt waist of white china silk and a tie of coin dotted blue silk. Needless to say, the china silk waist is the one fit traveling mate, not only of the silk, but of the serge suit. On a sultry day when the cinders rain and you are tired of the bald spot on the head of the man across the way, nothing puts you in such a good humor as a china silk waist, and it possesses, of course, the additional advantage of taking up the smallest possible space in the traveling bag.

Suppose, however, that we are one of those dressy characters who are willing to put on nose guard and shin protectors to risk a reassuring look in the dressing room mirror. Suppose we want to be like "fair Inez who went into the west to dazzle when the sun went down and rob the world of rest." Well, then, of course, we'll take our cape! And here, the second figure from the left, is shown one of the niftiest notions in this garment. It consists of a black satin cape cut perfectly straight, lined with green satin and fastening—O, can it, can it, be—with a collar and bands of knitted green and white wool! These pieces tie in the back and that is all there is to it. This cape may be worn properly with the little traveling frock of blue silk, or, as in the picture, with a skirt of black and white check and a shirtwaist. But, whether we be traveling for one week or one hour, it is a perfectly adequate and fascinating thing to wear.

It's a case of "come under my plaidie, the night's goin' to fa'," but no—we don't wait for the night. It's the morn or the noon or the rain or the snow. Any old climate will bring down plaids on our head and like as not the plaid will be in some form of a cape. For instance, the old fashioned English Inverness—the comfortable, slouchy sleeveless, cape coat which has appeared in Punch as constantly as the old Scotch jokes—is worn by some of the most fashionable women. It makes an ideal traveling coat, too, particularly for sea voyage or mountain vacation.

Somewhat suggestive of an Inverness is this altogether new cape suit of black and white plaid with its waistcoat and sleeves of white cloth. The cape is belted in the back and is held in by a band passing under the waist coat. Not a suitable thing to wear as we saunter about the equator, but wonderful for that cool sea voyage to Alaska, for shivering through the Canadian Rockies or for the well advertised gooseflesh of the Maine coast.

The lady who has come under this plaidie is wearing a Breton sailor of black straw with a top of the same white cloth introduced in her suit. And, by the way, if you are one of those people who go by what "they" wear, you can't make any mistake in the sailor. Everybody is wearing them in some form or other—large and straight, large and drooping, pert and mannish, or rolled back and Breton as per drawing.

The last figure of the drawing has chosen for her journey a shepherd's plaid taffeta frock and a taffeta coat of green braided in black. The huge shawl collar and the way the braid girdle slips through its deep revers make, in conjunction with the puffy cuffs, a coat that manages in a season when pretty nearly everything has been tried coatward, to look just a little different.

The wisest choice for shoes in traveling is the Cuban heel pump of dark Russia leather. These, with stockings to match, and gaiters in harmonizing tint for the occasional chilly stretch represent the best that the specialist can do for us.

While the rest of us are thinking what we shall wear this summer the precocious manufacturer of clothes is already deciding about our things for next fall. Some of the coats brought over show a few interesting developments. For instance, there is one of gray cloth inspired by the costume of the Hungarian cowboy. This has a skirt imitating the wide floppy effect of cowboy trousies, envelope sleeves, and a wide girdle.

Still another coat named after Marshal Joffre does as many stunts as Annette Kellermann. First, there is a sailor collar which will turn into a hood at a moment's provocation. More arresting than this feature, however, are large buttons of two colors on which are mounted respectively small buttons and buttonholes. Who would ever have thought of that, even in these days of intensive button gardening?

Hood collars and more especially detachable capes flourish in the new fall coat. As evidence of the latter fancy, comes an opera cloak of white velour with a detachable cavalier cape of black satin. And, of course, both coats and suits are going to make us all look furry as a Russian archduchess.

Meanwhile, the various sports occasions bring out a tendency to colorful combinations. At the Washington Horse show Mrs. William F. Hitt, nee Katherine Elkins, wore a straight broad sailor of Kelly green with a suit of navy blue jersey. Another widely known society woman added a light purple sailor to a rose colored sports suit and asked the French chef to do better than that. Still another topped off her black velvet suit and black fox furs with a hat of sulphur yellow.

The fact of it is that, though this be a year of simple line and neutral tint, it's a case of turn on the sunset where hats and accessories are concerned.

VASES AND HANGING BASKETS.

No embellishment adds more to the charm of the house or home grounds than an appropriate vase of properly selected plants.

Whether on terminal posts of stair rails or on independent pedestals on the porch or lawn, the outlines, both of the vase and the base, should be in harmony with the architectural style of the building. A rustic vase, bench, or table is very attractive and harmonious in rustic, wild surroundings, at a hunting lodge or woodland cabin. But to place any of these in close relationship to the architectural lines of a modern residence or business block, or within the straight lines of a formal garden or the narrow confines of the average building lot, is inappropriate and unsightly. Like a wash tub on the dining room table, it may be beautiful in itself but out of place, and therefore not in good taste.

Such a variety of vases is offered in stone, concrete, and terra cotta that no difficulty need be experienced in finding what is best suited to the intended purpose. It is a thing bought to last while the establishment endures, and a special effort is entirely warranted. Only, see that there is a drain hole at the lowest point in the vase and that there is sufficient depth to maintain healthy plant growth.

The filling and cultural methods are like those of porch and window boxes, described last Sunday. The plant selection and their arrangement is modified by the different form and purpose of the vase.

No outdoor vases are planned for the loop district, as their adaptability to available space is comparatively rare. Where they are desired, however, the same plants advised for window boxes in the loop, although perhaps in a less advanced stage of development—from smaller pots—will be found suitable also for vases.

FIRST ZONE [outside of loop]—Sunny position:

	Size of pot, inches.
1. Dracena [Dracaena Indivisa]	5
2. Geranium [Geranium, S. A. Nutt]	4
3. Croton [Croton interruptum]	3
4. Petunia [Petunia, Howard Star]	2½
5. Begonia [Begonia, Luminosa]	3
6. Vinca [Vinca major, variegata]	3
7. German ivy [Senecio scandens]	2½

Shaded position—All foliage plants, the most expensive of the vases:

1. Palm [Phoenix Roebelenii]	4½
2. Aspedistra [aspedistra lurida]	4
3. Spindle tree [evonymus japonica variegata]	2½
4 and 5. Boston fern [Nephrolepsis bostoniensis]	4
[Use six plants only, instead of eight.]
6 and 7. English ivy [Hedera helix]	3

SECOND AND THIRD ZONE, SUNNY POSITION:

	Size of pot, inches.
1. Dracena [Dracena indivisa]	4½
2. Geranium [Geranium, S. A. Nutt]	4
3. Coleum [coleus Blumei, Fire Brand]	2½
4. Petunia [Petunia hybrida, Col. Dodd]	2½
5. Ageratum [Ageratum Mexicanum, blue]	2½
6. Nasturtium [Tropaelum majus, tall]	2½
7. Vinca [Vinca major, variegata]	3

Shaded position:

1. Boston Fern [Nephrolepsis bostoniensis]	5
2. Fuchsia [Fuchsia speciosa]	3
3. Red Coleus [coleus Blumei, Fire Brand]	2½
4 Lobelia [Lobelia erinus]	2½
5. Begonia [Begonia semperflorens—red]	3
6. Vinca [Vinca major]	3
7. Vinca [Vinca major]	3

The most desirable hanging basket is of wire, simply woven into hemispherical shape, flat on the bottom or provided with standard for use when not hanging. Such a basket is not injured by water or liquid manure, and sets off the charm of the living plants better than do the tawdry gimcracks with fantastically twisted laurel roots and barks or the painted monstrosities which do not admit of correct treatment. Let us decide if we want pots or plants for decorative use, and then refrain from disfiguring either with the other.

The wire basket is lined with common woodland moss, taken from rotting moss, or with the familiar moss obtainable at any florist's. It is then filled with a good quality of florists' potting soil.

It is a difficult matter to keep hanging baskets in flower, and it is well to rely chiefly on beautiful foliage and gracefully hanging specimens for effect. Of the few plants which lend themselves handsomely to filling an entire basket with a single variety, these deserve special mention:

Sword ferns [Nephrolepis magnifica and Nephrolepis bostoniensis], shade, all zones, except loop.

Anthericums [Anthericum mangeanum and anthericum elatum variegatum], both either sun or partial shade, all zones, except loop.

Wandering Jew [Tradescantia fluminensis], deep shade.

Asparagus Fern [Asparagus Sprengeri], sun, all zones, except loop.

The most graceful effect is achieved by a combination of long and short hanging plants, only partly flowering; a climbing plant to cover irregularly the suspending chains or wires; a cluster of some striking medium large; tropical foliage, and a low growing flower of upright habit. The Vincas, for hanging vines in sun or shade; Sweet Alyssum, for flowering effect in sunny exposures; Petunia hybrids of the small flowering varieties; Begonia semperflorens [either luminosa or Gloire de chatelaine] and Begonia Erfordii; these are a few of the specimens to be kept in mind in arranging the more elaborate hanging basket.

In the familiar old hanging pot use anthericum elatum, for sun or partial shade, in all zones, except the loop.

Finally, do not overcrowd a hanging basket or hanging pot. Fewer plants produce a more graceful effect and endure the longer.

Varied Activities of Women

The Brooklyn Bar association refuses to admit women as members.

Eighty-five widows of teachers are now receiving pensions from the Carnegie foundation.

The number of married women working as wage earners has doubled in the last year.

Secretary of the Interior Lane declares that the women of this country waste enough foodstuffs in one week to feed the Belgians for one year.

Mrs. Horace M. Towner, wife of Congressman Towner of Iowa, has been elected president of the Congressional club of Washington, an organization composed of wives of members of congress.

Miss Charlotte Baylies and Miss Edith Sigourney, prominent in Boston society, have passed the examination for radio operators and are now doing duty in the navy department.

At the commencement exercises of the University of Minnesota school of agriculture Miss Olive Cunningham, one of the graduates, wearing an apron and with a dish cloth in her hand, gave the audience a number of valuable suggestions on the subject of washing dishes.

Miss Jane Stellaine is the first woman marine surveyor in New York. She is 34 years old and is going to work for a dry dock and repairing company. A marine surveyor examines shops for their cargo space and seaworthiness, generally to determine if the requirements of insurance policies have been met.

5,000,000 Corns Lifted Right Off!

Try 2 Drops of Magic "Gets-It."

There's a wonderful difference between getting rid of a corn now and the way they used to try to get rid of it only four or five years ago. "Gets-It" has revolutionized corn history. It's the only corn remedy today that acts on the new principle, not only of shriveling up the corn, but of loosening the corn off—so loose that you can lift it right off with your fingers. Put two drops of "Gets-It" on that corn or callus tonight. That's all. The corn is doomed sure as sunrise. No pain, or trouble, or soreness. You do away once and for all with toe-bundling bandages, toe-eating salves and irresponsible what-nots. Try it—get surprised and lose a corn.

"Gets-It" is sold everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.—Adv.

More Crops From Your Garden

For personal and patriotic reasons, get the most from your garden. The average garden gives you only about one-third of what you ought to get. Get that other two-thirds! You can't tell how grocery bills are going to go! Force your garden. Use your soil for more crops. Get the biggest production from every inch of soil. Guard against garden pests.

Get This Book and You'll Get a More Successful Garden

It is the short cut to lower grocery bills! It tells you how to get big production, and covers the entire field of growing things—vegetables of all kinds, berries, fruits, flowers, vines, shrubbery, etc. It shows you how to use your soil right, to plant the right things in the right place, to use the right rotation to get more crops, to care for things in the way to get biggest crops. The publishers and sellers of this book do not make a cent of profit. This is their way of "doing their bit" to fight food shortage. The price is 10c.

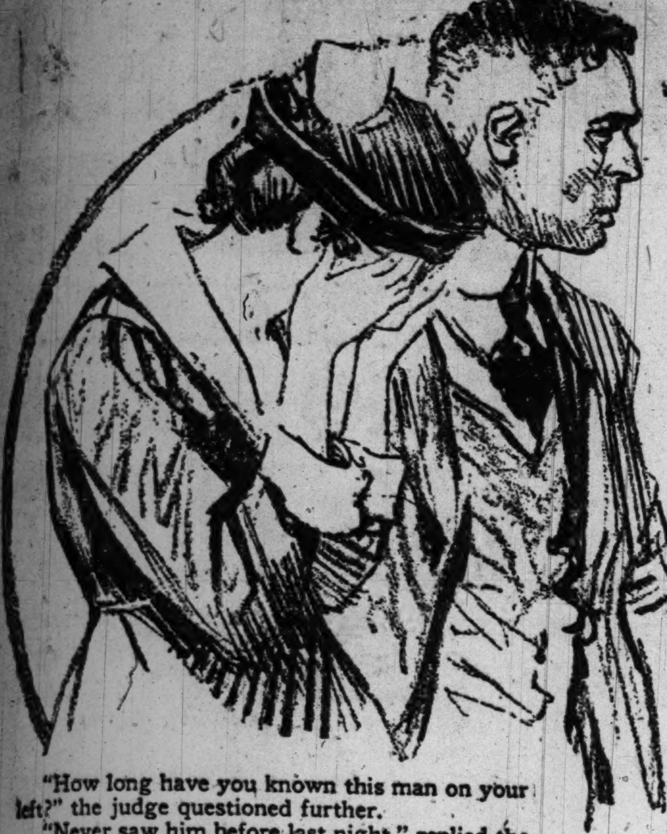
What Drink Has Cost Me

by Antoinette Donnelly



"How old are you?" asks the judge.

"Twenty-one," answered the poor, trembling girl.

"Have you a mother and father?"

"Yes."

"Do you live at home?"

No answer.

"Do you live at home?" the judge repeated.

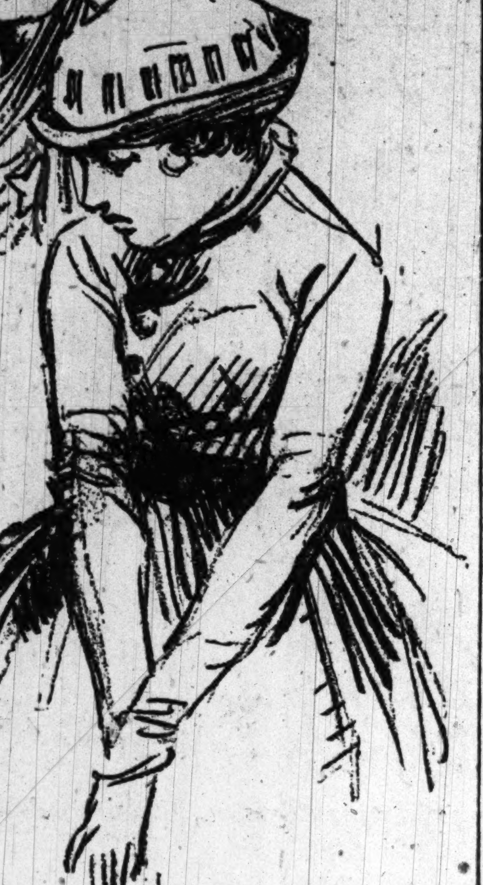
"No. I was put out a month ago."

"Why?"

"They said I was setting a bad example to my younger sisters because I came home intoxicated one night.

"Cabaretting, I suppose," suggested the judge.

"Yes. That's what I was doing last night before I got arrested."



"How long have you known this man on your left?" the judge questioned further.

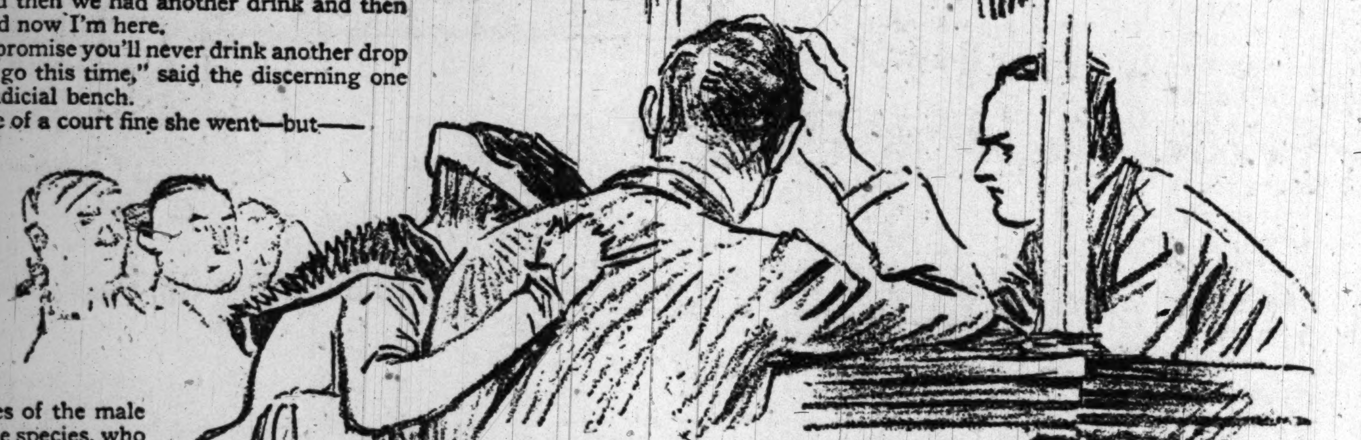
"Never saw him before last night," replied the girl.

"You went to a hotel with him, didn't you?" queried the judge.

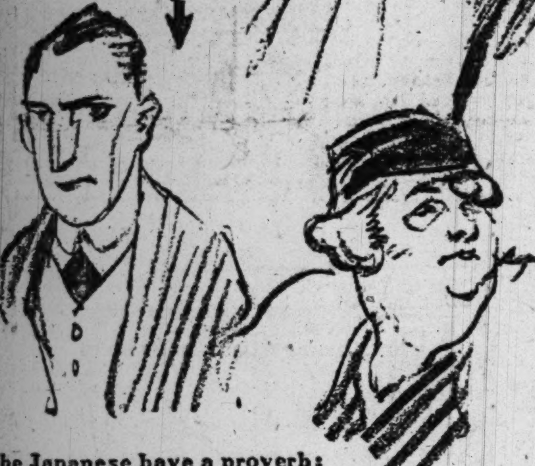
"Yes, but I must have been drunk. I don't remember what happened except that I and another girl had stopped in for a drink on our way home from work because we were both so tired. And then he came over to our table and introduced himself, and then we had another drink and then another, and now I'm here.

"If you promise you'll never drink another drop I'll let you go this time," said the discerning one upon the judicial bench.

And free of a court fine she went—but——



Vultures of the male and female species, who owe their living to the cost of drink to women.

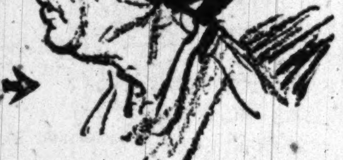


"Fifty dollars and costs for this girl," said the judge.

The girl, not more than 24, fell forward on the arm of the prosecuting attorney and cried hysterically.

Fifty dollars and costs means when you haven't the money to pay your fine working it out in the house of correction at the rate of 50 cents a day. Which means the summer days pretty nearly all gone for the prisoner, and which meant other things to this girl who started out on a stage career, but lost out before two years were over because she learned too late what drink does to a woman's looks, to a woman's health, to a woman's morals.

Mrs. J., a woman who ten years ago would have pulled aside her skirt while passing a drunken woman. Today she is the scorned one. What did it? Drink. Drink!



The Japanese have a proverb:

First the man takes a drink,
Then the drink takes a drink,
Then the drink takes the man.

Which might be paraphrased after a day in the court in which these sketches were made from real life—

First the girl courts the drink,
Then the drink courts the girl,
Then the court gets the girl.

If you missed the Antoinette Donnelly series telling how she reduced Mrs. Eva Lane thirty-six pounds in six weeks, or how she added twenty pounds in five weeks to Miss Helen Barnett's weight, or how she corrected a head of dry, thin, falling hair and an oily scalp with dandruff, or the article on treating Miss Hill's complexion for pimples and blackheads, send a stamped, addressed envelope and the information will be mailed to you. Any other questions pertaining to beauty and hygiene will be gladly answered.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

GLORIA: NO, DON'T CUT YOUR eyebrows and eyelashes, but try this formula instead for promoting their growth: Yellow vaseline, two ounces; oil of lavender, fifteen drops, and oil of rosemary, fifteen drops. Mix thoroughly. After you wash your face at night brush your eyebrows with an eyebrow brush upon which a few drops of the tonic has been placed. Particular pains must be taken when you apply the tonic to your eyelashes not to let any get into the eyes, as any oil will inflame them.

STILL YOUNG: AND WHY NOT? Even if you are nearing the 50 mark and have a hard race with Father Time to keep him from leaving his imprint upon your face and hair, it is worth the effort, isn't it? Try a fifteen minute massage each night with a good skin food for your face, and scalp massage with a good hair tonic, and I am sure you will have results before long. I shall be glad to send you my instructions for treating dry, thin, falling hair if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

JENNIE: WHY REDUCE? YOU are exactly normal weight. A girl 5 ft. 9 in. at 18 should weigh 140 pounds. You may have to do some padding if you attempt to lose any of your flesh. I shall be glad to send you my treatment for freckles and excessive perspiration if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

SUFFERER: THE CONSTANT smarting of the feet can be relieved by a five minute hot bath night and morning with a little alum in the water—about an ounce of alum to two gallons of water. Wipe the skin carefully, then rub with cold cream or olive oil and dust with talcum powder. Avoid wearing patent leather shoes, particularly in the summer time. I shall be glad to send you my treatment for perspiring feet if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

TONIC: THE WORLD HAS NO BETTER tonic to offer than an exhilarating tramp through the woods, a hike over hills, botonizing or geologizing, hunting with a camera, golfing, boating, or anything that combines diversion of mind with exercise and vigor enough to make the heart jump, and the lungs puff, and the warm blood leap through the veins. With your free Saturdays and Sundays you have the world by the tail. You'll work better, look better, and be better for it.

GEORGE R.: IF YOU SUSPECT A tendency to pyorrhea it would be well to consult a dentist without delay. Many times persons who have absolutely no trouble at all with their teeth and have never had any dental work done are afflicted in this way, and do not suspect it until the teeth begin to feel loose. Every one should visit a dentist not less than twice a year and have the teeth looked over in order to detect any possible cavities or tendency to pyorrhea. I have a treatment which will act as a preventive, and perhaps as a cure, in the earliest stages of the trouble, which I shall be glad to mail you if you will send me a stamped, addressed enevelope.

Real Love Stories

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

JOINING THE RED CROSS.

THE requests which the man had been heaving on all sides fully bore out his idea of woman in general. Take this couple of girls before him, for instance—they could scarcely write and couldn't spell, but (with a giggle) they "would like to read to the soldiers!" Just then a clear but low pitched voice back of him at his sister's table was saying: "I know how to cook and sew, and I could scrub and do things like that. Somebody must do them, you know."

He turned and glanced at the speaker, a slim girl of about 22, quietly but tastefully dressed. She had a pleasant face, he thought. His sister asked about remuneration, and she replied that she had no one depending upon her and had enough money to supply her clothes, etc., but that if she gave up her present occupation she would have to receive room and board from the government. Her present occupation, by the way, was that of companion to a wealthy old lady who traveled extensively.

At that point the man leaned over and informed his sister that he and the car had been at her service for some time, that it was after closing time, and (artfully) that she might take the young woman for a drive while they finished their conversation.

About two weeks later the man's sister told me of her brother's engagement, and then I remembered the little romance begun before my eyes in the Red Cross service reserve headquarters. But it will not be the government that will supply the girl's living expenses now.

X.

Small Brother Contest.

You've heard that story about two women discussing a wedding. "Who gave the bride away?" asked one. "Her young brother," answered her companion. "He yelled out, 'Susie, you landed him at last.'" Perhaps he was your young brother, or perhaps your young brother got in his demoniacal work before you got as far as the altar. Or maybe the young imp wasn't your brother, but a diabolical young sister who pretty nearly queered the game for you. Write and tell us about it, anyway. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, Chicago Tribune.

Advertising Brings Results.

When a kid about 10 years old I was, like most boys, always doing something to cause trouble and getting the worst of it in the end. One afternoon I decided to play a trick on my sister, who was about 18. Securing a new shingle and some blue carpenter's chalk, I made the following sign: "Bow wanted. Inquire within." I placed this on a telephone pole directly in front of the house.

BOW WANTED INQUIRE.

As luck would have it, a man came that afternoon to buy some hay. After he had left my mother and sister thought he must be insane. They said he acted as if he could hardly keep from laughing when inquiring for my father.

Before night my sister happened out in front of the house and saw the shingle. It is not necessary to say what happened when my father came home, except that the shingle was put into service other than the sign board.

Bowlegs in Knickers.

When I was about 15 years old I was much enamored of a young man whom I had met at dancing school. We progressed finely until a George Washington party was to be given. We danced a minuet in colonial dress in honor of the day. Of course, my beau and I were partners. The girls had assembled in costume and were waiting for their partners. Imagine my astonishment and disgust at finding that every boy except my partner had a pair of well shaped, straight legs. He was bow legged enough to ride a bucking broncho without falling off.

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for "The Chicago Sunday Tribune" and may be obtained through no other service. A Chicago distribution office has been opened, and following this announcement orders will be filled on the day of receipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and will thereby hasten delivery. Patrons are requested to send stamps instead of dimes, as money is frequently lost in the mails.

Childhood Ambition Contest.

Did you ever have a childhood ambition—a humorous one? Of course you did. And what you did wasn't anything like what you dreamed. Tell us what your great ambition was—and then tell us how far short you fell. Do it in 250 words, on one side of the paper, and address manuscripts to Childhood Ambition Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. For each story printed $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned.

Exploring the Map.

When I was young I read a set of books about explorations in Africa, and of course I wanted to be an explorer, too, and go there. I have made many trips to Africa, but they are all by way of a map when I am teaching my class in geography in a public school; and the place I fill is not one of my early ambitions.

He's Fallen Short.

When I was 10 years of age, my ambition to become a great writer for magazines and papers, took on an embryonic state. I wrote love story after love story, and poetry by the quire, before I finished school, and sent it to the different papers. Twenty-five years have relapsed, and I have been writing a little of everything, and still have a hankering for this childhood ambition. While I have seen my name in print a few times, my ambition has fallen far short of reaching that "distinction" I craved for so much in my youth.

The Proper Care of the Complexion

By BLANCHE DEARING.

Never use a face powder that does not benefit your skin. Here, at last, is a new face powder guaranteed absolutely pure, and it really stays on better than any of the old-fashioned powders. Everybody knows white lead is a deadly poison; it causes blotches and irritations. To avoid white lead face powders many women have used rice powder. Today, specialists say rice powder is almost as bad as white lead. Rice powder is starchy and like bread flour, it is quickly turned into a gluey paste by the moisture of the skin. It clogs the cuticle, swells in the pores, causing enlarged pores, blackheads and pimples. Prove this yourself. Ask a number of your friends who have enlarged pores, blackheads or pimples what face powder they use. Nine out of ten will say rice powder or they use "Poudre de Riz," which is French for rice flour. If you value the charm of a lovely complexion, stop rice powder. You can now use a pure face powder that really beautifies your complexion and cannot injure the most delicate baby skin. It is the only powder sold in America, at any price, guaranteed not to contain rice flour or talcum or bismuth or white lead. The specialist who makes this improved powder uses an ingredient that doctors prescribe to heal pimples. Every time you apply this new powder you give your complexion a real beauty treatment. It helps to prevent enlarged pores, blackheads and pimples. It is also remarkably astringent; it tightens the skin, discouraging flabbiness, crows' feet and wrinkles. And it really stays on better than any other powder. You can also use this same powder as a liquid powder. Just sprinkle a little dry powder in a dry saucer and apply it with a damp sponge. No other dry powder can be used both ways. If you honestly want a perfect complexion powder, go to The Fair, Buck & Rayner or any Big Store and ask for La-may face powder (French Poudre L'Amé). Dealers everywhere are now selling the 50c size at only 35c. When you use this delightful Powder La-may you will be surprised to see how wonderfully it beautifies your compexion. If you live out of town and your best dealer has not yet got it, you can order white, flesh or brunette for 35c by mail of the American agent, Herbert Roystone, 106 E. 19th St., N. Y.

Girls! Use Lemon Juice!

Make a quarter pint of beauty cream for little cost.
Clears, softens and whitens the skin.
Brings out the hidden roses!

By all means, girls, prepare a lemon lotion to keep your skin flexible and young looking. You will soon realize that true loveliness does not mean the powdery look or waxen colorlessness of some hot-house flower, but is typified by the velvety softness of your skin, your peach-like complexion and rosy-white hands.

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan, and is the ideal skin softener and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of Orchard White at any pharmacy or toilet counter and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms, and particularly rough, red hands. You'll like it immensely.

Genuine Orchard White bears the name, Edward Wesley Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

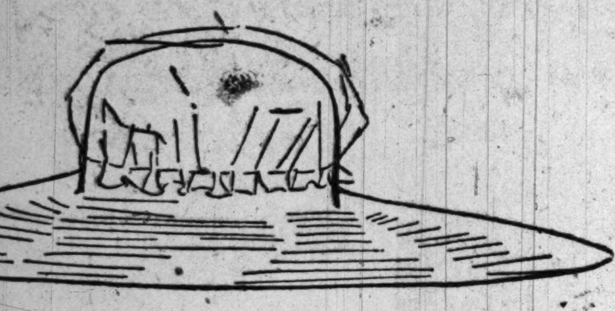
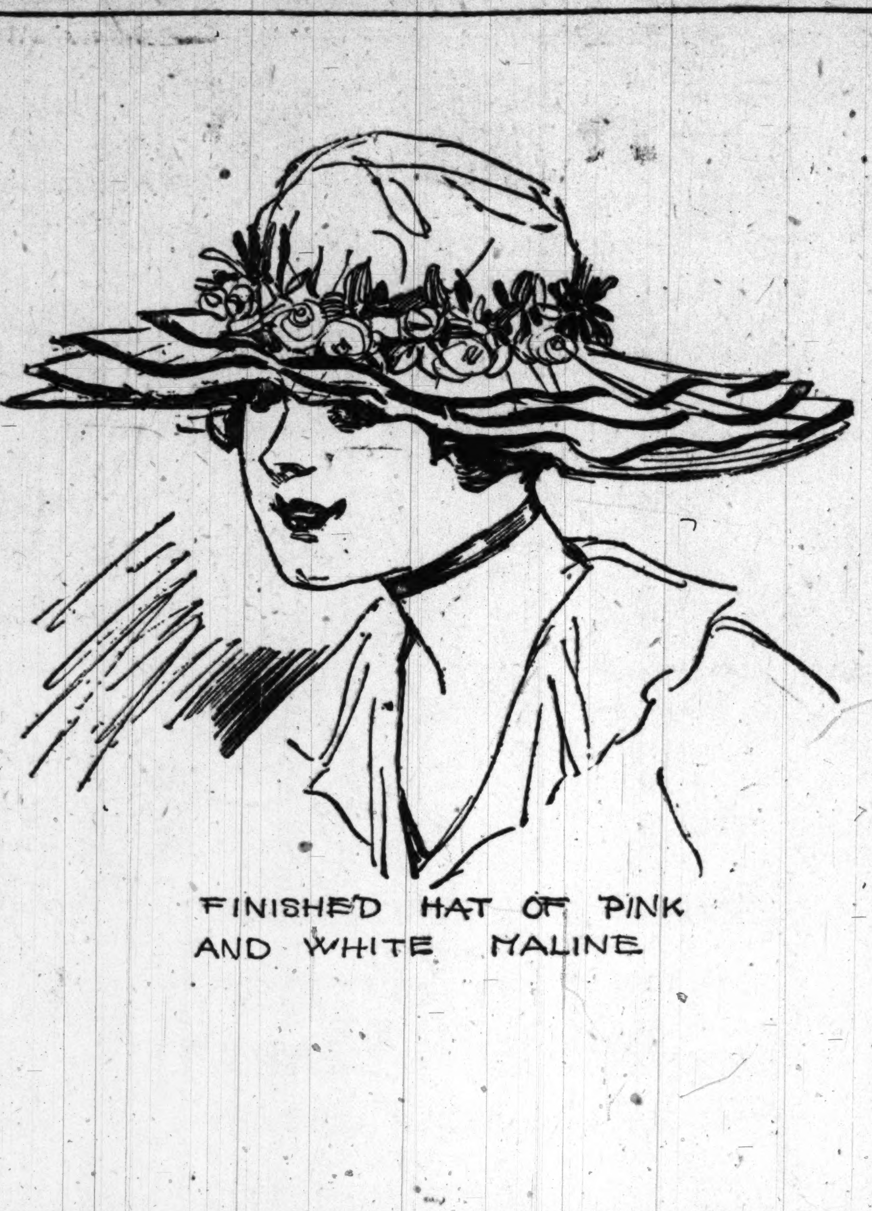
Practical and Fancy Needle Work

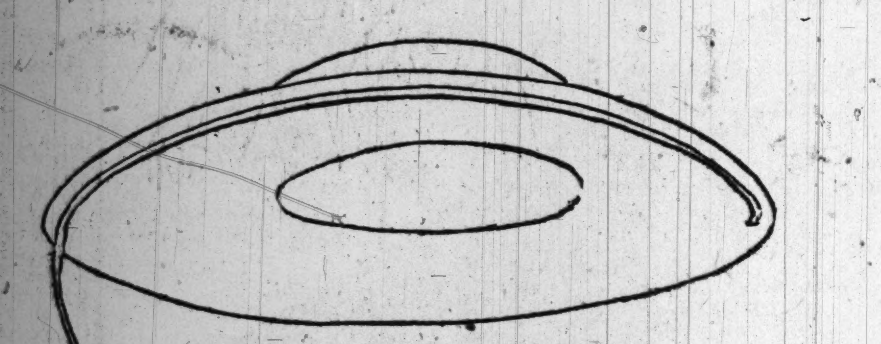
By CLOTILDE



COVER CROWN WITH WHITE MALINE.



FINISHED HAT OF PINK AND WHITE MALINE



WIRE BRIM TO KEEP IT FROM BEING TOO FLOPPY.

So attractive are the hats for this summer that only her pocketbook will limit the little bride's choice. Large hats, small hats, flat hats, tall hats—a different variety for every occasion; but for all dressy wear the balance of fashion has turned in favor of large hats. The youthful bride has little need of the friendly shadows of the broad, drooping brim, but there's no denying that these wide, floppy hats lend infinite charm.

There is a tendency toward a more lavish use of trimming than was noticeable in the spring hats, yet this is accomplished without a loss of that simplicity in effect to which we are all so attached.

The hat shown today—an ideal model for wear with the soft, fluffy dresses of summer time—has as a foundation a broad brimmed pale pink hemp shape.

The brim is five inches wide and the crown, which is oval in shape, is three inches high. White malines is used to cover the hat, and it will be economy to buy the wide malines for this purpose, for it will cut to much better advantage. You will need to allow approximately for five circles twenty inches in diameter, although one of your circles will be a little larger and two will be smaller. The circles on the brim are edged with a soft silver ribbon one-half inch wide, the amount required depending upon the size of your hat..

Cut two circles of white malines, one sixteen inches and one eighteen inches in diameter. Put the sixteen inch circle over the crown of the hat and gather in softly at the base of the side crown and tack in place with long stitches. Then put the eighteen inch circle on over this and fasten just as you did the first. The idea in putting these on separately is to get a soft, rather irregular effect on the crown.

Next, measuring on the under brim for convenience, cut three large circles of malines, one just the size of the brim, one one and one-half inches larger, and one one and one-half inches smaller. Mark the head size while the malines is on the under brim and cut out a circle one inch smaller than is marked. The head size opening must be handled very carefully because of the frail character of the malines.

Bind these three circles on the outer edge with a soft silver ribbon one-half inch wide, sewing it on with fine, even stitches. If, as you put this edge on, you stretch the net ever so little it will give a pretty ripply effect to the layers after they are in place.

Slash the three layers at the head size just enough to make it possible to slip them in place down over the crown. Arrange them, the largest directly over the brim, the middle size next, and the smallest on top. Tack the middle circle in place invisibly to the brim edge, at intervals of two or two and a half inches, catching the larger circle at the same time, of course. Fasten the smallest circle in the same way.

The trimming of this hat is simply a wreath of flowers around the crown. If one cannot find a wreath to one's liking it is easy to make one. Select two or three bunches with coloring which pleases you, or, this year, some wheat, which is popular. Open the bunches by untwisting the binding wire and then arrange them, mixing the different varieties to suit yourself and your hat, and fasten again with the wire.

If you wish to keep the brim from becoming floppy, put a fine white wire around the edge just underneath the very edge of the brim. Sew this in place with a buttonhole stitch, hiding your stitches between rows of braid so they will not show on the upper brim.

Not the least interesting fact about this pretty hat is that it is an excellent way to use an old shape. If you have a left-over from last year in fairly good condition except a bit faded, perhaps the tulle or malines covering is just the thing to disguise it and transform it into a thing of beauty and a joy for the summer, at least. An excellent opportunity is offered for individual expression in color combinations—pale blue over a pink hat, black over white, and so on to suit the requirements of one's wardrobe.

CONDENSED MILK.

If milk does not get its dues in these days it never will. Never was so much said and written on the wonderful virtues of milk as a food.

The people who have never been able to eat it [notice "eat it"] will think they have been mistaken in some hard to be understood way, but the chances are ninety-nine to one that the trouble has been that they could not eat it raw. They can eat it in some or all its cooked forms.

I actually shuddered when I saw tall soda glasses of raw milk brought in to the children, at afternoon tea time, in the moving picture of "The Poor Little Rich Girl." But then I shudder at a good many conventional meals, especially the conventional American breakfast.

I know a poor spindling little rich girl who, I believe, has been deprived in part of her health dues by being compelled to drink too much raw milk. And myself, when a poor little pale faced child with a sensitive stomach, could not take the milk which I undoubtedly needed more than any other food. I was therefore frail and anemic beyond my years.

Poor little children, no matter whether the purses of their parents be long or short, and especially poor little babies, have suffered endlessly and entailed future suffering, I believe, because they cannot eat raw milk. In France and Germany it seems that for many years they have not been compelled to. When a baby cries it is usually because his stomach aches. Since he is living on milk what is the answer? Dr. Brennemann says:

Colic and discomfort are among the most manifest and frequent symptoms arising from the use of raw milk. We are all familiar with the fact that a great many babies that are in constant distress, either having a great deal of colic or crying almost constantly when awake and sleeping restlessly and brokenly, are promptly made comfortable where hteir food is changed from a raw milk to a boiled or citrated milk, or, what is still more striking, to a condensed milk, either liquid or powdered. If babies could talk they could unfold many a tale of their sufferings in trying to digest a strictly modern scientific, raw milk formula and of their immediate relief on receiving an unscientific food from a tin can.

We have felt sorry for the babies brought up in some of the cities of the arid west, because they had only condensed or dried or some other modified milk to grow on, but perhaps they might have been worse off.

But before leaving this matter of stomach ache from raw milk, let us read the next paragraph following the above quoted. Dr. Brennemann says:

A surgeon of my acquaintance is accustomed to drink about twenty ounces of milk at bedtime. When he takes it boiled he is perfectly comfortable; when he takes it raw he has an uncomfortable night and a diarrhœa the next day. Few adults drink so much milk at a time and it is impossible to estimate how frequent such disturbances would occur if they did. The baby, on the other hand, with its far greater proneness to colic and diarrhœa, takes six or seven such feedings a day instead of one.

It is my private opinion that it would be even more sensible to teach poor women how to boil milk than to teach them how to make iceboxes. The French women always boil the milk and not one in a thousand has a refrigerator. In his pamphlet, "Boiled Milk Versus Raw Milk," Dr. Brennemann says:.

One must not forget the possibility of error in the kitchen, or the fact that "boiling" is a term capable of varying interpretations, and that the difference in temperature between milk beginning to simmer and milk welling up actively is from 20 to 30F., and that the longer the boiling the more marked the influence on coagulation.

Now all the milks in sealed cans have been cooked. Two years ago I bought samples of every sort and brand procurable and some of these I have yet, and the literature that came with them. I am rather astonished to find that commercially this fact about cooked milk forming small soft curds and raw milk hard and indigestible ones was known at least that long ago, and exploited for the few who would read what it said on the can.

On a can of dried milk I read that it "is more easily digested than raw milk because it does not form hard curds in the stomach." And in some malted milk literature I find a quotation from a doctor's writings of 1889, saying: "The best method of acting on the casein of cow's milk is the way of attenuating and modifying the clot by properly diluting the milk with a decoction of the cereals. It is also believed that dextrinizing the gruels before thus using it will often prove a distinct gain by enhancing its attenuating powers and increasing the ease of assimilation." We might here read cheese for "casein," since curd is casein and ripened curd is cheese.

Yes, the modifying of milk has gone on for years and in every case this is preparation for eating or what we call cooking. It is modified by simply diluting it with water, boiled water preferably, so a mother should know how to boil water as some do not. It is modified by cereal water, barley water most often, so a mother should know how to cook this. It is alkalized with lime water for acid stomachs. It is modified by condensing it (cooking in vacuum at a low temperature), by drying, souring, peptonizing, etc., and all these things prevent the formation of large curds which may remain undigested throughout the alimentary tract.

Raw milk is a solid food in spite of the fact that it cannot be chewed and it has a "hidden and insidious solidness." Boiled milk is relatively liquid.

Mashed Potato.

Peel and slice the potato into a small flat bottomed boiler with a closely fitting cover, add four tablespoons of water and the minute it boils turn the fire of smallest burner to lowest point. The potatoes will be done in fifteen minutes or twenty at the most, and should not be too wet for mashing. Mash, add about one tablespoon of condensed milk to each large potato used, salt and a little freshly ground white pepper. It is this pepper which hides the condensed milk flavor.

Instead of mashing the potato the milk may be added in the right proportion to make a potato stew and the whole cooked five minutes with the pepper. To make a soup add to the mashed potato, in the proportion of half a cup to one large potato, boiling water, and stir and cook and if necessary beat smooth with an egg beater. A good imitation cream soup.

A little butter will improve any of these three products, but each is good without it.

Foamy Strawberry Sauce.

Add to the above crushed strawberries in the proportion of three or four tablespoons of strawberry to two of the milk. If the undesirable flavor is still manifest use a drop or two of vanilla.

Celery Soup.

Add one pint of water to one cup of finely cut up celery, one level teaspoon of salt, and a pinch of cayenne pepper. Put over fire in closed boiler and cook gently for twenty or twenty-five minutes. Blend two level tablespoons of flour with two of melted butter and strain the liquid from the celery over this. Stir until the whole is well thickened, then add two tablespoons of condensed milk.

Whipping Condensed Milk.

A recipe recently given for using condensed milk whipped in place of whipped cream, advised the heating of the milk in the can, cooling, chilling on ice, and whipping over ice. All that is necessary is to put the can on ice and then whip about two tablespoons at a time in a cup with a turbine egg beater. It will double in volume and be like a foaming sauce. The important thing is to sweeten and flavor it so as to remove the rain water or clapboard flavor. A few drops of vanilla with sugar to taste will do this.

Condensed Milk Fudge.

The sugar in milk is really cooked to a sirup in condensed milk, therefore it is easier to make a fudge which will not granulate too soon or a taffy which will not granulate at all no matter how much worked with it, even without corn sirup or glucose, than with either plain milk or cream. Without something of this nature the sugar will almost surely granulate too soon. What we really have in the end is milk chocolate.

Cut up two squares of a half pound bar of chocolate or four of a quarter pound bar, add to it four tablespoons of water, melt and stir over fire until smooth and thick, then add four tablespoons of condensed milk and stir until smooth. Add to this two cups of granulated sugar and if you want to be on the safe side add as much glucose as you dip up once with a tablespoon. Mix all thoroughly, then put over the fire and stir until sugar is dissolved and the whole boils; then cook over a minute fire until it reaches fudge stage or 238 degrees on a candy thermometer. Take from fire and add, after it has cooled a bit, one teaspoon of vanilla.

For fudge, commence to beat this when half cooled. For taffy, let get entirely cold. It is not necessary to pull taffy to work it. Pile it up with a knife and then lift the knife with a load of taffy on it, or when it gets harder pile the taffy up on the platter in a conical pile with the knife in the center, reaching to the bottom, and twist this round and round. When worked to slight dullness of surface stretch off and cut in pieces to taste. If worked patiently a chocolate taffy is melting.

Do not try to make candies on rainy days in summer. The air is thoroughly saturated in moisture and evaporation takes place too slowly in the cooking sirup. It takes about three times as much cooking of fudge on a rainy day as on a dry day.

Vegetable Soups.

Carrot alone is a little too pallid, even when touched up with onion, to make a good cream soup, without milk and cream, but when cooked with about equal parts of onion and celery, not forgetting the cayenne pepper, a good soup may be made with flour thickening and condensed milk. It is a sort of experimental soup for the good cook to make. Anybody else would fail.

Country Girl's Creed.

"Some time ago you asked about the 'Country Girl's Creed.' Jessie Field, the author, is a national secretary for the town and country work of the Young Woman's Christian association, and you can get a copy of the 'Creed' by writing to the publication department of the national board of the Y. W. C. A., 600 Lexington avenue, New York. J. B."

I am glad to print the above in response to many inquiries as to where one can get copies of "The Country Girl's Creed." I wish some one would add further to our obligation and send a copy of the "Creed" to be printed in the Corner. We have already received and printed a copy of "The Country Boy's Creed," and I should like the other to find a place in our Helping Hand for the benefit of the many who would be interested to read it and then to cut it out and keep it.

Words of a Hymn.

"An inquiry from one of your readers brings to mind a scene in the Moody tabernacle on a Sunday in the winter of either 1876 or 1877, just after the terrible railroad accident when the Ashtabula bridge went down and P. P. Bliss and his wife lost their lives. This was a memorial meeting by Moody and Sankey at the tabernacle, located somewhere near the corner of Monroe and Clark streets, in Chicago. Mr. Sankey sang the song, the refrain of which is the subject of inquiry in the Corner of recent date, 'Only remembered by what I have done.' This poem is by Horatius Bonar and was set to music by Ira D. Sankey. I will send the words if the inquirer wishes me to do so.

Cares for Homeless Cats.

"I have noted with interest recently the letters regarding the care of homeless cats. I should like to state for their information that the Anti-Cruelty society takes charge of all friendless and homeless cats brought to it. Where cats cannot be brought in, we send for them. No charge is made for this work. It is done for the cause of humanity. One day last week forty-three cats were brought to our refuge to be humanely disposed of. H. C. R."

Crochet Thread Wanted.

"I have a friend who received through the Corner lots of little things, such as crochet thread and embroidery thread. If any one has anything of this sort to give me, I would be most happy to receive it. I would like odds and ends of crochet and embroidery thread. F. B."

Who will write for this correspondent's address with a view to gratifying her modest wishes?

Quilt in Star Pattern.

"I am anxious to get a lightweight blue and white quilt in the star pattern. I shall be glad to reciprocate for it in any way that I can. I do other fancy work myself, including embroidery and crochet. If any one cares to pay postage on them I have several woman's magazines each month that I would be glad to pass along. MRS. T. Q. J."

Has any one such a quilt as this to send in return for fancy work of any of the kinds specified?

How to Clean White Feathers.

"You have printed directions for cleaning white feathers, plumes, and wings several times. While I have no doubt they are good in their way, I believe my way is less troublesome and I know it to be thorough. I learned it from a handbook bought a year ago. I believe in reaping as well as in sowing, beside all water and such, let me say, we find in the Corner. It is a fountain of refreshment to which I am happy to add a few drops. Mix clean, fresh plaster of Paris with gasoline until you have a creamy mass, which may be whipped as you would the white of an egg for a meringue. Do not get it stiff. It should look like whipped cream when done. Dip the feathers in this preparation, covering them thickly, without shaking them or separating the filaments. Hang from a line in the open air until they are perfectly dry. Five or six hours is not too long. Then shake them gently and long to dislodge every bit of the powder. They will be white and fluffy. MRS. D. S. A."

We are under signal obligations to our correspondent, from whom we expect to hear again and often. Her communication is apropos to our remarks upon the use and value of gasoline.

Corns Stop Hurting, Then They Lift Out With Fingers

No pain or soreness! Corns and calluses just shrivel up and lift off.

Genuine "Freezone" is only sold in these bottles packed in a sealed wooden case, bearing a yellow label and the name The Edward Wesley Co., Cincinnati, O.

A noted Cincinnati chemist discovered a new ether compound and called it freezone and it now can be had in tiny bottles for a few cents from any drug store.

You simply apply a few drops of freezone upon a tender corn or painful callus and instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can just lift it off with the fingers.

No pain, not a bit of soreness, either when applying freezone or afterwards, and it doesn't even irritate the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also toughened calluses just shrivel up and lift off so easy. It is wonderful! It works like a charm. Try it!

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Venturesome.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

If your birthday falls this week you will be venturesome to the verge of recklessness at times, and again you will be as diametrically cautious, looking carefully before you leap. In your rash and venturesome moments you start undertakings that are apt to end in bitter disappointment, and then melancholy gets into your system. You Gemini people are apt to forget that hard luck comes to everybody, and it is a good loser that makes the success out of life. This is something you need to remember, because new undertakings look particularly bright to you.

If you are given a responsible position and one that is congenial and progressive you will settle down with an attention that is truly commendable. You are by nature a business character and look to make your talents and accomplishments pay good money. If you are unoccupied, however, your dissatisfaction plays you into the hands of the mischiefmaker, and there is no telling what you will do. A marked loyalty to your friends characterizes you whose birthday comes this week. You are apt to change your opinions in a sudden manner more by intuitive direction, which may or may not be correct. It must be remembered, however, intuitions cannot always be relied upon.

You have literary ability, marked by a vein of sarcasm that makes people want to keep out of your way.

A creed is of great importance to your happiness, for you naturally have a strong religious nature. You would make a good pastor if a man, or a valuable minister's wife if a woman, but your changeableness is even carried into your religious affairs, and among you are found many of the people who switch suddenly from one creed to another.

With all, you are charitable, self-sacrificing, and affectionate, and as a result seldom obtain any degree of wealth. You have wonderful ideas, which are often sadly shattered for you. On the whole, you may be classed as a profound thinker, with a love of justice; forceful, but rather tardy in your decisions.

Of all Gemini people, you are most loyal and devoted to your friends. You can be a powerful comforter in time of trouble, and often in so doing forget your own woes completely. You are a deep lover, but home conditions are not always the most felicitous. Fortunately, though, you are not given to inflicting your unhappy moods on others. You are pure and clean in thought, and your desires are pure, but you are sometimes discouraged at your failure to accomplish your desire. Learning to concentrate your force and energy is your greatest need. You are an easy conversationalist and make friends among prominent people.

Conducting business alone is not your forte. Employment is almost always best for you. Though you are naturally literary, you do not like the confinement of this kind of work. With your varied talents you will be successful along many different lines—as a clergyman, a tutor, an inventor, a musician, an artist, or a publisher, you might try your luck.

Always try to surround yourself with restful, refined people, for with your naturally excitable disposition you should cultivate repose of manner—in fact, you should have one hour a day for absolute quiet.

In marriage your greatest happiness may be expected from a union with Aquarius [Jan. 21-Feb. 19], for the reserve and quiet strength of the Aquarius nature gives you the rest and stability which you so need. Leo [July 23-Aug. 23] would make a congenial companion, as also would Virgo [Aug. 24-Sept. 23].

Your colors are green, red, blue, and white; birthstones, beryl and sapphire; fortunate weeks, those beginning April 26 and Nov. 14.

Gift for Boy.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16 and go with a boy 17. What do you think the proper thing for me to give him on his birthday?"

Give him a school pennant or a pillow of your own making with his school colors on it, or, better still, send him a note wishing him many happy returns of the day, or a card with some nice birthday sentiment on it.

Wait for the Symptoms.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am going with a young man who has kept company with me for some time. I think he loves me, although he does not keep steady company with me, but takes me home Some times when he meets me on the street he does not seem to care much about me, especially when there is a bunch of other girls around.

"ISABELLE."

Now don't go and spoil your chance, Isabelle, by attributing love motives with so little encouragement to do so from the young man. Wait until the symptoms are much more plainly developed before making your heart ache unnecessarily.

Wait a While.

"Dear Mrs. Blake: I go with a girl that I would like to marry, but she is under age and her parents are opposed to her getting married. Do you think it would be right to elope and get married?

"I am under age, too. Could we get a marriage license without our parents' consent any place, and do you think that I would be called a slacker for getting married now?

"I volunteered my services in the United States navy in 1915, but they refused me. JAKE."

No, you could not get married if you are under age, Jake, unless you lied about it, and you could not expect a happy marriage to result from one starting out on the basis of deceit and disobedience. Yes, you will be called worse than a slacker if there is such a thing that one can be called. Don't do it. Wait until you are both of age and have more sense than you seem to possess at present.

YOUR SICK CHILD IS CONSTIPATED! LOOK AT TONGUE

Hurry, Mother! Remove poisons from little stomach, liver, bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" if cross, bilious or feverish.

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhœa, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement.

New Home Treatment for Banishing Hairs

(Beauty Topics)

With the aid of a delatone paste, it is an easy matter for any woman to remove every trace of hair or fuzz from face, neck and arms. Enough of the powdered delatone and water is mixed into a thick paste and spread on the hairy surface for about two minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed. This completely removes the hair, but to avoid disappointment, get the delatone in an original package.—Advt.

Nemo TRIPLE STRIP

CORSETS AT NEW PRICES

On July 1, 1916, the increased costs of materials compelled us to slightly advance the prices of certain Nemo models. At that time we were hoping that the material market would soon decline to normal. Instead of that, costs of all materials have steadily increased and are going higher every day.

Nevertheless, we have protected our customers' interests by averaging our reserve stocks (bought before the great advance) with new materials bought at new high prices, thereby avoiding, so far, any general increase in retail prices.

Now, however, a further and greater advance in the cost of all corset materials is positively assured. In fact it may even become very difficult to secure certain materials, of the Nemo standard of quality, at any price.

Nemo quality shall never deteriorate; and, our reserve stocks being practically exhausted, we reluctantly give advance notice of an increase in retail prices of certain Nemo models, to be in effect

On and After Monday, July 2

Following are the few models now advanced:

SELF-REDUCING—Nos. 300, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 324, 326 and 344
Retail price now $3.50—will be advanced to $4.00

SELF-REDUCING—Nos. 506, 508, 522 and 523
Retail price now $5.00—will be advanced to $6.00

These advances affect only the few models named, and represent only a fraction of the increased cost of production. Still further advances, and on additional models, may be compelled in the near future, because of scarcity of materials and uncertainty of supply. We therefore suggest that it will be true economy to secure a liberal supply of your favorite Nemo model while present low prices prevail.

SACRIFICING A FELLOW WORKER.

A CONFESSION of failure, even when that failure is due to forces or circumstances over which one has no control, is by no means an easy matter. Appreciating this fact, one can readily realize the difficult task A. R. M. set upon herself when she undertook to tell her story in the hope that other girls who might find themselves confronted by the same situation would profit by her unhappy experience and resist the temptation to shield or elevate themselves by sacrificing a fellow worker:

"Dear Miss King: I have had a bitter experience, the sting of which I have felt for five years. It had its climax the other day when I lost the greatest opportunity I have had to place me in the class of the successful. Today I hold a mediocre position with a small firm, earning barely enough to exist on. All through my own folly.

"Since losing my chance at the big job I have had time for reflection, and I have just summoned up enough courage to make a confession to you in the hope that it will prevent another girl, if placed in a similar situation, from falling into temptation as I did.

"Five years ago I was employed as bookkeeper by a small retail house. Another girl worked on the books with me, but as I had had four years' experience at the time, while she had about a year and a half, the heavier work fell to me. I felt somewhat superior to her on this account. My companion was unusually bright, and it was not long before I found that I could safely divide the work with her.

"Shortly after I had adjusted the work so that we did equal shares a serious error was made, which resulted in a considerable loss of time, money, and material to our firm. I was called into the proprietor's office about the matter and in a moment realized that I was the one responsible for the error. The man was in a rage and ready to discharge the whole office force on the spot if he couldn't fix the blame on a particular person. I lacked the courage to tell him that the error was due to my carelessness, and in a moment of weakness I mentioned my co-worker's name as the author of the error. As a result of my duplicity Miss B. lost her position.

"I stayed in the position only long enough to secure another, and I was so anxious to get away from the old job that I took one at a slightly lower salary.

"Two years later I learned that Miss B. had spent nearly a year trying to secure another position because she was not able to get a recommendation from her former employer.

"A few weeks ago, through a friend, I was offered a position with a high class firm at a greatly increased salary. I was practically assured of the position, but final arrangements were to be made through an interview with the general manager. While I was waiting to see him Miss B. walked out of his office carrying a number of papers. When she saw me she stopped at the door and stared for nearly a minute, then without a word she turned and reëntered the office of the general manager. When she came out again she walked past me without giving me a glance. The sight of Miss B. dissipated my ambition, and it was with a sigh of relief that I heard the position had already been filled.

"That night I received a note from Miss B. saying that she knew of the part I had played in her dismissal from the other firm and that she was preventing me from getting the new job, not because she didn't wish me to succeed but because she couldn't contemplate having to come in daily contact with a person whose honesty she had every reason to doubt. A. R. M."

Bores Hard to Escape.

One day last summer, when I was sitting on the porch of my summer cottage, I saw two women—dreadful bores—coming through the woods and headed for the cottage, so I slipped inside and upstairs, thinking I could avoid them.

Just as they were knocking, my husband, who had been fishing, came up the steps and asked them in. He called me several times, but I did not answer, thinking they would leave after finding I was not at home. However, instead of departing they decided to wait for my return.

The cottage was just one story, with a small attic, and I was sitting on a trunk at the head of the stairs. My husband, ill at ease, offered to show the guests our little cottage, and I was simply petrified when he opened the door at the bottom of the attic stairs. When they saw me sitting on that trunk was I embarrassed? I should say I was! E. V. S.

Chasing Her Husband.

I went out riding with my husband on his motorcycle. We were on a boulevard near a crossing when he slowed down. I thought he was going to stop. I got off and he started off and left me behind. I ran and called, but all in vain. He did not hear. After running a few blocks I had to go back to the crossing again. I told the policeman on duty there my story, which drew a crowd, and he gave me a nickel to get home. My husband reached home first and called up the police department, thinking probably I was dead. Must Have Been a Lullaby.

He used to say he could sit and listen to my singing all night and never get sleepy. After we were in our own home one evening he asked me to sing. Overjoyed to think he still loved to hear me sing, I went to the piano and sang my best. When I had finished I looked around and found the room empty. With tears in my eyes I walked out and found him in the porch hammock asleep. M. S.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

25 cent bottle of "Danderine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.—Adv.

ETIQUETTE

SLANG.

MANY bad things, although recognized as generally undesirable, may be decidedly useful at times. This is the case with slang. There are moments in the lives of all of us when it seems almost impossible to express ourselves adequately with prim, proper terms; when an expresison or word verging on the slangy is peculiarly apropos. If, at such moments, the term in question is used, it is said with what might be called mental quotation marks, at least, when employed by a careful person.

In many cases words that were formerly slang have since been accepted as legitimate, but it takes a discerning nature to know which to adopt and which to reject.

Except for public, political speakers who are trying to put themselves on the same level as the masses whom they are addressing, and other orators of the same ilk, but who may have slightly different purposes, slang is more prevalent among young people than among their elders. From the vaudeville stage, from the gutter, from errors, it may come, but come it does and is all too apt to crop out in our daily speech. Children and school girls and boys rapidly become accustomed to slangy expressions and use them accordingly, but their parents, if careful, are not so lax. In this matter, as in all others pertaining to good form and breeding, let vigilance be our guide and moderation our master.

MRS. L.: At an afternoon church wedding it is proper for you to wear an afternoon dress and hat; your husband should wear a dark morning coat, gray striped trousers, gray socks, tie, gloves, and waistcoat, and patent leather shoes.

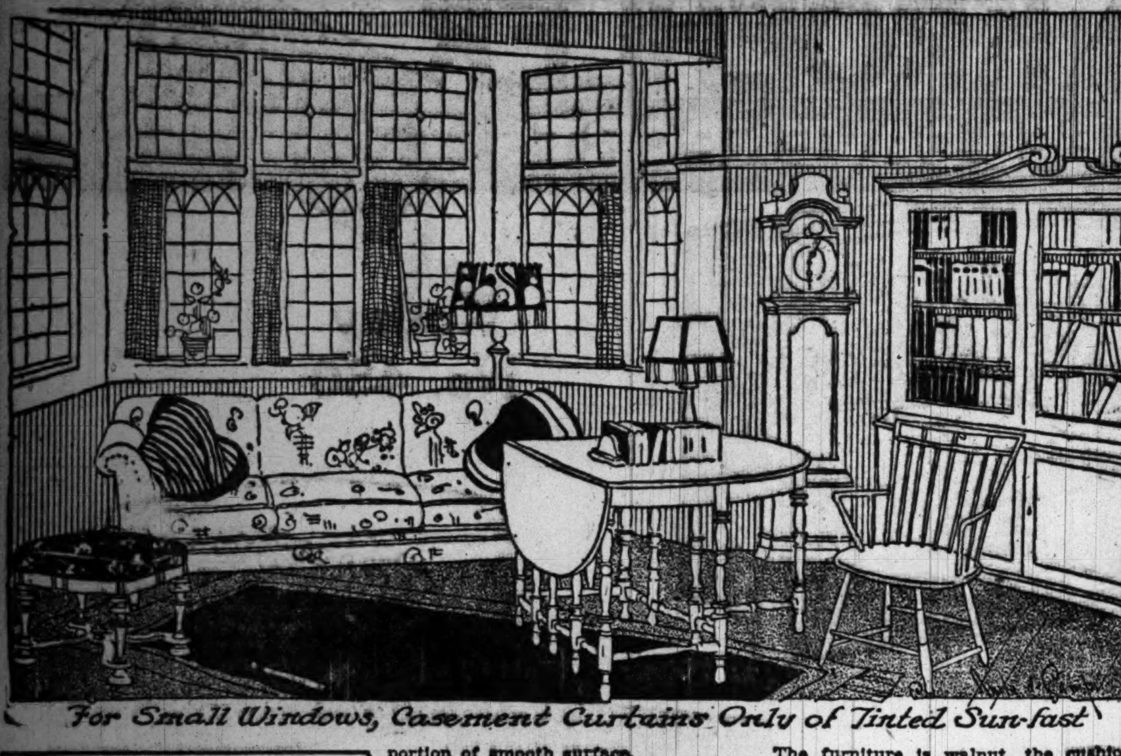
The HOME HARMONIOUS

by Anita de Campi



For Small Windows, Casement Curtains Only of Tinted Sun-fast

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

HOW few women in recurtaining their homes give importance enough to the question of the texture of the fabric in relation to the texture of the wood with which it is to be used! The fact is all too frequently overlooked that soft, silky gauzes and brocades that are excellently used in conjunction with mahogany or old ivory finish are texturally at variance with mission or heavy oak pieces, and that, on the other hand, monk's cloth, burlap, and other heavy weaves are equally inappropriate with fine grained wood finishes. Imagine either with satinwood!

In this one particular the majority of our best decorators are agreed. In other points of theory they are distinctly at odds.

"Inside draperies are frequently unnecessary, but all windows should have glass curtains of sheer material." Thus speaks one decorator.

"Only one pair of curtains is needed," says another, "and that is a pair of casement curtains that work with cord and pulley. They should be lined with light colored material, to look well from the outside. With these roller shades, glass curtains, or overdrapes are quite superfluous."

"To be as it should be," says another, "at least three pairs of curtains should be placed at each window."

Glass curtains should never be looped back; they are contrived as a screen and their purpose of providing privacy would be absurdly discounted by allowing them to be ornamental instead of simply useful.

In rooms with figured rugs and wall paper, draperies should not be figured. With plain side walls draperies may be figured or unfigured. A mistake is usually made towards too much patterning. If a feeling of restfulness is to be obtained, more than 50 per cent of the exposed area of the room and its contents must be unfigured.

Self-colored rugs are a relief in rooms where chintz is used, not because they are as beautiful as oriental rugs but they furnish a balance of undecorated surface. How often do we find a room wherein the commonest of all mistakes is made by home decorators. Decorative design is thrown over everything. The walls, floors, furniture, draperies, and even the ceiling are all covered with one sort or another of design. It is only the person of cultivated taste who appreciates the necessity of a good portion of smooth surface.

Effects in stained glass colors have been revived this season with considerable success. The material being soft, the best method of making up is to have a French heading rising an inch and a half or two inches above the rod. The side curtains, gathered one-third, may be supplemented with a short center curtain or valance to finish it at top. Curtains so made are used over glass curtains.

Nothing so completely spoils a pair of pretty but narrow side curtains as a length of brass rod showing between them. If a short center curtain is not used by all means cover the rod with a scant ruching of the curtain material. However it may be done, the mechanism should always be concealed. Curtain rods and curtain rings and pins and pulleys, while they are undoubtedly necessary, are not esthetic. Different methods are employed by different decorators in concealing them. Some favor lambrequins and some French headings.

In one of our best studios a new method has been devised and that is the use of a colored molding and fringe. The molding, about five inches wide, is shaped and mitered at each end into a shallow "L" that fits around the top of the window frame. The "L" is just deep enough to hold the molding clear of the curtain poles. This, with heavy fringe, hanging tacked to its inside edge, rests upon metal hooks that are screwed into the top of the window frame. The molding is tinted in one color or several colors, repeating tints in draperies. Such a molding could be made of a flat slatlike strip of wood by any clever home carpenter. Painted and trimmed with fringe, it effectively takes the place of an elaborate lambrequin.

All windows are individual problems, they must be treated in their own style. Architects of late have caused radical changes in window draping by altering the shapes and sizes of windows, so they are no longer of any standard size. This has almost ruined the market for ready made lace curtains. Many architects plan, as far as possible, to have no curtains at all, or reduce the curtaining to a minimum by placing casement draperies, like those in the illustration, for example, on the lower windows only, leaving the leaded upper panes quite bare. In some secluded districts, well screened with trees, this is charming. It wouldn't do at all for a city house with windows across the street boldly staring in.

Choice in all things must be suited to individual needs. The little curtains shown here are of dull turquoise sunfast in silk rep weave. Can you imagine turquoise blue to which a barely preceptible tinge of Van Dyke brown has been given? Well, that is the shade. The furniture is walnut, the cushions are velvet, and the Axminster rug is self-colored brownish taupe. The lamp shade is of apricot yellow silk.

Chintz, cretonne, blocked linens, as well as rajures, gauzes, Persian and French prints, rich damasks, brocades, taffetas, casement cloths, arras, veilings, fine nets, all are lovely in their proper surroundings. The aim of this article is to accentuate but one point, to which proper consideration is too seldom given, and that is that the textural scheme of a room is quite as important as the color scheme. Once the mind is trained to recognize this, great progress will have been made in a feeling for harmony. In the development of the final idea there will be no incongruity.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. O. O'C.: Yes, the samples you inclosed would be excellent for your double rooms. In the dining room use paper of a lighter green with some orange and olive green in the pattern.

MRS. M. G.: Use a good quality of cretonne in the room with the fumed oak. Choose a pattern that is printed on a tan ground.

MRS A. E. S.: Shades of blue are the most popular colors this season. Blue grass cloth is effective. The fashion prevails of one whole floor alike, particularly if the rooms are not large. Let your hall be a litle lighter than your living room. If the walls here are not in good condition, let the paper be slightly figured in a soft color.

* *

A. R.: It is the rule in formal drawing rooms to have the curtains hung full length. In informal living rooms it is usual to have them hung only to the sill. Your blue and mauve sounds lovely, but I cannot imagine old rose in use with it. Use silver gray for your draperies and amber for the lamp shade. Brocade would be lovely for your hangings. Either that or shot silk in silver and delicate lavender. These need not be lined. The only way you could have the valance move with the door would be to adjust it directly to the door.

MRS. G. R. W.: Would you consider painting your floor a darker blue than your side walls? I have done this in several children's rooms and the effect is invariably pleasing. If you have an enameled dresser, have an enameled bed as well. Yes, I believe there is a bluebird design on the market. If you cannot find that you can readily procure stencil and apply bluebirds to the material yourself. Let the rugs be mixed shades of blue. Brighten the room by the addition of several plots of blooming plants. Add one or two coral pillows.

MRS. P. J. V.: Your scheme is all right for your curtains. I would suggest a brilliant touch of orange color in the room, either orange colored flowers or a bit of orange gold pottery. On your French doors, shirr the white material to each rod top and bottom on one side, and on the other side just a little lambrequin of the brown. Shirr transparent curtains to two rods over your art glass window. In informal rooms the curtains come just to the window sill. In formal reception rooms they are supposed to come to the floor.

Suitors' Mistakes Contest.

Did you make a mistake that cost you the one you wanted to win more than any other? Was it an unkind remark, a selfish deed, a mean or careless one, an error or tendency of your past come to light? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Mistake That Cost Me the One I Wanted Most to Win." Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

Squelching a Fresh One.

It was the first night he had called. He was the new man in our town, after whom all the girls were wild. He was good looking, a fine dresser, and had a good job. Therefore he was a good "catch." So you may know I felt proud and happy when he took me out that evening.

We got along fine until we returned home; then he did the thing which cost him the one (I later found out) that he wanted most to win. As I stood in the hall bidding him good-night he suddenly cried, "O, look at that spider on the wall." I turned and he caught me in his arms to kiss me. Somehow I struggled to get free and succeeded. I had four brothers who had taught me to box, and I used my skill upon him. Then such a torrent of words as I let flow! I did not realize until then that I could talk.

He still begs me to "reconsider," although two years have passed; but I cannot think he would ever make me happy since he destroyed all my faith in him that first night. E. M. E.

Borrowed a Balker.

To economize, I arranged to borrow a friend's horse to take my girl to a social which was to be held near her home in the country. I got to the social and started to go for the fair maiden, but the horse balked and delayed me over an hour. When I arrived her father informed me she had retired. My penny wise, pound foolish policy failed. D. C.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of the CHILDREN

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

George and his dog were allowed to run out to play every night for a few minutes just before supper. One afternoon late he fell asleep and did not awaken until it was dark, and when he did so he put on his little red cap and started for the kitchen door.

"You cannot go into the yard now," said his father; "it is dark, and supper is ready."

George stood quietly a moment, then looking at his father, said: "Jes' play I'm the dog." A. V. H. B.

Billie was traveling with his mother and the second day on the train was a lonely one for the young man, who, for all his 5 years, is a great "papa boy." So he decided he would write a letter to his father. After laboring for some time he finally produced an extremely scrawly letter and asked his mother if she could read it. She said she was afraid she couldn't and Billie was much disappointed. However, an obliging young Scotchman in the next section said he was pretty well versed in languages and he thought perhaps he could read it. And so he began: "My dear-r-r-r father-r-r-r-r," reading on and on through an imagined text with a decided burr, which was new and unusual to Billie, whose eyes, growing more and more cynical, never left the young man during all of the recital. When the final phrase, "Your-r-r-r loving son, Billeh," was reached, Billie's disgust became too great for suppression. "Aw," he said, "I couldn't talk like that so how could I write it?" J. N.

One day wee Jack had coaxed to go to the woods with some older ones to pick flowers, but the way was long and the day was hot, and the little legs were short. Coming home the way seemed doubly long and the mosquitoes were troublesome and kept buzzing around and lighting on his face. He had been patient, but that was the last straw, so in sheer desperation he clinched his little fist and shouted fiercely: "Darn you, keep off me! Can't you see I'm walkin'?" L. B.

"Fritz had a dog named Buster that he loved much. One morning his father said to him: "Fritz, whom do you love the most, father or Buster?"

Fritz answered: "I love them both the same."

Then he was asked whom he loved the best, his mother or Buster, whereupon Fritz gave the same answer. His father said: "Why, Fritz, aren't you ashamed to say you love your dog as much as your mother? Now, tell me whom do you love the most, mother or Buster?"

Fritz looked quite sad and thoughtful for a moment, and then said: "Oh, father, please say another dog!" X.

James wanted to go to the movies. He was given a dime and told to hurry home. When he finally did get home he was asked why he was so late and answered: "O, the show was so bum I had to stay and see it again to get my money's worth. EDMUND W. MYERS, 3916 Montrose avenue.

Don't Fuss So About Your Complexion

The more you massage, steam, manipulate and fuss about your complexion with so-called skin foods, creams, lotions and what not, the chances are the worse it will become.

Away With Beauty Fads

Make Cuticura Soap and Ointment your everyday toilet preparations. Bathe with the Soap and hot water on rising and retiring, using plenty of Soap, best applied with the hands which it softens wonderfully. Smear any signs of pimples, redness or roughness with the Ointment and let it remain five minutes before bathing. Nothing better, purer, sweeter or more effective. Then don't over-diet, overexercise, lose sleep or fret.

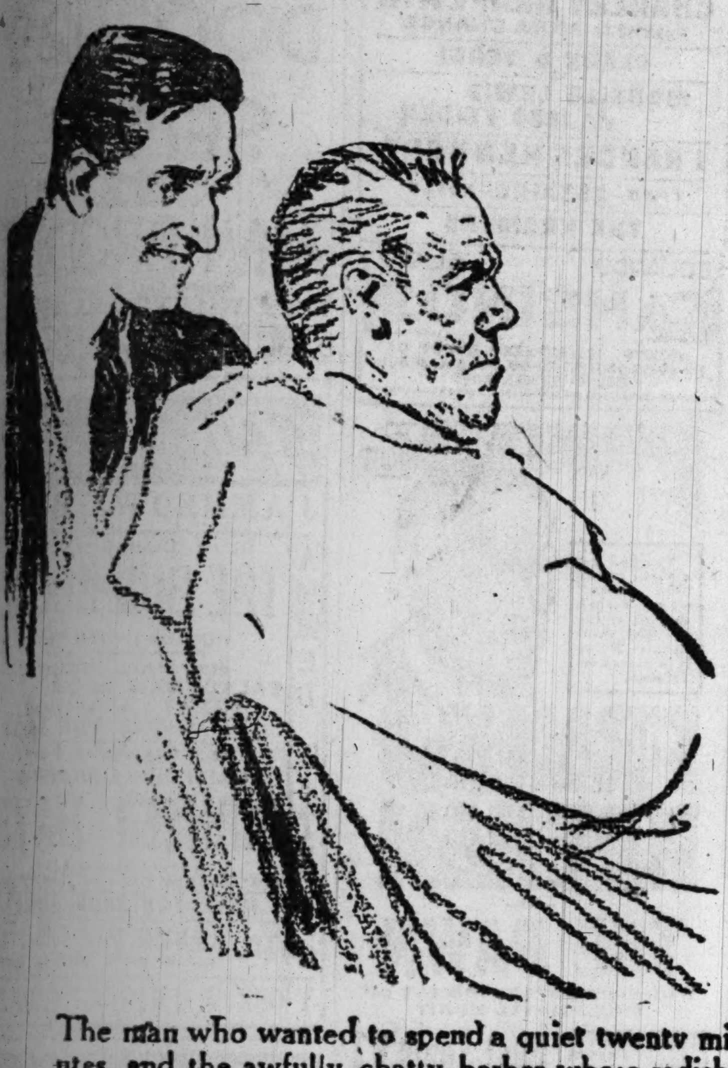
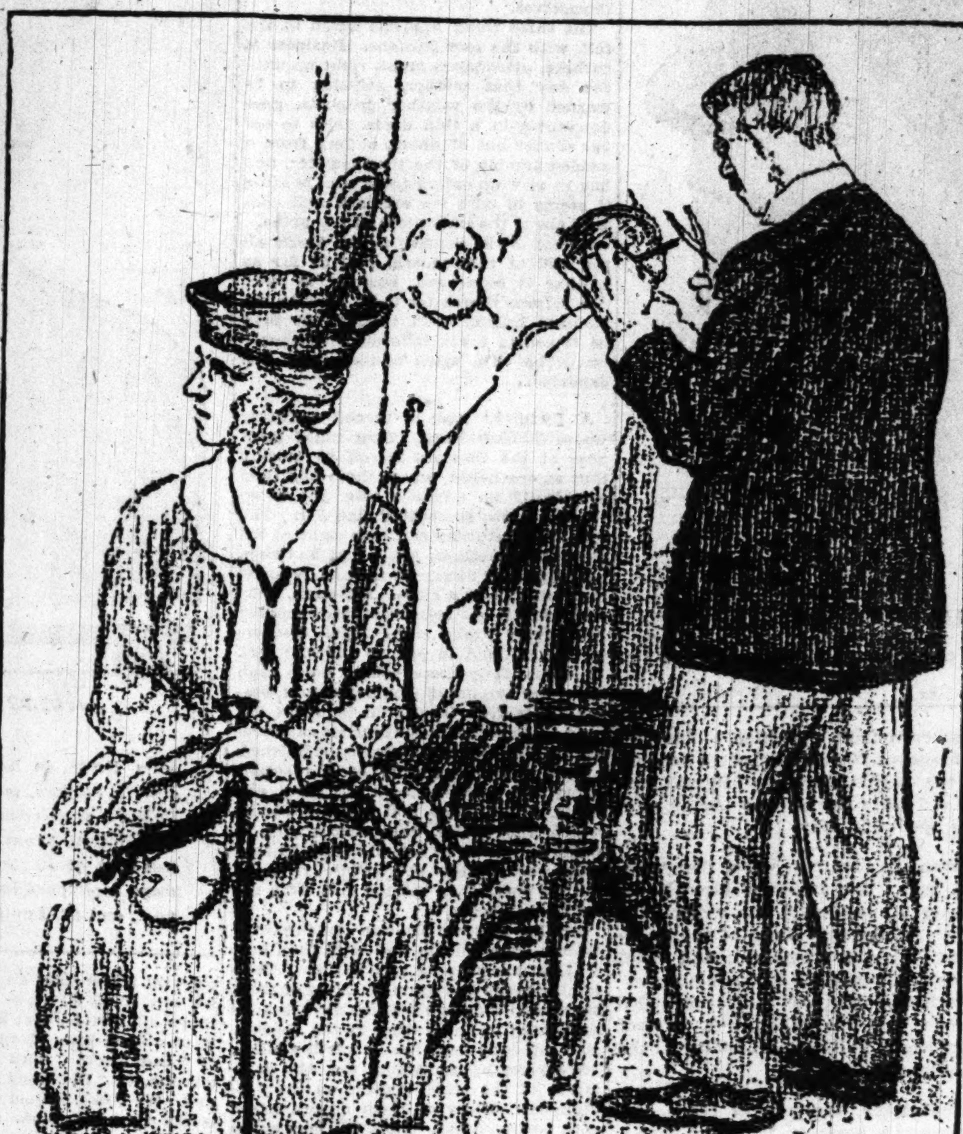
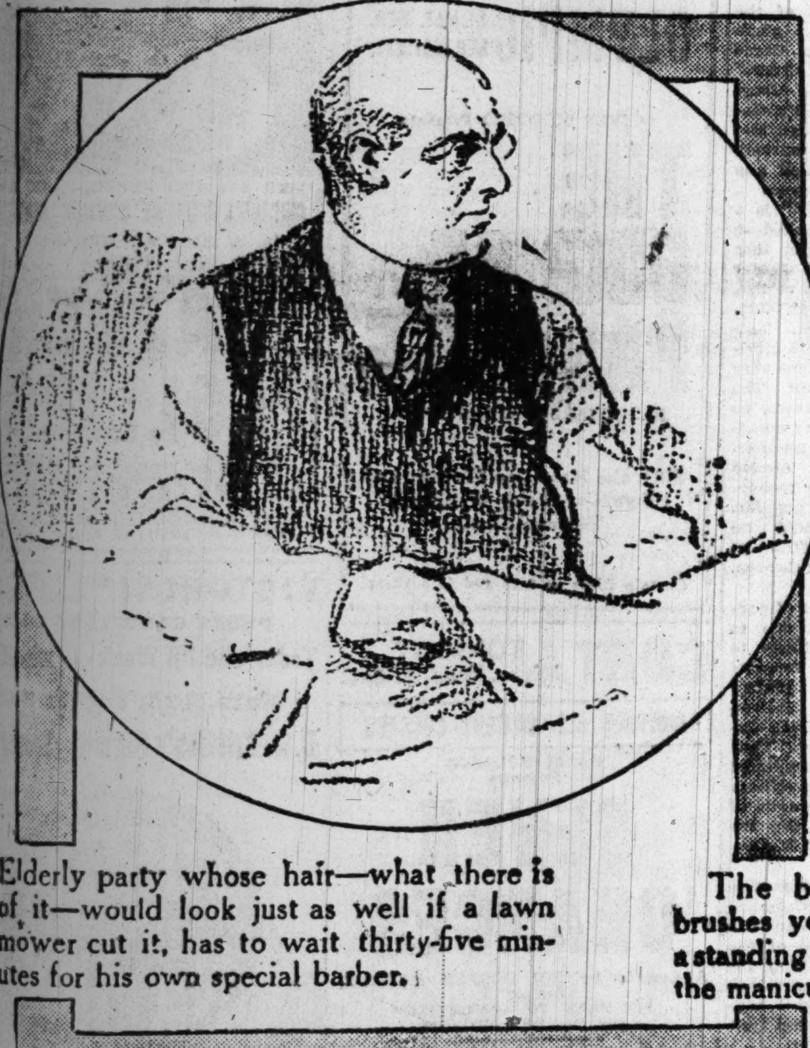
THE BARBER SHOP



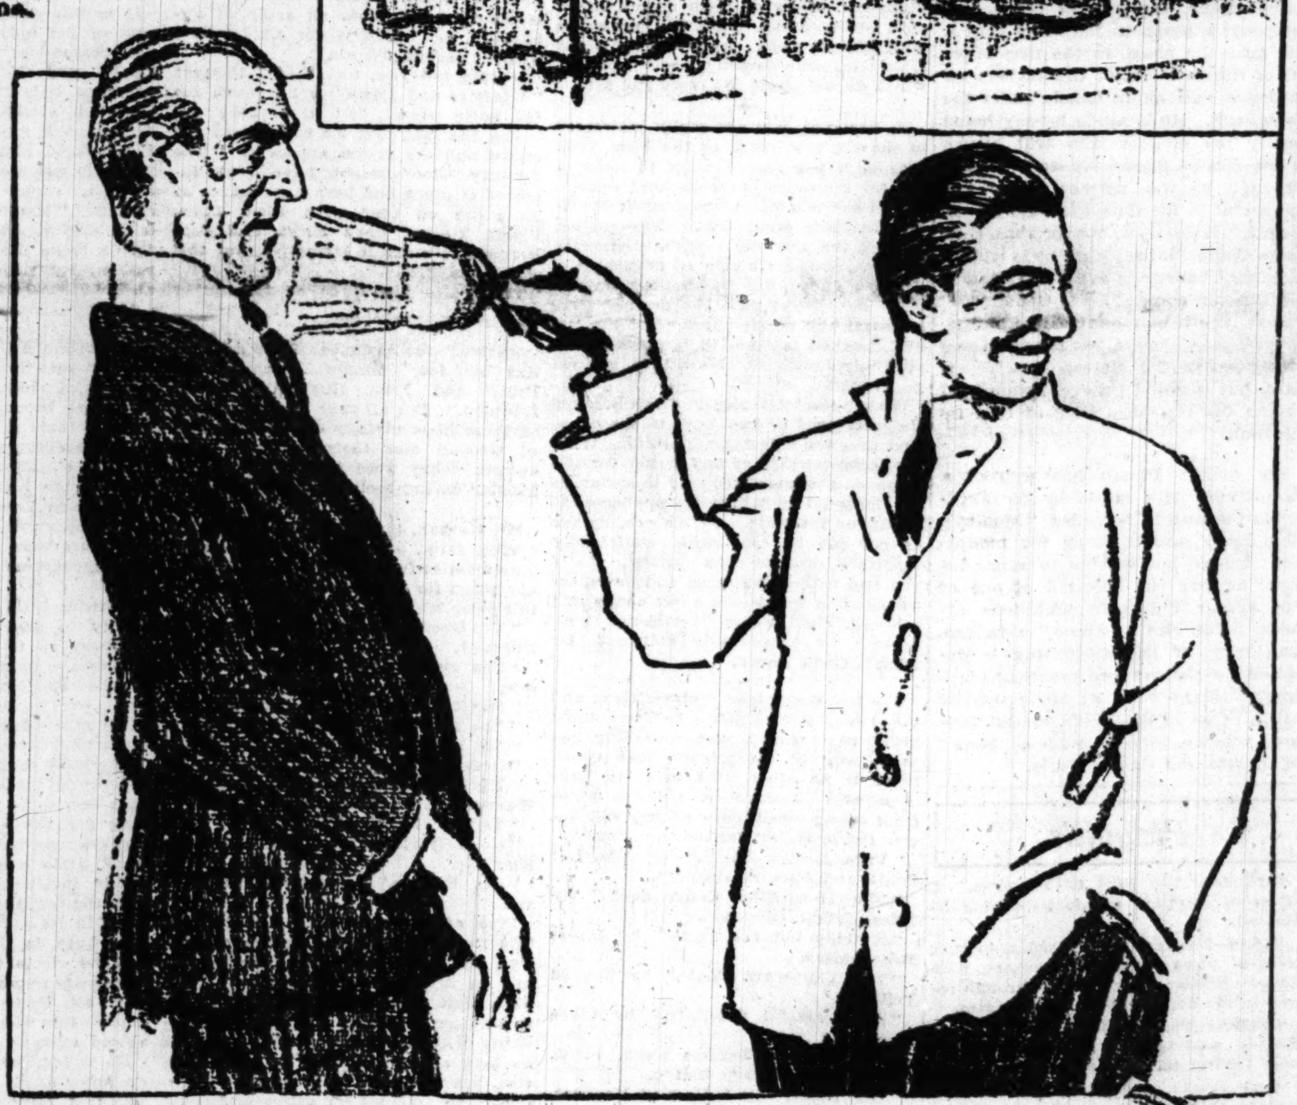
The man who wanted to spend a quiet twenty minutes, and the awfully chatty barber whose radishes are up, and wants to talk about them.



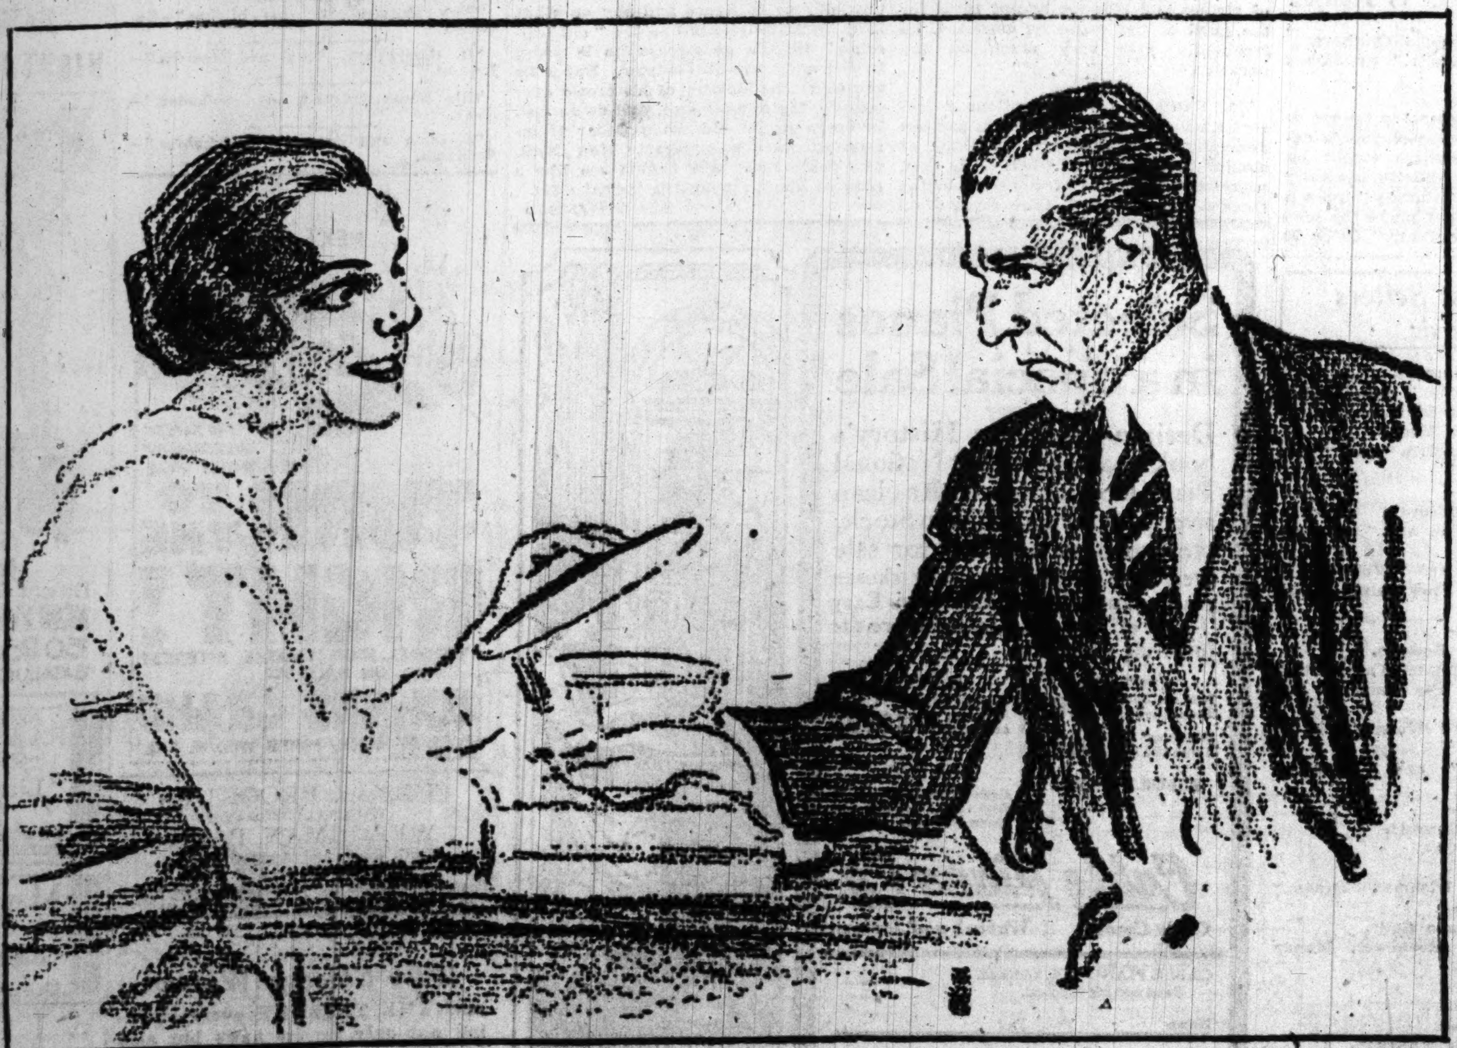
Mrs. Zeubler, waiting while her little boy's hair is trimmed, watches the manicure table and decides then and there that in the future she will do Fred's nails for him at home.



Elderly party whose hair—what there is of it—would look just as well if a lawn mower cut it, has to wait thirty-five minutes for his own special barber.



The boy who brushes you off has a standing joke with the manicurist.



The manicure with the eyes telling about the five dollar tip a traveling man gave her the other day.

"MR. ROSENHEIM—MISSES ROS'HEIM—"

News and Views of the Theater

By Percy Hammond

MR. MANTLE, a New York critic, curious to know how shows and dramas are reckoned by experts in the interior, asks that a list of his favorites, printed elsewhere, be supplemented by one recording my own judgments and prejudices. Before proceeding with this flattering assignment it is comfortable to sidestep possible onslaughts from those of different opinion. In the remote event that the appended enrollment does not contain the items which you liked most last season, blame it, please, on a bad memory rather than a lack of perception. The best five of a fairly fair lot, then, are:

"Justice."
"The Boomerang."
"Good Gracious Annabelle."
"Seven Chances."
"Turn to the Right."

Perhaps Mr. Mantle will not care if I venture further and submit a catalog of the musical pieces which seem to rank the others, limiting the number again to five:

"Betty."
"Sybil."
"The Follies."
"The Blue Paradise."
"The Cohan Revue."

In case the "Cohan Revue" was played season before last instead of last season, "Very Good, Eddie" might be substituted on account of the humor of Mr. Ernest Truex' performance. Since inventories are an insidious form of comparison, I beg Mr. Mantle's indulgence while I set down another containing five young actresses regarded as superior because of their charm, intelligence, skill, and good looks:

Miss Lola Fisher in "Good Gracious Annabelle."

Miss Carroll McComas in "Seven Chances."

Miss Martha Hedman in "The Boomerang."

Miss Clara Joel in "Common Clay."

Miss Helen Collier in "Turn to the Right."

I hope Miss Joel's performance belongs in a previous year, so that I may include the name of Miss Marjorie Wood, if for no other reason than that she is so good in at least one emotional moment with Mr. Keenan in "The Pawn." The most pleasant of the young singing actresses who reached here, Mr. Mantle, were:

Miss Ivy Sawyer in "Betty."
Miss Ina Claire in "The Follies."
Miss Alyn King in "The Follies."
Miss Violet Sagal in "The Blue Paradise."
Valli Valli in the "Cohan Revue."

If I have Valli Valli in the wrong invoice let me suggest for her place Miss Grace Fisher of "The Show of Wonders" or Miss Tessa Costa of "The Love Mill," both of whom are pretty and unaffected and one of whom can sing. Here is my idea of the best of the men who acted here last season:

John Barrymore in "Justice."
Arthur Byron in "The Boomerang."
Frank Keenan in "The Pawn."
Frank Craven in "Seven Chances."
Barney Bernard in "Potash and Perlmutter."

Mr. Keenan and Mr. Craven being with us at present, room may be made for O. P. Heggie of "Justice" and Edwin Nicander, who played the vinous millionaire in "Good Gracious Annabelle."

Mr. Mantle, perhaps, will disdain to favor me with a roll of his vaudeville ideals, since the varieties are not considered dignified material for critical measurement in the East. It may, however, interest the Western Vaudeville Managers' association to know what I like, since they think that I like nothing. Here is why I laugh in vaudeville, gentlemen:

Julius Tannen.
J. C. Nugent.
Tally and Mayo.
McIntyre and Heath.
The Sharrocks.
Edwards Davis.

AMICABLE relations have been resumed between Raymond Hitchcock and Mr. Sunday at the suggestion of the latter. In the pour-parler leading to the negotiations Mr. Sunday agreed to spare the stage and its people, and Mr. Hitchcock now omits from "Hitchie-Koo" the vicious chastisement of the evangelist which was so lively a feature of his engagement at the Illinois.

The National Sylvan theater was dedicated in Washington last week under imposing auspices. The inaugural entertainment was a problem allegory called "The Drama Triumphant," the problem, perhaps, being to discover what the drama is triumphant about.

Alan Brooks, who is the author, star, producer, and financial backer of "Dollars and Sense," comes to the Garrick tomorrow night from vaudeville. His play is an elaboration of a sketch presented by him not long ago at the Majestic, and it is described as a "social satire." After producing it a fortnight ago in Washington Mr. Brooks disbanded his company; but good reports of it reached the Messrs. Shubert, and they persuaded him to reorganize for a summer in Chicago. Among the players are Miss Willette Kershaw, Miss Justine Adams, and A. H. Van Buren.

Miss Margaret Anglin will find vaudeville employment in the service of Martin Beck, who may present her in "Liberty Aflame." This is something patriotic by Roland Burke Hennessey and it is being presented in New York with success by Miss Julia Arthur in the rôle of Liberty. Miss Arthur will continue to stir the ardor of the east; Miss Anglin probably will operate in the west.

Miss Anglin has other plans also. She announces the purchase of Emerson Hough's "The Broken Gate," Hulbert Footner's "Getters and Givers," and a comedy named "The Pot o' Shamrock," besides a Greek tragedy or two to be done in New York with Walter Damrosch's orchestra.

Last week's popular songs, patriotic or sentimental, were "Rhode Island is Recruiting, So Stand Fast, Uncle Sam," and "On the Banks of Dear Old Salt Lake, There My Utah Girl Resides."

Alan Dale, who for some years has been in obscurity, emerges from the shadows to resume comic criticism of the drama for one of Mr. Hearst's New York journals.

Coincident with the Senate's intimation that it considers the 10 cent movies a necessity and that there will be no war tax on them Thomas W. Lamb, a New York architect, announces that he has commissions for thirty-two new cinema theaters in various parts of the land. They represent an investment of $11,000,000.

Beginning her summer period of recreation Miss Laurette Taylor announces that she will remain in Town all of next season playing the plays of J. Hartley Manners. Her second year there will start next September.

Several amendments will have been made in the cast of "Very Good Eddie" when it starts tomorrow for the coast. Ernest Truex, Mrs. Truex, Miss Alice Dovey, and Oscar Shaw being averse to long journeys, will return to New York. George Mack is Mr. Truex's successor.

The war playlet, "For Country," presented at the Palace recently by Miss Louise Dresser, was considered too wicked for vaudeville audiences, inasmuch as it told of a young woman who made the ultimate sacrifice to save the soldiers of her native land from disaster. It has been rewritten by the composer of a play named "Kisses."

James L. Crane, who gives an excellent impersonation of the young half-Jap with Mr. Keenan in "The Pawn," is a son of the Rev. Dr. Frank Crane, formerly of Chicago.

Dear Sir: Do you recall your American lady friend who drove the national guard recruits from in front of her house because they wakened the baby? Well, after she shooed 'em away she and her husband took dinner at the Von Hindenburg Gardens with several hundred other patriotic residents of the Sixth German City.

D. M. K.

P. S.—I understand that they are going to name a new restaurant for the U-boat that sank the Lusitania. Say, bo, if they ever do they'll make so much money that Germany won't have to ask for an indemnity. K.

The din of arms fails to dismay A. H. Woods, whose announcement of impending enterprises is one of the longest and most varied ever issued by a producer. Since he joins the large band of our absentee landlords in November with his new Randolph street theater, his plans may be more than usually interesting to the playgoers of this section.

Mr. Woods' early productions, which have already been more or less officially announced, include "Mary's Ankle," "The Target," "Potash and Perlmutter Film Company," and "Plunder." The first named, an inflation of a vaudeville playlet by May Tully, was staged in New Haven last week and will proceed thence to Boston. In the company are Irene Fenwick, Walter Jones, Zelda Sears, Louise Drew, Bert Lytell, and Leo Donnelly.

Samuel Shipman's drama, "The Target," with Emmett Corrigan and Clara Joel at the head of the cast, will be brought to New York late in August. "Potash and Perlmutter Film Company" is the third of the series, and Alexander Carr will rejoin Barney Bernard for this event. Montague Glass's collaborator in this instance is Jules Eckert Goodman.

Robert Hilliard, Clara Joel, Edward Ellis, and others will be seen in Owen Davis' dramatization of Arthur Somers Roche's story, "A Scrap of Paper," retitled "Plunder" for stage purposes. Still further, the Dolly Sisters will have a musical play by P. G. Wodehouse, Guy Bolton, and Jean Schwartz, and other musical productions contemplated are "Call a Taxi," by Earl Carroll; "The Girl from the Trenches," and "The Girl from Ciro's."

Marjorie Rambeau will have a new play, and Robert Warwick, lately identified mainly with the films, will become a Woods performer. Other plays in preparation are "Jim's Woman," by Wayne Bryan Carlock; "It Is the Law," by Arthur J. Westermayr and Jasper Ewing Brady; "In the Net," by Ramsay Morris; "Fingerprints," by Minnie Scheff; "The Gay Lothario," by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan; "His Honor the Judge," by Nancy and Jean Rioux; "Playing the Game," by Ashton Stevens and Charles Michelson of Chicago, and an untitled melodrama by Max Marcin.

MATTERS of MUSIC

By Frederick Donaghey

A READER writes in to ask if THE TRIBUNE, in its reports of the North-Shore performances, ought not to have devoted more attention to the quality of the orchestra, "especially as it came from out-of-town," and less, "if space were a factor," to the soloists and special features of the festival. "For, after all," she says, "an occasion of the kind is of importance just as the orchestra is important: everything else is either make-weight or decoration or box-office."

This is hardly true of a venture like the annual orgy at Evanston, which is really a sort of musical county-fair. The handsome gymnasium which Mr. Patten gave to Northwestern University is admirable for all the purposes of this Maytime revel by Dean Lutkin, his resident forces, and his hired entertainers; but it is hardly the auditorium a conductor would select as the hall of arbitrament for an orchestra entered as a contender with the important organizations of the country. When, in other years, Mr. Stock and his men played in the gym, they were never at the advantage they enjoy in their own building.

Miss Kinsolving, who did well with her morning series of recitals in the Blackstone Hotel, is to serve next season as manager of the Chicago concerts by the Flonzaley Quartet.

When Sousa was in Chicago last week, he submitted to the hearing of a number of musical friends a simple ditty in two-four called "Blue Ridge! Blue Ridge!" John A. Carpenter insisted on hearing it played at least twelve times on end, asked for and got the rough original of the MS., expressed the opinion that the First Bandmaster had hit the right tune for soldiers to march to, and rushed off to the east to hear the Chicago Orchestra make known his symphony. Everybody else who heard it insisted that, although a good musician, Mr. Carpenter was quite right about the new march-song.

ROSINA GALLI.

She is to return to Ravinia Park for the ten-weeks season, and will dance four times a week.

Roberto Moranzoni has been engaged by the Metropolitan Opera: he is, for Chicago, identifiable as the virile and brainy conductor of most of the performances given last season, in the Auditorium and the Blackstone, by the Boston-Pavlowa company. It seems that he is to take the place of Polacco, who has, since the defection of the petted and difficult Toscanini, been the important conductor of the Metropolitan. A rumor that Toscanini would be brought back for next season seems absurd: he was a great man in his place, so long as he remembered his place; but his caprices were costly, and served to make his withdrawal less of a hardship to the management than was generally believed.

As Pierre Monteux, also, has been taken on by the Metropolitan, the expectation is that Moranzoni will devote himself to the Italian répertoire, with Papi, who comes to Ravinia Park this year, as his deputy. Monteux is the good-looking Frenchman who conducted this season in the two Chicago afternoons of the Ballet Russe. He made the first page wherever that troupe used Nijinsky's "Till Eulenspiegel" by refusing to conduct because the music was of German make. The New York City commentators regard Monteux's engagement as indicative of the Metropolitan's intention to use more of the French répertoire; but that institution is not, as yet, equipped to compete with Campanini in the matter of suitable singers for those works. When "Samson and Delilah," for example, is sung, it is with Caruso and Matzenauer, although the opera was not designed to be even visually comic.

Mr. Mantle, in his feuilleton today about the shows in New York, speculates on the likelihood of John McCormack's succeeding Caruso as the Metropolitan's pet tenor. McCormack, if ever in the grip of that ambition, long ago shook himself free, by his own admission: he not long ago told an interviewer for the Green Book that he with difficulty urges himself through an opera without breaking down in laughter. He could not, he said, take opera seriously as an art-form. He makes at least as much money as Caruso, and with far less work. There is no good reason to doubt that the Metropolitan engaged McCormack merely to keep him from singing for Campanini in Chicago and New York. He is to have five performances, and, doubtless, will devote them to "La Bohême" and "Rigoletto."

McCormack, by-the-way, is engaged to sing next season with the Chicago Orchestra. He was billed to do so this season, and withdrew on the plea that his physician advised against singing two days in succession.

Olive Fremstad is to return to the Metropolitan, to take up some of the parts that have been Gadski's. The inexplicable music-reporters who insist that the fate of the United States in the war hangs upon the employment of American singers in that institution regard her as one because of a legend that she was born in this country. I took on years of age in five minutes one afternoon, not long ago, when I ventured to express the pious hope that the Allies would presently be using Berlin as a convict-camp: she was there when I said it, and still there when she finished her comment, which provided me with an ineradicable impression that Lissauer was just a-jesting in his Hymn of Hate.

The Band from the Trenches, an organization of French musicians announced months ago for an American tour, is not coming because of the difficulties in getting across.

The late Paul Reubens, the last of whose graceful music was heard in Chicago not long ago in "Betty," left $120,000: half of this he bequeathed to Phyllis Dare, an English singer in musical comedy. They were betrothed; but he insisted on breaking the engagement when told by his physicians of a slim chance of recovery from the illness that carried him off.

The revival of Reginald DeKoven's "The Highwayman" in the East brings out the information that the ex-Chicagoan's insistence on having his operas produced led him, when arranging the lease of a theater he owns in New York, to insert a clause binding the tenants, the Messrs. Shubert, to produce a piece of his annually or pay a forfeit. They have been paying the forfeit: this year, however, they figured that the attention devoted to his major opus, "The Canterbury Pilgrims," made him a good prospect in the lighter field, and revived the old operetta, although it was not a success when new.

Another operetta was recently put in revival down there for topical reasons—"When Johnnie Comes Marching Home." The late Julian Edwardes wrote its music: he was a studious Englishman who came over as conductor for Marie Tempest on her first visit in 1890. Edwardes' piece had a Civil War theme; but that did not prevent the staging in the revival of an Allies-triumphant tableau, with Serbia, Roumania, and all the others represented by choristers. Chicago theater-goers without recollection of the work for other reasons may identify it as involving one of the most persistent attempts to provide a new national song: this one was called "My Own United States," and never reached even the foot of a week's list of six best-sellers.

Galli-Curci's brother-in-law, Mari Mario, is ready to emerge as a baritone in opera in this country: he was a familiar lobby-figure in the Auditorium this season in companionship with Count Curci, the great coloratura's husband. Mario is not a beginner: as a basso, he has had abundant experience. Experts advised him to experiment in the higher gamut; and the outcome is said to be felicitous.

A son of Giuseppe Del Puente is singing in one of the musical comedies in the eastern cities. His prænomen is Joseph; and, like his father was, he is a baritone. The elder Del Puente was, by-and-large, the most talented of all the men in Italian opera, although it is doubtful if any tangible part of the public regarded him as such. Even when his voice was mainly a memory, his cleverness as an actor gave uncommon artistic definition to his performances. He was in Patti's support in the performance of "Romeo and Juliet" with which the Auditorium was opened in 1889.

Even the librettist, worm that he is, will turn. Joe Redding, librettist of Herbert's "Natoma," has written the music for the next Jinks of the Bohemian Club, San Francisco; and Brian Hooker, librettist of Parker's "Mona," is writing the music to a song called "Don't Tell Me What You Dreamt Last Night."—Leonard Liebling in the Musical Courier.

Challiapine, the notable basso, has composed a hymn in the belief that it will take the place, in the new order [?] of things there, of the anthem regarded as national in Russia under the Romanoffs. He is again loosely listed among the singers who will return to the United States for next season, although he was neither happy nor successful in his time with the Metropolitan. Persons who aver that they quote Campanini say that he is willing to bring Challiapine over, and that, if the Russian come, "Boris Godounoff" will at length be mounted in Chicago. Moussorgsky's opera has for some seasons been in the Metropolitan répertoire, but is not, I believe, inventoried among the box-office riots of that institution.

Sir Arthur Pinero has written a pantomime, with music by Sir Frederick Cowan: it is called "Monica's Blue Boy," and is ready for mounting. Pinero has written to music before: he was the librettist of one of Sir Arthur Sullivan's ambitious efforts, "The Beauty-Stone," a failure. The trick of libretto-writing is despised by the average practical playwright till he tries it: he is usually futile. One of Sullivan's easiest failures was an operetta with a "book" by Barrie and Conan Doyle.

Irene Pavloska

She is in the roster of singers for the summertime operas in Ravinia Park, where she appeared last year. She is known in this neighborhood for her participation in "Sari," for two seasons of répertoire under Campanini, and for a recent song-recital. She made a record, for sheer industry, measured by number of parts undertaken, in last winter's Auditorium series.

Playbills

Notes of the Stage

Eastbound tourists are notified that the new Ziegfeld "Follies" will begin their summer exercises in New York June 12. Engaged in the show will be Don Barclay, Will Rogers, Bert Williams, Walter Catlett, Carl Heisen, Dorothy Dickson, Vera Maxwel, Allyn King, and Beatrice Allen. The words are by George V. Hobart and Gene Buck and the music is by Raymond Hubbell, with one star-spangled number by Victor Herbert.

Among the first night telegrams received by Frank Keenan on the first night of "The Pawn" was this one from his precocious grandchild, the small son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Wynn: "Slip it over, kid. Remember you are named after me, so live up to the title. FRANK KEENAN WYNN."

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There comes a time each spring of the year when the wind veers around to the south for two consecutive days and father sends his Panama hat to be cleaned.

That is the end of the current theatrical year. Heaps of managers never discover this. Next day, or next week, comes the north wind again, and the very best of theatergoing weather with it. But the theater season is a deader, just the same. From then on until the flickering end early in June it has to struggle against a habit as fixed as the seasons themselves.

The same thing happens again in the fall, with the roof gardens. Business is rushing, attendance great, right up until the day that mother, refusing to be warned by the weather prophets, goes downtown in a thin dress, tries to eat her dinner out of doors, suffers from a sudden tumble of the thermometer, and has to give up eating ice cream because it seems to miss her stomach and congeal about the interstices of her spine.

It may be 80 degrees in the shade all the rest of that month, but, so far as mother is concerned, summer is over. She refuses thereafter to go back to her summer habits, even though she may be forced to again take up her summer wardrobe. The spirit of the season has departed.

A fortnight ago it turned suddenly warm in New York. That night business at the theaters fel off so quickly that at one house, where there had been practically no advance sale, the gross receipts were something like $11. The following Saturday seven or eight of the current attractions, plays that had been running along nicely for months, brought their seasons to a close. Although, until last week, it has been most unseasonably cool every night since then, theaters have continued to put up the shutters. It seems likely there will be more than the usual number of summer revues, seeing thaat New York still is about the only place where eager tourists can foregather, but the regular season is finished.

And with the closing of the season come the reviews—those amusing columns of statistics and comparisons in which the critics, the rascals, try to make you believe that all the plays they liked were the best plays of the year and all the plays they did not like were not worth producing.

We have before us, for instance, the George Jean Nathan list of the ten best plays of the year. A nice list, too. Containing many fine dramas. Most of them short, and soon over, which always adds something to an evening in the theater. And a few of them really worth while.

We have been reading, too, the comments of the other experts on the Nathan list. Many of them do not agree with George at all. Most of them agree with him in part. And each of them makes his own selection—with none of which do we agree. So there you are.

If, however, you are really interested in the ten best plays of the New York season, if you should want to make a list for reference purposes next season, we advise you not to pay much attention to these other lads. Come to us. We are the only simon-pure, unerringly positive, sure-fire judge of drama as a people's entertainment, because in review we always pick the dramas that entertain the people most. Not the ten best, but the ten best liked plays of the season is our motto. How, then, can we go wrong?

We are not interested in plays because they are good or bad, save in the sense that they are entertaining or dull. With the technical skill of any writer for the stage we are interested only in so far as the material to which he applies that technique interests us. We are, so far as our job is concerned, confessedly reportorial rather than critical. So if you had rather follow us and be entertained than follow the other chaps and be—well, shall we say instructed? Or bored? Or occasionally uplifted? Or what? Come ahead.

The ten most popular plays, then, and the ten you are going to hear most about next season, and, accepting you as an average theatergoer, than which there is no other kind that we have been able to discover, the ten plays from seeing which most of you will derive the most satisfaction, are these:

"Turn to the Right," by Winchell Smith and John E. Hazzard.

"The Man Who Came Back," by Jules Eckert Goodman.

"Nothing but the Truth," by James Montgomery.

"The Thirteenth Chair," by Bayard Veiller.

"A Successful Calamity," by Clare Kummer.

"O, Boy!" by Jerome Kern, P. G. Wodehouse, and Guy Bolton.

"Out There," by J. Hartley Manners.

"Upstairs and Down," by Frederick and Fanny Hatton.

"Old Lady 31," by Rachel Crothers.

"A Kiss for Cinderella," by James Matthew Barrie.

It probably is not necessary for me to add that several of these plays are dependent to a considerable extent on their casts. William Gillette naturally helps "A Successful Calamity" quite a bit, and William Collier plays the hero of "Nothing but the Truth" 60 or 70 per cent better than any other comedian we can think of now could play him. Plays him better, that is, in that he gets most out of him. Neither can I think of "Out There" with Laurette Taylor missing, or "Old Lady 31" without the cast it took Rachel Crothers three weeks to select from an army of applicants, or "A Kiss for Cinderella" without Maude Adams.

I could tell you, too, that I thought "Upstairs and Down" a bit rough for the home circuit, but that does not lessen the fact that its wit caught the crowd and the crowd approved. "The Century Girl" might have been included if there had been any chance of its going on tour with Elsie Janis, Frank Tinney, Leon Errol, and Sam Bernard to make it attractive, but this seems doubtful.

There also are three or four other plays that easily could be included on their records — Marcin's "Cheating Cheaters," for instance; Shaw's "Getting Married," Maude Fulton's "The Brat," and John Raphael's "Peter Ibbetson." But all save the last named of these have already done quite a bit of touring and their virtues made known. They were more than passing popular during their local engagements.

Mr. Nathan, in whom we have almost perfect faith, excepting that we should hate most awfully to have him select all our plays for us, risks his judgment on this selection:

"The Goods of the Mountain," by Lord Dunsany.

"The Golden Doom," by Lord Dunsany.

"Magic," by Gilbert Chesterton.

"The Master," by Herman Bahr.

"Old Lady 31," by Rachel Crothers.

"Great Catherine," by Bernard Shaw.

"King Argimenes and the Unknown Warrior," by Lord Dunsany.

"Trifles," by Susan Glaspell.

"Good Gracious, Annabelle," by Clare Kummer.

"Our Betters," by Somerset Maugham.

Five of these are one act dramas. The Dunsany plays are finely imaginative, but they were so atrociously acted and so inadequately produced in New York that personally I found it a task to sit them through. I have much sympathy with the amateur in the drama so long as he pretends to be nothing else, but when, either as player or producer, he assumes an entire equipment of virtues and bids me accept them for the good of the cause he espouses, he frequently gets very much on my nerves.

Mr. Nathan's other selections represent a matter of taste in drama, and are generally to be approved for those of similar taste. Which, when all is said, represents the basis of criticism in the theater and out of it. Once away from the popular taste, which is invariably based on a sentimental or comedy or emotional appeal the entertainment makes, and never on its intellectual appeal, good and bad drama becomes a matter of individual selection based on individual preferences.

It is interesting to note that of the popular list only two of the ten plays are dramatic—"The Man who Came Back" and "The Thirteenth Chair." Of these only "The Man Who Came Back" is straight, old fashioned melodrama. The appeal here is human and direct, florid, picturesque, and theatrical. There is much acting of one kind and another, which gives the players a chance. "The Thirteenth Chair" is a trick drama, an affair of cooked-up thrills, none the less effective for that reason, but still plainly of the theater and with practically no relation to life.

All the rest are comedies, and, curiously, only one of them musical. This does not mean that there were no musical play hits this year; merely that very few of the musical plays stood out. The form has become so set, the tunes so similar, there is only a choice of comedians to distinguish one from another. "Love o' Mike" has been nursed through the better part of the season. "You're in Love" is daintily popular. "Miss Springtime" had a splendid run, and there were the usual big affairs at the Hippodrome and the Winter Garden.

Knowing little of the standards of popularity in opera, we are not one to prophesy as to who is most likely to become the next reigning male favorite at the Metropolitan—who, in plainer words, will be the next Caruso. But—

The other day the Messrs. Gatti-Casazza and Otto H. Kahn of New York deliberately outbid Cleofonte Campanini and Harold McCormick, or whoever happens now to be providing the sinews of song for the Chicago opera, for the services next season of one John McCormack, Irish tenor.

This incident, taken in conjunction with the fact that whenever McCormack sings in New York the traffic squad is kept busy in the neighborhood of the hall he elects to honor, and that his popularity appears to be growing rather than set, leads to the reasonable conclusion that John may be the next lyric voiced operatic fad of the hour.

He is not, we are told, half so good an actor as Caruso, nor commands so varied a répertoire; also he is a trifle unwieldy as to figure and shy on what Billy Sunday describes as the "old pepperino," though he swears he is going to diet and train all summer. But if he can carry the idolatry of his crowd over into the big opera house, and do as well in opera as he did when Oscar Hammerstein introduced him to New York, two years from now should see him a king of kings among the lyrical elect.

Miss Hertz, in her new capacity as principal actress of the Lieb-Harris Players, may be observed this week in a revival of George M. Cohan's good comedy called "Seven Keys to Baldpate": the place is the Wilson-Avenue Theater, not hitherto employed for plays. She was seen about three years ago in Dean Lovett's "Cowards," and afterward took part in the little-theater movements of Chicago, Philadelphia, and St.-Louis.

MOVIES STIMULATE READING.

THOSE in charge of the various libraries throughout the country are witness to the fact that motion pictures have a noticeable effect on the circulation of books. Since the adaptation of well known novels for screen presentation it is declared that interest in some of the oldest authors has been revived. Says Mr. Thanhouser of the Thanhouser Film corporation: "The screen is a great advertiser. It projects the work of some forgotten but worth while author, and fills the papers with the news, the billboards with posters, and the mail with announcements. A great, fresh interest in the author is created, and the libraries feel the call instantly. Indeed, the progressive ones are quick to develop it by special cards—during the screen run of a particular adaptation—advertising the writer's works and stating they can all be supplied."

John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film company, is authority for the statement that along with milk, bread, and potatoes the movies are going up. Says Mr. Freuler: "There are only 16,000 picture theaters in the United States today. Their earnings must support all of the vast studios and the pretentious productions which the public taste today demands. The motion picture is sold to the public too cheaply now. It is sure to cost more. The experience of picture enterprises in England, Australia, and France shows prices must go up, and that with this accomplished pictures can expect a fair prosperity through a period of war."

List, all ye Chaplin fans: Charlie Chaplin's next picture will be called "The Immigrant." The release date has not been published.

Mary Pickford is a lady of many charms. Perhaps her greatest is, however, her democracy. She is cordial and charming to great and small alike. Those who have met her unfailingly register her under the category of "regular folks," for off the screen she is just a quiet, retiring young woman, with a spontaneous smile and the faculty of "hobnobbing" with whoever happens to be her neighbor at the time. The accompanying picture of Miss Pickford, to be found in another part of the paper, is, we think, one of her best. It will surely look scrumptious framed.

Studio records were recently broken at the Metro studio when eighty people who appear in support of Viola Dana in "Aladdin's Other Lamp" worked continuously for nineteen hours without leaving the studio or changing from costumes to street clothes. Three meals, one of them served in the studio dining room, the other two served on the studio floor, were brought in from a near-by restaurant. Whew-w!

These be troublesome days for Tsuri Aoki. Against the advice of her husband, Sessue Hayakawa, she went picnicking in the Sierra Madre foothill range and returned with poison oak. One of her prize bulldogs meanwhile took the opportunity to escape into a neighbor's cactus garden and returned in a sadly dilapidated condition. And, though Miss Aoki's maid had been warned to look not upon the juvenile loquat [it's a Japanese fruit; I looked it up in the dictionary] when still in its greenishly green state, now she wishes she might find a quick and safe way to return to Nippon.

Carmel Myers, former leading woman of the Fine Arts company, has just signed a two year contract with Universal to appear in feature pictures for that concern.

A swimming pool 40 by 60 feet and 10 feet deep is now being made at the Lasky studio for the aquatic members of that organization and also for studio work.

Sam de Grasse is the latest acquisition to the Douglas Fairbanks company.

Max Linder, who was reported to have been stricken with a touch of tuberculosis as a result of an inflammation of a lung from a wound during his services in the European war, is greatly improved and will be able to resume work in the near future. They're always up and getting our sympathies aroused!

Bessie Love sallied forth one day last week and defiantly purchased nine hats. Consequently she has to arise a half hour earlier each morning in order to decide which one she will wear to the studio that day. That woman simply doesn't care what happens to her.

Mary Miles Minter has just signed a new two year contract with the American Film company.

William Russell, it is said, is an expert in bayonet drill, and it is further stated that he may be called on to teach young recruits how to spear "trench huggers" when the big camps are established near Santa Barbara.

Stuart Holmes gets most of his inspirations from a jazz band. We always knew there was something.

Report has it that Helen Holmes drove an automobile at top speed off the dock at San Pedro, Cal., four times, in an attempt to make a thirty foot leap onto a barge, and the fourth time she made it. Of such stuff are heroines made.

With four dozen real cowboys before the camera and several thousand head of cattle, on the largest ranch in Arizona, for the annual round-up, Harold Lockwood and his company have settled down near Prescott for the filming of Jackson Gregory's novel, "Under Handicap."

Triangle fans will be glad to hear that Bessie Barriscale has returned to the Ince-Triangle studios in Culver City, and has commenced work on a new picture.

Marshall Neilan, after signing a new two year contract with Lasky, has been granted a three weeks' vacation. Needless to say, he took the first train for New York.

Comes this from an inspired press agent: "Some one with a mathematical mind and an ulterior motive has figured out that one of the settings constructed for Fannie Ward's next picture contains 2,600 separate pieces of wood, especially prepared and fitted. It is a conservatory scene of the lattice variety, and it has been estimated that these separate pieces placed end to end in a horizontal position would reach within three feet six inches of the outside ring of Saturn. The set, which consists of the entire lower floor of a country home, was made from the first shipment of wood received from the Lasky company's recently acquired lumber yard at Hoquiam.

A tank to photograph a submarine battle between a man and a giant turtle was built at the Balboa studio. The tank, it is said, is excavated in the solid ground, concrete lined, and will hold 33,000 gallons of water. The window at the end of the tank and five feet above the floor is plate glass one inch thick, and on the other side of it is a small chamber, where the camera will be placed to shoot the scene. The two windows on either side of the camera window are so placed as to let a flood of electric light into the water while the scene is being photographed. It cost $2,000 to make and equip this tank to photograph a scene that will run less than fifty seconds.

Sam Hardy, the "legitimate" comedian who starred in "The Princess Pat" and "The Follies," has been engaged by Famous Players to play opposite Mae Murray in her next picture, "At First Sight."

Miss Blanche Yurka in "The Pawn"

Miss Yurka, as a Washington society woman, speaks most of the epigrams in "The Pawn" at the Princess. She was last here with Mr. Sothern in "The Two Virtues."

BROWNEY: If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope, I'll send you the printed material I have on how to become a photoplayer and also inclose a list of studios.

FAN: No, I was not the child you saw.

DOROTHY C.: Following is the cast of "The Snarl": Helen Dean, Bessie Barriscale; Marion Dean, Bessie Barriscale; Monte Bruce, Charles Gunn; Jack Mason, Howard Hickman; Helen's nurse, Aggie Herring; opera manager, Thomas Guise; doctor, J. Barney Sherry. You are welcome.

VITAGRAPH FAN: I imagine that Rudolph Cameron is the new leading man you refer to.

INQUISITIVE: Corinne Grant has green-gray eyes and black hair.

LENA: Ach, ja!

MRS. L. M.: Your seeing the gentleman in question being the one thing that has made you determined to enter motion pictures, I don't blame your husband for "kicking like a branded steer." He may have looked at you just as he may have looked at anybody else, but I'm willing to wager that there are 50,000 women in Chicago that are practically thinking the same thing. Better stay at home with that "good substantial husband" of yours is the advice of the lady who has had an opportunity of observing both husbands and movie stars.

READER: I have an article on the doubling process which I shall take great pleasure in sending you if you will send me a stamped envelope. Not a bit of bother; always glad to be of service.

N. V.: A letter addressed to Charles Ray, care of the Triangle Film company, Culver City, Cal., will reach him. So far as I know he is not married.

LITTLE RED CROSSER: Yours is the nicest club I have heard of for a long time. Practice shining your own shoes, and when you have the job down pat, demonstrate to daddy just how well you can do it, and I am certain he will gladly give you the money for the club that he has been accustomed to pay his bootblack. Send me your name and address. I'd love to write you a personal letter, I have an idea.

RICHARD: Following is the cast of "Intrigue": Peggy Dare, Peggy Hyland; grand duke, Bobby Connelly; Richard Carr, Marc MacDermott; Mrs. Carr, Mrs. Remley; Prince Toursville, Templer Saxe; Prince Henri, Brinsley Shaw; Princess Alice, Miss Curley. Write again some time.

GERTRUDE: I am informed that the Essanay studio allows no visitors.

THIS GETS A LAUGH FROM SOME IN VAUDEVILLE

McVICKER'S.

Brown and Barrow:

What nationality are you?

That is what has been troubling me for a long while. My father was an Italian and my mother was a Turk; I was born on an English ship in Chinese waters under the French flag. Now you'll have to tell me what I am.

It's hard to tell what you are. What is your nationality?

My rashernality?

No, no; your nationality; the place where you were born?

Well, I am crossed between the sun and the moon. I got mooney once in a while.

You don't seem to understand me, so let me explain. Wherever a person is born that is his place of nativity. Now, we'll say a man is born in Boston; what is he?

He's a nativity.

No, no, he is a Bostonian. Now, a man born in Washington, what is he?

He's a man that does washing.

Certainly not; he is a Washingtonian. Now, if a man is born in Michigan, he is a Michigander.

Did you ever hear of such a thing? Michigander. Then all the women must be michigooses.

Yes, and all the children are Michigoslings.

If an Irishman is born in a balloon, is he a skyterrier?

If a man is born in a butcher shop is he a sausage?

If an Irishman is born in Ireland and comes over to this country what is he?

He is an Irishman.

No, sir.

What is he?

He's a policeman the minute he lands.

If a cat has kittens in an oven are they biscuits?

O'Neil and Gallagher:

I'm always ready to help you out of a tight situation.

Then please help me out of my dress.

My wife has been nursing a grouch all week.

Is that so? I didn't know you were sick.

Gee, you've got a shape like a match.

Well, a match has a head, and that's more than you've got.

They say fish is good for the brain.

That's correct.

What kind would you advise me to eat?

Whale.

Will you embark with me on the ocean of matrimony?

I'm afraid I might get seasick.

When a man pays attention to a woman it is generally a sign that he wishes to marry her.

And when a man doesn't pay attention to a woman it is generally a sign that he has married her.

I love you.

I've heard that before.

I worship you madly.

Loose talk.

I cannot live without your love.

Get some new stuff.

Will you marry me?

Well, now, there's some class to that.

I wonder what makes my head swim?

It's so light.

Is anybody taking you out to dinner tonight?

No.

You'll be awful hungry tomorrow.

I wonder where all the pins go to?

That's a difficult question to answer, because they are always "pointed" in one direction and "headed" in another.

If I were to die would you marry my sister?

Never.

But she is so much like me.

That's the reason.

MAJESTIC.

Rolfe and Maddock:

"You should see Mlle. Fatima, the fairest creature in the world. Ah! Such eyes, such hair, such teeth, such arms, such hands—do you follow me?"

"I am way ahead of you."

"I am a danseur." (Gives an imitation of his steps.)

"You mean you are a darn fool."

"Come look, quick, the barn's on fire."

"No, 'tain't. I got the key right here in my pocket."

Watson (to ukelele player): "That darn fool's got ukeleetis."

RIALTO.

Curley and Welch:

"Well, if it isn't my old friend. How are you?"

"Not so good; hope you are the same. Thank you."

"You've still got that foolish way of talking, haven't you? But say, where have you been all these years?"

"I've been to New York."

"How did you find New York."

"I didn't have to look for it. It was there when I arrived."

"You don't understand. What I mean is how did you like New York?"

"O, how I like New York?"

"Yes, that's it; how did you like it?"

"Not very much. It was too tough."

"What was too tough?"

"The steak I got there."

"I'm not talking about the eats. I'm asking you about the city."

"Just the same."

"What do you mean, just the same?"

"The city was just the same like the steak."

"I see, New York is a tough city?"

"Yes, tough."

"You shouldn't call a city tough; you should say common."

"Yes, just the same."

"So you enjoyed yourself, did you?"

"Little bit, by me a not very much. I went down by the cellar."

"What did you go down a cellar for?"

"To get on the train."

"You don't mean you went down a cellar; you mean you went down into the subway."

"Yes, just the same."

Dunes Pageant Again Today if Clouds Roll By

By Mme. X.

"HOPE springs eternal," else why did the promoters of the Dunes pageant dare to plan their great and glorious spectacle almost a twelvemonth after the aqueous week that dogged the footsteps and nearly drowned the local suffragists a year ago in their schemes for parade, garden party, and al fresco ball during the days of the Republican convention?

Chicago—the world's symbol for the practical and material—has such a "flair" for the poetic and beautiful and rare that the Columbian exposition, which flashed forth twenty-four years ago for six months, illuminating the world and setting the standard for that sort of festival, was made possible. The committee that designed and executed the dunes pageant—Donald Robertson, Miss Mary Hinman, Miss Caroline McIlvaine, and others—is animated by the same large vision and is carrying out Chicago traditions in the spectacle which was drowned out last Wednesday and which is offered again today.

Even if you attempted the trip last Wednesday and failed, try it again today. It will be worth your while. In any case, use your influence—and you have as much as your neighbor—to save the dunes and to turn them into a national or state park.

Saving for a Bond.

"I'm saving my money to put it into the Liberty loan. I gave up a hat, a parasol and a pair of shoes in order to buy a bond."

The speaker was one of a smart luncheon party. One listener longed to inquire if the money thus saved covered a $50 or $100 bond, but that is beside the mark, as the point to be made is that the idea seemed to be an entirely new one to the other women of the company.

Said one: "I hadn't thought of that. I didn't know we [with emphasis on the we] were expected to buy them. I thought it was the men."

"Why, yes, my dear, you know that Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank was called to Washington by—wasn't it the secretary of war, Mr. McAdoo?—to tell him how to reach us and she brought back a lot of bonds—blue ones they are—and now is asking us all to buy them."

Educational Propaganda Planned.

That's as near as some women get to facts. Mrs. Fairbank has no bonds for sale, but when she gets the application blanks—blue ones—from Washington, she will "push them" far and wide so that none of us who take these and put them to their fullest use need be without our own little bond. Meanwhile she urges all of us in quest of a bond to write to Mrs. William McAdoo, treasury department, Washington, D. C., to signify our intention of taking up some of this loan, the idea being, as far as possible, to measure the patriotic impulse or reaction of American women.

Of course, you can get these bonds through your bank, but this does not help the educational propaganda that is being planned both to stimulate patriotism and to further the sale of the bonds.

"A million women have each bought a bond!" That would sound exhilarating and would prompt another million and still another million women to go and do likewise.

Slow to Economize.

We all need a lot of education in this war. A prominent Chicago hostess was entertaining a distinguished New York artist at dinner lately.

"You see, I'm giving you a war dinner—just three courses," she explained to him as the third course, the "plat doux," was passed.

"Dear me, how interesting! They don't do this sort of thing at all in New York," he answered, and probably made a mental note to hasten the day of his return to New York.

A few Chicago hostesses are banishing alcoholic beverages from their tables for the duration of the war. But, on the whole, up to now few of the society leaders have made any real change in their manner of living. Butlers and footmen are still in evidence in smart establishments. The three course dinner is still the exception among dinner givers. The garage full of motors still is the rule.

In England only maids and old and tottering men are to be found in household service; one meat course is the dinner allowance, and almost no one—even if he has a car—runs it, gasoline is so precious and costly. If we're headed for the same kind and degree of retrenchments we're going that way slowly.

One item of information, however, indicates some results from the thrift crusade. It is said that whereas before we entered the war the city's garbage amounted to 400 tons a week it now is only 200 tons for the same period. I may be wrong as to the figures but not as to the proportion of reduction.

Busy Days for City's Guests.

The visit to Chicago of the six Italian commissioners and their secretaries next Saturday and Sunday, though brief, will be a full one. On their arrival in the morning, after a few minutes' halt at the Robert H. McCormick house at East Erie and Cass streets, which is to be their headquarters, they will be driven out to the Saddle and Cycle club, where the executive committee, which is in charge of them, will entertain them at luncheon.

The general reception committee of a hundred or more prominent citizens dines them at a big dinner at the Blackstone hotel that evening, after which there will be a great meeting and concert at the Auditorium. Maestro Campanini is preparing the musical program, which will present as many of our operatic stars as can be gathered together then, including, probably, Mme. Galli-Curci. There will also be speeches and the proceeds from the sale of seats will be divided, "fifty-fifty," between the American and Italian Red Cross.

The next day Chicago Italians will be hosts at a luncheon at the Congress hotel for the commission. This will be followed by a huge meeting in Dexter pavilion at the stockyards, after which our visitors will depart.

Like the English and French commissions, the personnel of this Italian one was selected with the greatest care to bring experience, ability, and prestige to bear in the adjusting of Italian and American relations.

Jacob M. Dickinson, former secretary of war, heads the committee to receive the commission, while prominent among those arranging the details of the visit are Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, Robert H. McCormick, Benjamin Carpenter, and William Prescott Hunt.

Times to Remember.

What times these will be to look back upon! Some one ought to photograph the Walter Brewsters' vegetable garden that flourishes now where their lawn has heretofore waxed and withered. A picture, too, of Mrs. Moses Wentworth's potato crop bordering on the Lake Shore drive would be of interest years hence.

In Portland, Ore., not long ago Bishop Sumner, formerly of Chicago and dean of the Episcopal cathedral in West Washington street, led a patriotic procession with flags and bands through the streets of Portland. He was regimental chaplain at one time in his career. He always has a big American flag hanging in his church to testify to the patriotism of the American Episcopal church. He will be in Chicago the middle of the month for a few days' visit.

Among other oddities of these feverish times was the present made to Miss Kathleen Burke by an association of business men before whom she spoke in San Francisco on the Red Cross. She was to address a big meeting of workmen a day or so later, also in behalf of the Red Cross, and members of the I. W. W. threatened to make trouble and break up her meeting. The above mentioned association of business men presented her with a large bouquet of orchids and a beautiful, but thoroughly efficient little revolver, "to use, if necessary, at the meeting."

She didn't take it to the meeting, and, in spite of threats, didn't need it. Of the 4,000 workingmen who were present, she says that 1,000 joined the Red Cross then and there and 2,000 joined it the two following days.

Knitting for Soldiers.

For the benefit of the dozens and dozens of women you and I know who are working daily in our Red Cross shops it is worth recording that in Canada the women are rather letting up on the making of bandages and are devoting themselves to making pajamas, surgical shirts, sheets and pillowcases, and—grewsome sound—what they call "amputation bags"—that is, an apparatus for holding the stump, what remains attached to the body of the unfortunate arm or leg after amputation.

Canadian and English women are also making neat and most acceptable sleeveless jackets for aviators out of old kid gloves. Long evening gloves are especially good for this. They are cut into squares or strips and sewed together à la patchwork quilt. The result is used to line a soft, woolen jacket, the kid being smooth, flexible, and warm.

Don't forget that if you're knitting for soldiers you're knitting for real connoisseurs and critics. There's hardly a man nowadays in the British or French army who isn't an expert with the knitting needles. The favorite stunt, especially in the hospitals, is to unravel their woman made socks and re-knit them closer and better.

While on the subject of war relief work it is pleasant to chronicle the Friday club's gift of two ambulances to the French battle front. One of these is dedicated to the memory of the late Mrs. George S. Isham, a former president and one of the club's most valued members. Her name, Katherine Porter Isham, will be on the outside of the ambulance, while that of the Friday club will adorn the other car. Frank Howe Packard, whose mother, Mrs. George Packard, is a Friday clubber, will drive one car, and Alfred Homer Stillwell will be in charge of the other.

Miss Ryerson Going to France.

The departure for France the middle of this month of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson's eldest daughter, Miss Susan P. Ryerson (better known as Miss Suzette Ryerson), will create a great void in her wide group of friends. For three years she has been studying histology, which, as you so well know (though I did not), is the science of microscopic anatomy. She gets her degree—or has gotten it—at the University of Chicago and now plans to use her abilities in some military hospital in France.

Women are considered to be especially fitted for this fine, delicate, and important work. So much of the success of modern medical and surgical work consists in accurate bacteriological analyses, and as it is a field of labor as yet not overcrowded, Miss Ryerson's services will be of great value in some one of the "ambulances militaire," as they call a soldier's hospital over there.

Mrs. Peter Dudley of Chicago is working as a nurse's assistant in a hospital "pour les grands blessés" (severely wounded) at Chalons-sur-Marne, within sound of the guns. She has gone through in this quaint old town two aerial bombardments—the most unnerving possible form of attack, say the soldiers—and writes that, harrowing as it all is, she is happier than she has been since the war began, as she is working for France.

Norfolk's Music Festival.

The John Carpenters and their daughter, Miss "Ginny" Carpenter, have gone to Norfolk, Conn., where one of the greatest annual musical events of the country takes place on Tuesday evening. This is the Norfolk music festival under the direction of Carl Stoeckel, when a chorus of over 500 voices with an orchestra twice or three times the size of our Symphony orchestra performs a varied program.

The feature of this is a brand new musical composition written by some composer in America, which is offered in competition for this event. This year the much prized honor was won by John Carpenter, whose first symphony will have its first performance on this occasion.

These Norfolk festivals are interesting affairs. All the residents in the surrounding country, fashionable New Yorkers and Bostonites, sing in the chorus. The greatest musical artists give up everything else to be present or to take part in the performance. Kreisler, Bauer, Percy Grainger, all will be there on Tuesday. Stock of our own orchestra will lead the orchestra. It is probable that many piquant moments and many triumphs await John Carpenter in the future, but probably nothing more completely satisfactory than this initial production at the Norfolk festival of his first born symphony.

Mrs. Carpenter and Miss "Ginny" will, after the festival, go to the charming old Winterbotham place near Charlotte, Vt., on the southeastern shore of Lake Champlain, where at the moment the lilacs—some of which were planted a century ago—are in a fervor of fullest, most fragrant flowering. A charming product of colonial times, the house itself stands on a bluff looking across the shimmering, iridescent lake to the blue and purple Adirondacks. Plattsburg lies nearly opposite the place, which otherwise bears little connection with any known spot, being out of the beaten track of automobilists, of telephonists, and far from such desecration of the simple life as gas and electricity. It is a peaceful, idyllic, and lovely spot, where one of the busiest, most sought after women of Chicago gets the respite and rest she needs.

Making Summer Plans.

Every one is slow this year to make summer plans. The Watson Blairs are still undecided on any definite headquarters. With both sons enlisted in the United States navy and cruising up and down the New England coast, the Blairs prefer to patrol the same coast line in a motor, keeping more or less in touch with their offspring. Incidentally, they will probably become well acquainted with a delightful and historic part of our country. The roads are good and the inns, too, in eastern New England.

The Blairs may depart long enough from the sea line to spend a few weeks at Cooperstown, N. Y., where also Mrs. F. S. Eames, Mrs. E. S. Worthington, and Frank Cramer are going to be for part of June and July.

Mrs. Hale Holden and her three children are soon going to Black Point, Conn., on the sound, whither Mr. Holden can run up for week ends during what promises to be for him an arduous summer in Washington on the railway commission.

The Williams J. Chalmerses are hying themselves to Watch Hill, R. I., for the warm season, preferring bracing sea breezes to the more languid air of Lake Geneva, Wis. Mrs. James Keeley is contemplating a house at Lake Forest, whither she will move her family by mid-June.

And so the world scatters just as in pre-war days. Who knows what will be the aspect of the autumn reunion, or who would venture a prophecy?

Illinois women are weeks ahead of their sisters in other states in organizing the state women's committee of the council for national defense. Mrs. Joseph Bowen, head of this state committee, and her aids are debating whether her organization shall wait on the slower communities or go ahead in forming all the women in Illinois into a big behind the lines army.

At the committee's headquarters, on the fourth floor of 120 West Adams street, you will find any and every day Mrs. Bowen, Miss Vittum, Mrs. George Plummer, Miss Mary Waller, Miss Virginia Chandler, and their assistants working to coördinate the various departments. Hundreds of letters come in every week offering services and asking direction. There's no excuse for any mother, wife, sister, cousin, or aunt not doing "her bit" for the country this summer.

One of the Prettiest Brides of the Season.

The bride is queen this month. Mrs. Trude Alfred Wiehe is one of the prettiest and most charming of the season's brides. The wedding ceremony was performed the other day and was followed by a reception at the Blackstone hotel. Mrs. Wiehe was Miss Nancy McDonald and is the daughter of Mrs. Malcolm McDonald of 949 Foster avenue.

ART
By Louise James Bargelt

NOW we have the Independents at the Arts club! A hocus pocus they are of everything freakish, a ginger bread assortment of isms, a crazy quilt patching of colors, a burlesque artistic in which now and again amid their Cimmerian ravings one glimpses rare glimmerings of something worth while.

Once the doubtful pleasure was mine of viewing the Independents in their Paris salon. A moulin rouge in art circles, that lively vaudeville exhibit was thronged by Americans and English and eschewed by all Frenchmen of sane mind and inclination. Doubtless they recall too clearly its origin; how Napoleon III., with his throne shaking beneath him, placated a vast number of mad men by ordering for them a special gallery in the same stately hall wherein dwelt the national salon; where, unmolested by juries and judgments of juries, they have conducted a free for all madhouse from that time to this.

It was more vast of course than this one of ours. The New York display of the Independents this year held some 2500 pictures. At the Arts club there are not more than fifty I should say. But in number only is there restraint. They are quite as weird and quite as over-radical and quite as representative of our present modernism gone to seed as one possibly could find in Paris or in New York.

Detail I will spare you. There is a female nude at which the spirit of a Venus de Milo would shudder and take flight. It is valued at a thousand dollars! And in Paris at a recent sale a Cezanne was auctioned at 100 francs and a Puvis de Chevannes was let go at a trifle less!

Fain with Madame Roland do we wail, "Liberty, what crimes are committed in thy name!"

The proposed tariff by the government of 10 per cent on all art is being vociferously discussed in New York, pro and con. A consensus of opinions gleaned from many different sources resulted in a preponderance of opinion in favor of the tariff during wartime only—this last being especially stated in each instance, as if the government, once having levied the tax, might not see fit to remove it when the exegencies of the situation no longer made it imperative.

Mr. Knoedler of the Knoedler galleries opposes it on the ground that during this war we have become the world's art mart, submarine terrors notwithstanding. He cites the reason for England's having held supremacy as an art center for so long as being due entirely to the fact that she has allowed all art work to come to her free of tax. He claims that if during the Napoleonic era she had levied duties she would not have received a number of famous collections she obtained at that time.

The majority of men interested in art, commercially and otherwise, say that it is a patriotic thing to do and that 10 per cent is by no means a prohibitive tax. They would protest against it strenuously, however, as a permanent measure, arguing that art is not a luxury but an education and a benefit for the most part to the country as a whole through the museums and galleries.

A rather unique suggestion was to the effect that the masters of old art should be exempt and that only our new art and modern artists' work should be subject to the tax.

At the City club there are a large number of artists represented, including Oliver Dennett Grover, Alfred Juergens, Carl Kraft, Anna Stacey, and Wilson E. Irvine. The Municipal Art league and the commission for the encouragement of local art have placed them there.

It was as far back as 1902 that the Municipal Art league voted to establish a municipal art gallery, this gallery to be made up of the works of artists who have been active and useful in the art life of Chicago. Encouragement in this way was given to pieces of art which were worthy of public display.

Stirling Calder, one of the best known American sculptors, is starting a movement for the extension and improvement of sculpture in this country. We are just beginning, he says, to sense the vast possibilities within our reach for the beautifying of our homes, our cities, our parks, and our gardens.

He does not believe that the war is going to hinder this movement, but rather is going to strengthen our creative spirit, drive us from our complacency, and give us such a spiritual shock that we will do great things in the years to come.

Here in Chicago the Harrison Technical High school is doing a great deal of good along this line. The students of high school age are the workers of tomorrow, and any education in the matter of higher ideals for public buildings and better homes and improved public conditions generally will react on conditions in the immediate future.

The practical and the æsthetic side of the student is developed in the architectural classes at the school. The school is located near big tracts of land, which are in the not distant future to be turned into subdivisions for building purposes, so that any enlightenment in the minds of the pupils will result in practical improvement in house construction of all sorts.

Mrs. Frank M. Fulton
MOFFETT PHOTO

Mrs. Frank M. Fulton is the newly elected commander of the Continental council of the Illinois Colony club.

George Grey Barnard is completing a statue of Isadora Duncan in her famous pose, "The Marseillaise," which is taken from her dance by that name. When it is completed it will be placed in a public square in Paris.

There is no stirring news at the Art institute right now. The Zuloaga exhibit has gone to St. Louis, and so has the Rotary collection of water colors and pastels. The war posters have been removed and the regular collection of Whistler prints put in their place.

It will be of interest to Chicagoans to learn that according to recent statistics the Art institute attracts more visitors annually than any other gallery in America, with the exception, perhaps, of the Washington gallery. And it is far richer in its possession of fine pictures than the public as a whole has any real knowledge. From the Dutch school there is Frans Hals' picture of his son, a typical character study, and a fine Rembrandt, "The Portrait of a Girl." Van Ruisdael is splendidly represented in "The Castle" and Hobbema by "The Water Mill." Then, too, there are originals by Rubens and Van Dyck and a sunshiny Sorolla and some excellent Inness landscapes—Inness, who loved the landscape so passionately and who believed so sincerely in its pwer to convey human sentiment. Besides these there is Breton's most popular picture, "The Song of the Lark," and a Millet and a Troyon, and "The Beggar," by Edouard Manet, this last illustrating the powerful impressionistic realism for which Manet is so famous.

The loan collections of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick and of Mr. Butler have just been hung in the annex of the Art institute.

This coming summer, while there will be few current exhibitions, there are to be a number of especially fine loan collections. These loan collections at the institute are always a real joy, and from all hints they are to be finer than ever this season.

Enlist in Your Kitchen

You women of America whose hearts beat high with patriotism—you women who would serve your country in its hour of need—you can enlist today, right in your own kitchen, and "do your bit."

The health, strength, vitality and fighting power of the nation are just a kitchen question and determined by the women of America.

All achievement comes from man-power—man-power alone.

Man-power comes from nourishment—food properly selected, properly balanced, properly cooked.

The kitchen, then, is the power plant of the family and the nation.

The kitchen furnishes the man-power upon which we depend.

War or peace, you should know what is going on in your kitchen; what is going in—what is going out.

If you would serve your country best, check up on what you feed your family.

Are you sending your breadwinners to their work with all the vigor and the strength you can give them?

Are you sending your children to school properly fed, satisfying not only their hunger, but stimulating their growth?

Make sure of that. It is the most dignified work you can do, especially at this time. Stop waste. Study man-feeding. See to it that every dollar you spend procures for you the greatest food and energy value obtainable. And then you will find that

Butter Is Supreme

No other food which can and should be eaten with every meal furnishes equal value for every dime expended.

BUTTER is the foundation-stone of every good, efficient kitchen.

The fat you use in your kitchen affects the value, the digestibility and the assimilability of every food you serve.

Do you know that the fate of Germany may be determined by the question of FAT? Have you read the pathetic appeal of Field-Marshal von Hindenburg to the German Reichstag?

He cries for fat—fat—fat—FAT for his soldiers and FAT for his weakened people.

That will help you to realize the great importance of fat. And among fats BUTTER IS KING. It has no equal. It stands absolutely alone, at the very head of the list of fats, in desirability and, its unmatchable value considered, in cheapness.

BUTTER—and BUTTER alone among fats melts in the mouth—at less than body-heat.

Fats of low melting-point are more digestible and capable of more complete assimilation than those of high melting-point. Besides—

BUTTER—as well as Milk—contains a puzzling element, as yet unknown and unnamed, which makes the young grow.

Spare BUTTER and you stint strength—with your men-folks.

Spare BUTTER and you stunt growth—with your children.

Enlist in your kitchen. Every unit of health, strength and growth coming from your kitchen is service to your country—now and all the time.

Mobilize your pantry. Study fats. Refuse to be satisfied with fats that are fats and fry but lack the indispensable qualities of maintaining health and growth.

As you revise and improve your system of man-feeding you will cook only with BUTTER and make as the fundamental principle of your kitchen and your cooking the indisputable slogan:

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR BUTTER

NATIONAL DAIRY COUNCIL
130 North Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

This Council is composed of 280,000 dairymen, dairy cattle breeders and representatives of all allied dairy interests. Its purposes are to build a greater and better American dairy agriculture—resulting in improved soil-fertility and better farm life—to encourage every American consumer to have a keener appreciation (like European nations) of the high food value of dairy products. The council believes its mission is patriotic.

A wider use of dairy products on the tables and in the kitchens of our American homes will mean a healthier and cheaper fed nation. Our slogans are: "Drink and use more milk." "Eat and cook with more butter." "Ice cream is not alone an excellent dessert, but a real food." "Cheese is the staff of life of many nations; why not in U. S. A.?" "Dairy products—palatable, nourishing, economical—are Nature's best food."

Suggestion for Grocers, Delicatessen, Butter and Egg Stores: Keep this advt. posted on your window for a week. Watch your butter business grow.

SERMONS AND SERVICES IN CHICAGO CHURCHES TODAY.

Bishop of China Preaches Today at First Methodist

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

BISHOP JAMES W. BASHFORD of Pekin, China, will preach the baccalaureate sermon of the Garrett Biblical institute today at 10:30 o'clock in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Evanston. In the evening he will deliver the annual missionary address. He will also lecture tomorrow and Tuesday in connection with the commencement exercises of the institute.

Bishop Bashford has spent thirteen years as one of the two Methodist Episcopal bishops of China. It was he who secured the cabling of the message to the United States and all countries of the world of the request of Yuan Shi Kai, the late premier, that the Christians of all nations should pray for the new Chinese republic, which had then just been established. Bishop Bashford declares the Chinese republic gives promise of permanence because the Chinese have been long accustomed to local self-government.

The bishop before his election to the episcopacy was the president of Ohio Wesleyan university.

Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. M. C. Ranseen, D. D., president of the Augustana Illinois conference, and the Rev. Gottfred Nelson of the Trinity Lutheran church, Seminary and Barry avenues. Six other pastors and Ald. O. L. Watson and Ald. J. C. Kennedy are announced to give greetings. The new church was organized last February.

Dr. Andreen was decorated by King Gustav V. of Sweden in 1911 with the insignia of the royal order of Vasa for services as president of the Swedish-American relief committee in connection with the San Francisco earthquake and fire in 1906. He was for ten years a professor in Upsala college, New York, and was given the degree of doctor of divinity in 1908 by Wittenberg college. He was a pastor in Pittsburgh, Pa., and San Francisco, Cal., and for a short time in Evanston, Ill., before coming to Chicago.

The seventy-fifth anniversary of the Second Presbyterian church, Twentieth street and Michigan avenue, occurs today. In the morning there will be a communion service and in the evening one in which the pastor, the Rev. Charles F. Wishart, will deliver an historical address, "Seventy-five Years Ago in Chicago," and special music will be rendered. A more formal and complete celebration of the diamond jubilee will be held in the fall, when the new parish house will be completed.

The first building of the Second Presbyterian church was located on the south side of Randolph street, eighty feet east of Clark street. It was erected in 1842. When the second building was erected on the corner of Wabash avenue and Washington street, the first building was moved to Sixteenth street and used as a station by the Illinois Central railroad. The second building was erected in 1857, and was known as the "Spotted" church, being built of limestone. This building was destroyed in the Chicago fire of 1871.

The present building was erected in 1872, in part from the stones of the building destroyed in the great fire. The new parish house which will be opened in connection with the diamond jubilee celebration in the fall is being constructed on the north and west side of the church building, and is in part a remodeling of the social rooms of the church.

The first pastor of the church was the Rev. Robert W. Patterson, D. D., now deceased, who served the Second church for nearly thirty-two years and then became a professor in the McCormick Theological seminary. Other pastors were the Rev. Simon J. McPherson, the Rev. Pleasant Hunter, the Rev. John Balcom Shaw, and the present pastor, Dr. Wishart.

Descendants of at least six of those who were members of the church in the early '40s are still in the church. Among the number are Miss Virginia Dunham and the sons and daughters of Mrs. Kirk Hawes, who was a sister of Miss Dunham; Howard Henderson, Mrs. Helen S. Isham, Mrs. Malcolm Mitchell, Mrs. Bessie Hoard, Mrs. F. W. Tourtellotte and her son, Frederick J. Tourtellotte; Mrs. William Wirth Smith and her daughter, Miss Lavinia Smith. Among those who are well known and who have been long identified with the church are Mrs. T. B. Blackstone, Mrs. William Blair, and Mrs. G. M. Pullman, mother of the wife of Gov. Lowden.

CARELESS USE OF SOAP SPOILS THE HAIR

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—Advertisement.

Rich Women Make Rear Platform Plea to Conserve Food

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Everybody is talking about the resourcefulness displayed by society women in helping in the war work. They have thought of practical things to do, which have not yet occurred to their English sisters, whose country has been at war for nearly three years.

For instance, down on Long Island a special committee, consisting of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Jr., Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden, Mrs. J. Watson Webb, Mrs. Ralph Peters, Mrs. George W. Pierpont, and Mrs. H. B. Fullerton, made a tour on a special train with the purpose of arousing the rural population to the perils of the food shortage and the need for the conservation of our supply. The women made speeches from the rear platform of the train and their slogans were "Can or Collapse" and "Preserve or Perish." People got to calling their train the Women's Canning special. Mrs. Laimbeer and others of the women gave little lectures with instructions and Mrs. Vanderbilt "minded the children" while the mothers of the committee listened to the talks.

Did you hear about the unique fête given by the Washington Square unit of the Women's League for National Service? It coöperated with the canteen division and it gave a fête down on Washington square that will be remembered for many a long day. It was called the neighborhood garden party, and among the palpable features were the wife of Mayor Mitchel carrying a basket of vegetables, Miss Marian Tiffany eating a frankfurter sausage, Miss Marie Dressler auctioning a shower bouquet of cabbages, onions, string beans, and garlic tied with red, white, and blue ribbon, and the Seventh Regiment band playing for debutantes and young society men to dance out of doors. Five thousand visitors were there wending their way about historic Washington square and having a bully good time as their admission fees, which were one vegetable each.

Maybe it sounds rather frivolous for an entertainment given for anything so serious as our awful war. But the time is coming when it is just as well to keep people's minds gay, and besides all that it was the easiest way to call wide attention to the seriousness of international food supplies and to raise a large sum of money for the $100,000 campaign fund of the Women's League for National Service.

Amid resounding merriment the vegetables were auctioned by Miss Marie Dressler and they brought prices which would surprise the modest turnip, parsnip, and radish. They brought prices which these vegetables would scarcely command in a time of famine. Yes, it may be frivolous, but it is just as well to let people frivol as long as they may with amiable intent and in a good cause.

Boost Liberty Bond Sales.

Army cooking is one of the subjects in which women are interesting themselves. Ten thousand cooks are said to be needed for the army and the smart set from its circumscribed number of four hundred is getting ready to furnish a good many of these. Courses of training in preparing army food are being given and such well known young women of New York are taking them as Mrs. Lindley Hoffman Chapin, Mrs. Duran Bonnet, and Mrs. Vivian Spencer.

Another branch of service is a brand new one for women indeed. They are turning out to solicit buyers for the Liberty loan bonds. Thousands of letters have been sent out by members of the four hundred, coöperating with suffrage societies, and if we have money to carry on the war we can truthfully say—indeed it will be as little as Mr. McAdoo and other gentlemen of the cabinet can admit—that the women of the country have helped raise it.

By the way, did you know that Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, a former townswoman of yours, and the wife of the president of the National City bank of New York, has been appointed by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo as a member of the federal women's committee to help float the Liberty war loan? She has been down in Washington to help organize the work of the new committee and she is up to her eyes in the business of selling war bonds for her country.

Liberty bonds, by the way, are being given as wedding presents now instead of onyx clocks and pickle forks. The innovation seems most welcome to the bride. You know there is always the awful, harrowing unpleasantness (noted so fittingly by Bernard Shaw in his finale of "Man and Superman") of receiving some seven traveling clocks, eight bon-bon dishes, and nobody can tell how many fancy ink wells. With the new fashion this possible disaster has disappeared. No bride cares how many war bonds she gets. Indeed, some of these artless young creatures are suggesting that their fiancés might give them a bond instead of the usual ring, in token of that mystical bond of wedlock into which they are entering.

"Alley Festa" for Red Cross.

Washington square and the Greenwich village section of our city seems to be becoming the seat of our most prominent war activities—at least as far as the smart set is concerned. On June 6, 7, 8, and 9, Macdougal alley, one of the most picturesque of the Greenwich village byways, will be even more so when for the "Alley Festa" it will be transformed into an Italian open air fair with music, dancing, puppet shows, jugglers, acrobats, and restaurants. Mrs. Charles B. Dillingham, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, and Miss Jane Wallach have planned entertainments by theatrical and musical stars and there will be many novelties. Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney is honorary treasurer of the affair, the proceeds of which will go to the Red Cross and other war relief work.

Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, has gone to Plattsburg, N. Y., to pass a few days with Mr. Rumsey.

Mrs. Lydig Hoyt will pass the summer with her mother, Mrs. Jules W. Robbins, at Isleboro, Me.

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr. have returned from their visit to Virginia.

Miss Anne Morgan, accompanied by Miss Elsie De Wolfe, has sailed for France to take up work in behalf of the fund for wounded French soldiers.

Dr. Albert S. Gray Recommends Corsets

if they are correctly fitted. In all America there is no corps of corsetieres who have been so carefully trained or have had equal practical fitting experience as ours. Time and again the foremost physicians thank us for the aid our expert fitting service brings their patients—still the fitting service is free. In the Daily News of May 24, Dr. Gray, in reply to an inquiry, said:

> A vast number of these so-called "adhesion pains" following childbirth are due to a drag on the normal tissues and attachments, by reason of a relaxation of the abdominal muscles, a condition known as enteroptosis and having origin in a general physical weakness. Constipation itself may be either a result of or a factor in the development of this condition. The prior existence of a chronic constipation is in itself proof of habitual dietetic errors and of considerable physical impairment. The remedy is to build up the physical strength and resistance of the body by a suitable diet and general hygiene, meantime supporting the relaxed tissues by a correctly fitted corset—and securing a correct body posture by correctly adapted shoes.

The corset that can help women most who are suffering from any form of enteroptosis is the famous Nemo Wonderlift Corset, for its patented features support the abdominal walls and keep the kidneys, intestines, stomach and liver from sagging. It is well named the "Wonderlift." It helps women to help themselves—to conserve their health and in many cases regain it when lost. The slender woman must remember that she has the same organs to support as her stout sister. Many times that is the reason she is nervous and thin. She needs support. The Wonderlift brings the needed support and fashionable figure. The Wonderlift is made in five models—for every type of figure.

No. 557—For the extremely slender figure with prominent hip bones.
No. 554—For the short stout figure.
No. 555—For the tall stout figure.
No. 556—For the medium figure.
No. 553—For the very short stout figure.

A.A.A. Urges War Road; Plans Week for Liberty Loan

CALLING for the acceleration and not the cessation of road building because of war conditions, the American Automobile association at its annual meeting the other day urged the construction of a marginal military highway around the entire country, with the first section extending from Calais, Me., to the head of the Chesapeake bay. Army head agree that the upper Atlantic coast should receive priority of attention for reasons which are generally recognized.

In their session at Cleveland the organized motorists thus expressed the roads policy for which they will contend:

Whereas, There is a widespread tendency to defer highway construction due to the unusual conditions in the material and labor market arising from the war; and,

Whereas, The council of national defense has called upon the nation not to curtail but rather to expand general business, and particularly to continue highway building; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Automobile association urge upon all highway officials—town, county, state and national—to continue without abatement the improvement of the public highways, as wartime conditions particularly emphasize the importance and need of good roads.

Referring to military marginal roads resolutions were passed as follows:

Whereas, Military necessities require a durably constructed and well developed system of marginal highways near and approximately parallel to the north, east, south, and west boundaries of the United States and also require the improvement of the main radial roads intersecting such marginal highways; and,

Whereas, The existing federal aid road act provides, in part at least, for the construction and maintenance of the necessary radial roads through coördinated efforts of federal and state officials, but could not within any reasonable time complete the marginal roads which are of the utmost immediate importance, especially the northerly part of the eastern marginal road; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Automobile association urge upon congress the need of legislation to provide for a system of military marginal roads to be constructed and maintained at national expense.

Realizing that the financial sinews of war must be strengthened by a countrywide sale of bonds, the A. A. A. directors unanimously decided to carry out a Liberty Loan Automobile week, beginning Monday, June 11. The details will be decided upon and announced after consultation with the secretary of the treasury.

Dr. H. M. Rowe of Maryland was continued in the A. A. A. presidential office and Secretary John N. Brooks of Connecticut and Treasurer H. A. Bonnell of New Jersey succeeded themselves, the latter in his tenth year as the custodian of the funds. Executive Chairman A. G. Batchelder was also reëlected, this time to a four year term. These vice presidents were renamed: Ralph W. Smith, Colorado; H. J. Clark, Minnesota; P. J. Walker, California; David Jameson, Pennsylvania, and Preston Belvin, Virginia. Royal R. Scott of Ohio and J. E. Gavin of Indiana figured as the newcomers to the list. Former Presidents Robert P. Hooper of Pennsylvania and Laurens Enos of New York were among the delegates present from twenty different states.

Though a half dozen cities sought the yearly meeting, the directors considered Washington the logical place for the next gathering.

IN THE WILDS

Where America's Most Picturesque Motor Road Will Be Dedicated This Week.

Year by year the automobile brings the mountains and the wilderness nearer. On the bridge in the foreground impressive ceremonies are to be held next Thursday dedicating the magnificent new Columbia River highway and opening it officially to the tourist travel of the United States. The spot is not far from Portland, Ore., and the plunging water in the background is that of Multomah falls, 740 feet high and the second highest in the country.

The highway probably is the most picturesque motor drive in America. It winds for ninety-one miles through the hitherto inaccessible Columbia river gorge from Portland to the Dalles, Ore.; most of the way over fine concrete and macadam. The roadway is carved, for the most part, from the sides of the mountains, in many places clinging to cliffs hundreds of feet above the river. At one point a view of thirty-five miles is to be had, up or down the river, and from here the road spirals downward in a triple figure 8, descending 600 feet within an area of forty acres. Dry masonry walls and many high bridges contribute to the highway's distinction as a remarkable road engineering feat.

Mechanics for War Duty.

The Cadillac Motor Car company, Packard Motor Car company, Hudson Motor Car company, Ford Motor company, Studebaker corporation, Chalmers Motor company, Continental Motors corporation, and the Northway Motors company will select certain mechanics from their organizations to complete the plan of the United States government to send expert mechanics for a course of extensive training in the airplane factories of France.

The Cadillac Motor Car company also has been requested to furnish two combination chauffeurs and mechanics to drive cars for the marine corps in France. The two drivers will be enrolled for the term of the war with the rank of sergeant. They will receive $38 a month with $15 for extras and 20 per cent additional for foreign service. Their board, clothes, and transportation will be furnished by the government.

The mechanics going to the airplane factories will receive $4 a day and transportation and will retain a civilian status.

France May Stop Motor Traffic to Saie Gasoline

ALL motor traffic not necessary for national defense will be forbidden in France, if the recommendation of the official gasoline saving committee is carried into effect. This committee has been appointed by the government to deal with the whole question of gasoline, kerosene and oil supplies throughout France.

A few exceptions are provided for in the proposed restrictive scheme which has been sent up to the government for signature. It is intended to leave in use a certain number of taxicabs, motor omnibuses, senators' cars and cars belonging to members of the diplomatic corps.

This is the first time since the outbreak of the war that restrictive measures have been proposed against motor cars in France. Gasoline has increased in price, but this is due entirely to higher freight and insurance.

Louis Renault, president of the car manufacturers' syndicate, is heading a protest against the proposed restriction. He points out that private car traffic has been reduced to a minimum by reason of the requisition of cars and the mobilization of drivers.

Intercity Route Announced.

A detailed schedule for the intercity team reliability run to be held in July was agreed upon last week at the American Automobile association's meeting in Cleveland. The schedule is:

First day—Buffalo to Elmira, 188.4 miles, with Danville noon control. All of the road on the first day's journey is improved state road except 24.1 miles of dirt road between Danville and Elmira.

Second day—Elmira to Syracuse, 209.6 miles; Norwich noon control. All of the second day mileage is state road except 21.9 miles, which is divided so that 11.9 miles will be traveled in the morning and ten miles in the afternoon.

Thrid day—Syracuse to Clarence county club, 173.2 miles; Rochester noon control. This is all state road.

Hotel and garage service has been investigated and arranged for. Each contestant will have to provide an observer in a car other than the contestant. There will be brake tests made the day before the run for safety purposes. Fifty entries have been received thus far. These include Chicago, ten cars; Indiana, five; Detroit, ten; New York, ten; Rochester, five; Buffalo, ten.

Buying Less Steel.

The Chicago office of the Iron Age has received the following telegram from New York:

"The expected falling off in consumption of steel for automobiles has come. Makers of pleasure cars are curtailing operations and in some cases have asked for the holding up of shipments. So far as the mills are concerned, such requests are welcome, especially by makers of sheets and bars. At the same time, government buying of motor trucks, more than 70,000 being under inquiry, will make a heavy demand for steel. One inquiry has appeared for 20,000 tons of base bands for rims.

"The enormous volume of the government's purchases of steel, those now under final negotiation, and those expected in the near future, tends to put prices higher for the manufacturing consumer. Sheets are a conspicuous example, the government's requirements turning out to be much greater than early estimates. The week's advance here has been about $5 per ton, but government orders are taken at 15 to 20 per cent below the recent market."

Exhaust Echoes

Motor trucks, at least, cannot be classed as luxuries, in the opinion of Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Car company. In a statement to Senator F. M. Simmons, chairman of the senate committee on finance, Mr. Macauley submitted this view the other day: "Your committee never heard of a manufacturer of trucks that has gotten rich out of it. No one ever took a joy ride in a truck. It is as far removed from being a luxury as is a wheelbarrow. What, then, is the reason for subjecting trucks to a special tax? Trucks are made to take care of the business of the nation. Trucks saved Verdun to the allies. Do not, by harsh taxation, discourage the sale of trucks."

The principle of cord construction, long used in tire casings, is now being applied to tubes with what is declared to be a considerable degree of success by the Palmer Tire and Rubber company of St. Joseph, Mich. The sturdy fabric is designed to permit the tube to bridge over a bruise or stone cut, assuming the extra strain at the vital points and preventing the blowout that would come otherwise. Greatly increased service for casings is claimed.

The Elgin Motor Car corporation announces the purchase of additional factory space in a building at Archer avenue and Sixty-first street, just west of the present plant.

Drivers of the Saxon, which is blazing a trail around the boundaries of the United States, report that, in the first 6,000 miles of the journey, an average of twenty-six miles to the gallon of gasoline has been maintained. The car has traversed some of the roughest roads in the United States and has met some of the worst conceivable weather conditions.

J. B. Thomas is a claimant for the honor of being the first Chicagoan to make the run from Chicago to Los Angeles this year. He started last week in a new Pathfinder touring roadster, announcing that he plans to follow the Lincoln highway the entire distance. If he does he will get lost, for the Lincoln highway does not run to Los Angeles.

Cooled oil is the newest wrinkle in motordom. Lieut. Crossman introduced the idea to Indianapolis in 1914 in a Sunbeam racing car, but it was never widely adopted. Now Ray Harroun, himself a former racing driver, has incorporated it in the new light car which bears his name. The perfected cooler is of aluminum and has an inconspicuous position on the left hand side of the crank case, taking the oil at the point of its circuit where it is hottest and lowering its temperature to a considerable degree.

"Many of the improvements on the new Mitchell can be traced back to a suggestion made by some woman," says John W. Bate. "In the details of the car the fine Italian hand of milady has been shown. Men appreciated and could handle the old powerful, rough and ready car, whose gears shifted only after a mighty effort and whose springs were there merely to save the machinery from being jolted too much. But as women began to motor and drive themselves they began to demand more comfort, more ease of operation, and many little fastidious matters that have gradually brought the motor car out of its embryonic state."

With gasoline mileage coming into the limelight as perhaps the most discussed motoring topic of the moment, S. E. Ackerman, sales manager of the Franklin Automobile company, takes occasion to bring to light again a little record made in 1913. At that time a four cylinder Franklin roadster, under the supervision of Herbert Chase of the Automobile Club of America, started out to run as far as possible on one gallon, and made—don't faint—83.5 miles!

An automobile magazine for farmers is forthcoming under the title of Agrimotor Magazine. It is to be edited in Chicago by Henry Farrington, a member of the Society of Automotive Engineers and a veteran of the automobile truck industry.

Otto C. Owen, who sells the Liberty in Chicago, considers Homer L. Heath, manager of the University of Michigan union, a regular guy. Mr. Heath recently felt the need of an automobile in his work, campaigning for a new clubhouse, but hesitated because he has only one arm. He tried a Liberty, however, found he could start in second speed and shift to third and back with his foot—and bought the car. Now he drives daily, using his left hand to steer and his right foot for shifting gears.

Grace accomplishes the thing with least outlay of energy

That which we call "beauty of motion" is motion with no power lost or misapplied.

Clumsiness is nothing but wasted force.

And true efficiency is never gained until all waste is eliminated.

To develop a motor that would make the utmost use of every particle of gasoline, it became imperative to lessen the size of the cylinders employed and multiply the number of explosions.

And the result? The powerful, economical Twin-six.

The smooth-running might of this motor is due to its twelve-fold division of fuel charges, merging multiplied impulses into a continuous torrent of power.

In thirty-three months of desperate fighting for mastery of the air, European motor-makers have demonstrated beyond question that the twelve-cylinder engine is the most dependable and economical of power plants.

To this basic "beauty of performance" Packard beauty of line and finish are fitting and enduring accompaniments.

Scenic Beauty in Storied Trails of Rock River Valley

By John De Long.

ASK almost any well posted Illinois motorist what the two principal scenic districts of this part of the state are and he will tell you the Fox river and Rock river valleys. Even the most loyal Illini must admit that the commonwealth in which we live, move, and have our being is rather lacking in the scenic attractions with which many of the other states are blessed. But in the valleys of the Fox and the Rock we have something really worth while.

For the motorist who cares to devote two or three days to a tour the one outlined on the accompanying map will well repay him for traveling over the 234 miles necessary to complete the jaunt. The roads average up well, some of the finest farming sections of the state are traversed on the way to the Rock river, and the scenery along the banks of the historic stream is as pleasing as any to be found in the central west. Moreover, hotel and garage accommodations along the route are first class. The itinerary includes Elgin, Rockford, Oregon, Grand Detour, and Dixon, at which point the Lincoln highway is picked up and followed most of the distance back to Chicago.

Leaving the city via Jackson and Washington boulevards, the route runs west through Maywood and over the Grant highway to Elgin, Belvidere, and Rockford. Belvidere, which is one of the oldest cities in northern Illinois, is beautifully situated on the banks of the Kishwaunee river, which intersects the place. Rockford, rightly termed the Forest city, is the largest place on Rock river and has grown from a fur trading post of frontier days to a thriving manufacturing city of 50,000 population. The tourist will find two routes leading from Rockford to Dixon, but, owing to its scenic attractions, the road along the river is by all means the best. This route follows the Blackhawk trail and is rich in picturesque and historical interest. The road is not quite as good as the Ridge road that runs farther away from the river, but will be found all right in dry weather.

The first town after leaving Rockford is Byron, where the two Rockford-Dixon routes meet. It is about nine miles beyond Byron that one gets the first glimpse of the famous Blackhawk statue that stands as a gigantic and mute sentinel on the opposite bank of the river. This statue, which was designed by Lorado Taft, was unveiled on July 1, 1911. It is of concrete and is seventy-five feet in height. This impressive and heroic figure stands on the brink of Eagle's Nest bluff, where is located an artist's colony, including Lorado Taft, Charles Francis Brown, Ralph Clarkson, and Hamlin Garland. These men and many others maintain summer homes that are perched on the river bluffs, many of which are several hundred feet in height. Under one of these bluffs is a gnarled cedar tree said to be 1,000 years old—the oldest, in fact, in the United States, since Hartford's famous Charter Oak has been destroyed.

Near Oregon, the county seat of Ogle county, are located Castle rock and Hotel rock, so named on account of their peculiar formations. Just west of Oregon is a pine forest, said to be the only tract of native pine woods remaining in the state. Oregon gains additional distinction as the home of Gov. Frank O. Lowden, whose Sinnissippi farm, one of the finest in Illinois, is located outside the town. Among the other attractions boasted of by this quaint little place nestling below the bluffs of the river is the Soldiers and Sailors' monument, another group from the master hand of Lorado Taft. Leaving Oregon, one continues along under the towering bluffs and past many picturesque farms through Grand Detour, which also has many scenic attractions.

Dixon, the county seat of Lee county and the point at which the tourist turns his wheel and heads Chicagoward, is another city that has a prominent page in Illinois' history. In 1826 it was but a ferry station on the old Kellogg trail leading from Peoria to the rich Galena lead mines. Abraham Lincoln once related in a speech that he gained his first and only experience as a soldier when he enlisted in a scouting corps at Dixon. Jefferson Davis, Zachary Taylor, and Robert Anderson, the hero of Fort Sumter, were cronies in the pioneer days and used to foregather at Dixon.

From Dixon into Chicago one really needs no guide book, for most of the route follows the Lincoln highway, the familiar red, white, and blue markings of which run as far as Geneva, thirty-seven miles from the city. The return route takes the tourist through Ashton, Rochelle, De Kalb, Geneva, West Chicago, North Glen Ellyn, Lombard, and Maywood and again into Chicago after one of the finest trips to be found in this part of the country.

A. M. Robbins, president of the Centaur Motor company, warns prospective Jeffery purchasers that the present price cannot be guaranteed for long—certainly not after the factory's stock of materials, bought at low prices more than a year ago, is exhausted. "Forty-four motor car manufacturers," says Mr. Robbins, "have raised their prices within the last few months, and in view of the radical increase in the cost of raw materials it is probable that more advances will follow. The Nash Motors company, building 93 per cent of the Jeffery in its own factory, is practically independent of parts makers. So far it has been protected on the material side, too, and is still able to sell at a price fixed in 1916, but in the face of existent conditions it cannot maintain this price indefinitely."

Convicts Build Many Auto Roads: Honor Plan Helps

IN Oklahoma prison road camps are no longer in the experimental stage. They have become an accepted institution in the state. In the central and southwest sections prisoners are building the Ozark trail; in the southeast they are grading the Jefferson highway, and in other districts they are assisting in the local good road movement.

The national committee on prisons and prison labor reports that all counties in Oklahoma are permitted to use as many prisoners as they wish in the building of roads. The county pays the excess cost of their maintenance over the amount which would have been necessary had they remained at the state prison. It is estimated that about thirty counties now have prison squads working on the roads of Oklahoma.

An interesting situation has arisen in Harmon county because the county seat, Hollis, has been left off the Ozark trail. The county is reported to be hindering the road development of the state. The prisoners from McAlister who had been working in the adjoining Greer county have moved into Harmon, where they are continuing the Ozark trail, for which the people of Harmon refuse to pay their share.

The committee reports also that the honor system, which is used in Colorado and other western states in the government of all prisoners on the roads, has proved to be highly effective and has stimulated in the men a willingness to work and a sense of duty which increases the road building efficiency of the state.

During the present national crisis, the committee suggests, the willingness of the convict to do effective work is of great importance, since he can assist in the building of better highways, which will make the transportation of food more easy. The success of the Americans in this war is associated with good roads, over which the products of the west can be carried to the railway centers and from there transported to the armies at the front and to the allied nations.

New Speedway Rushed.

The Philadelphia Speedway association has taken definite steps in the direction of pushing to completion the two mile track at Warminster, Pa. Heretofore the work was carried on from the receipts of incoming members, but this process was found too slow. A meeting was held recently, and by consent of those present the officers of the association were authorized to raise $350,000 to finance and complete the speedway.

NATIONAL INSTINCT.

Autocratic Russia was regarded as one of the resistless forces of the world, not as a government, but as a mass. It moved over the face of the earth, taking in lands and peoples, absorbing races and tribes, reaching from the semi-somnolent life of the far north to the semi-somnolent life of the south.

Military defeats did not stop it. If checked in one direction it appeared moving in another, covering more territory, taking in more peoples.

It was this aspect of inevitability that gave the growth of Russia the aspect of an irresistible mass movement, not an artificially created dynastic scheme, not a conquering government acquiring empire, but a national instinct asserting itself inevitably and irresistibly.

No matter what happened to Russia, Russia grew, and it seemed to be a menace hanging over Scandinavia and even Prussia. But when the people of Russia overthrow the dynasty and endeavor to form their own government, the first announcement of policy declares against annexation.

Finland, with many grievances against autocratic Russia, is given virtual freedom by new Russia. The people who formed the seemingly irresistible mass reveal no instinct at all for movement, no impulse in any direction, no push toward open water, no scheme of growth or development by conquest.

If Finland, for instance, were not so important geographically to Russia that even the idealists know it, a new republic might be the gift of the Russian people to the Finns. They have virtual independence now in spite of that.

The question is whether the present liberal tendencies of the Russian people are real evidences or superficial, whether as conscious acts they have as much value as acts for which the impulse came out of the subconsciousness. Did autocratic Russia, working for centuries in the acquisition of territory and in the extension of its rule over people, represent the real genius and instinct of the Russian people, or does the sincere benevolence of the idealists who now control Russian policies?

National instincts are deep and not always consciously expressed. H. G. Wells explains the inability of the Englishman to understand why he is accused of hypocrisy. Great Britain has subjugated more peoples than any other nation. The Englishman can become more indignant over the invasion of national rights by another nation than any other man on earth.

When he is asked what he is doing in Egypt, in India, in South Africa, and what he is doing and has done in every quarter of the earth, his amazement is complete that any one should ask such questions. He is not doing anything in Egypt. He did not consciously do anything there or in India or anywhere.

A man named Clive did something in India, and something happened, and there it is, but the Englishman did not do it. He did not will it and it is not on his conscience. Yet the national instinct of England was found in Clive, it was found in what happened, and it is found in India today.

National instinct gets expression outside of national consciousness. A tribe may gather to discuss a conquest, but a nation expresses itself indirectly. The American people, as a people, did not frame any policy which has resulted in the extension of the American republic, and yet it is today an expression of American instinct.

The pioneers and explorers, few in the mass, were conscious of their own personal desires to push into the wilderness, and statesmen were conscious of the policy demanding that frontiers be pushed ahead, but the people did not take part in these movements until they were in part accomplished.

The conscious will of the nation may, at any time, be moral and adverse to the use of force to acquire territory and expand. The instinct of the nation may be unmoral and find expression in force without the people deliberately willing the process.

It is the conscious will of the Russian people, as now expressed, that Finland shall be free and that Russia's movement over land shall stop. But what has made Russia was probably a truer expression of the Russian instinct than is the desire to set Finland free.

If there had been a conscious will in the United States for the acquisition of Mexico, it would be occupied by Americans now; but it may be that there will come a man who will treat Mexican disorders in a new fashion. And when Americans are found to have extended their borders down to the Panama canal, it will then be regarded as an inevitable event in American development and a revelation of American instinct.

WAR IS WAR.

"Elsewhere the night was calm"—which means that in five minute intervals artillery was dropping shells on the trenches. "The enemy occupied some trench elements"—which means that mines had been exploded and that the defenders were in pieces. The official report has a humane and benevolent detachment from the scene.

"Nothing of special interest occurred during the day"—which means that the trenches were under constant shell fire. A shell is nothing of special interest even when, exploding, it occupies a trench element. "We repulsed four different attacks after a struggle of extreme severity." The official recorder allows a touch of color in the picture, but nothing that reveals the field over which four different attacks went.

"British casualties as published in May show a total of 5,902 officers and 106,331 men." That fills out the canvas. The Somme drive accounted for [illegible],169 British officers and men. A year ago there was a keener perception of what war meant. The Somme drive was an appalling effort, visualized in horror as such. The fighting now is even more severe, but the capacity for horror is limited. The mind protects itself by failing to perceive. War is war, but even it will be glossed over in the numbing of the perceptive processes.

AMERICANIZING THE CARIBBEANS.

Prof. William R. Sheppard suggests that when the war is over we turn in our bill, and it is likely that we shall: "John Bull and Marianne, to Uncle Sam, Dr., for Services Rendered." Below that superscription will figure a list of English and French Caribbean islands.

We should stretch it a trifle ourselves. We should not only ask France for Guadaloupe, Martinique, Marigot, etc., and Great Britain for Jamaica, Trinidad, Bermuda, Dominica, Barbados, Grenada, and St. Lucia; we should also take the Bahamas. We should make the Caribbean an American lake. We should protect even the approaches to the Caribbean. We should do this in order to protect the Panama canal. Trade considerations are insignificant by comparison. The great point is to protect the canal. If Britain wants coaling stations in the Caribbean, let Britain have them, that is, if Britain will join us in a navy alliance.

Nations go into war with fine, disinterested protestations. They come out hard-headed and materialistic. We are like other nations. It is right that we should be.

At least one of our war aims, then, will be the Americanization of the Caribbean and its approaches as a means of protecting the Panama canal. We have Porto Rico now. Practically, we have Cuba, Haiti, and Santo Domingo. By right of purchase we have the Danish West Indies. All the French islands and all the British islands down yonder should be ours for services rendered. It is not a large bill. As such affairs go, it is remarkably reasonable. France demanded Savoy for helping to free Italy. France got it, although Savoy included the burial place of the Italian royal dynasty.

DEADLY CLEMENCY.

Gen. James Oakes was acting assistant provost marshal general for Illinois in the civil war, and dealt with the conditions caused by the draft. His report, made in 1865 to the provost marshal general, is printed in the current Illinois Law Review.

The mistakes the government made in applying the draft are notorious, and they stand out clearly in Gen. Oakes' report. His administration had suffered and he perceived clearly the causes of the unjust and ineffective application of conscription. One point he emphasizes. The government by leniency in the beginning made its troubles ten times more numerous.

"Let the grim but indispensable code of war be enforced by a few examples of death by musketry or hemp," he says, "and the lesson will not need to be repeated, while mere paper penalties soon come to be disregarded and despised. I state these things so that if we have another war the government may start right—put deserters to death, enforce military law, strike hard blows at the outset, tone up the national mind at once to a realization that war is war, and to be sure that such a policy will be indorsed and sustained by the people."

Gen. Oakes was confident that if military penalties had been imposed at the beginning the people would have sustained the action, and that the subsequent scandals of desertion, bounty jumping, substitute brokers, draft resistance, etc.—a record which arouses wonder that the north finished up the war as soon as it did—would not have been possible.

Leniency made the trouble which a merciful severity would have prevented. Gen. Oakes says that the clemency of the government resulted in incalculable evil, and after the first mistakes were made it became impossible to remedy it. It was too late. The offenders, encouraged by leniency, grew in numbers. It was impossible to hang or shoot all of them, "and so none were shot or hung, and thus the terrible evil went on with increasing rapidity to the end."

The great curse was desertion, but the cause of all the trouble was leniency, misconceived and misapplied. Gen. Oakes hoped the nation would see its mistake. We hope it has and that men who set themselves against military laws now will be dealt with in military fashion.

Their crime will not be a civil crime. It will be a military crime. The punishment for serious military crimes in time of war is death.

The firing squad will be more merciful than the penitentiary and clemency will be more deadly than severity.

A PROBLEM IN CANNING.

[From the Minneapolis Journal.]

Solomon noted in the proverbs that "the destruction of the poor is their poverty," and the aphorism holds as true today as it ever did. It is exemplified in as homely a matter as the canning of fruit and vegetables, and in the preservation of other foods.

For example, a housewife in Cleveland attempted to give advice as to canning food to the woman who was washing for her. She was telling how beans and other things, soon to be cheap, might be canned for the winter months when vegetables were high. The washwoman heard her patiently and then made this pertinent remark:

"And where shall I keep these canned things after they are put up? If I keep them in the kitchen where there is a fire they will spoil. If I keep them in my bedroom they will freeze."

In the old days every cellar was a vegetable cellar. Today, if there is a basement, it is usually heated by the furnace to a point where vegetables will not keep. Vegetable cellars are only for the well-to-do, and many of these live in flats or apartments where the preservation of vegetables is impossible.

Hence, to many families the giving of advice regarding the preservation of foods or the laying in of stocks of vegetables when they are cheap is quite superfluous. They cannot do it. They must live from hand to mouth. And that is one of the reasons for the higher cost of living today, compared with the cost to our grandparents.

Possibly fortunate families with commodious vegetable cellars may be willing to share their space with less fortunate neighbors or employés. But who is to organize a work like that?

Proper private storage of food supplies during the winter months—here is one of the phases of the food preservation campaign that should be taken up while there is yet time.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1917: By the Brentwood Co.]

AN extraordinary proposal has been put forward for the transfer of the seat of the papacy from Rome to Jerusalem on the conclusion of the present war. Extravagant as is the project, it has received a considerable amount of public attention.

People, however, seem to lose sight of the fact that, in the first place, there may be no Jerusalem by the time the war comes to an end, since the Germans and Turks have threatened to raze the Holy City to the ground if compelled to abandon it.

Then, too, there is no reason whatsoever to believe that the Roman Catholic church would be willing to transfer the seat of its government, where it has been established for nearly 2,000 years, to a corner of the world so remote and so relatively inaccessible as Jerusalem. Even the Italian government would object to it, although it offers a solution of the so-called Roman question. For the presence of the papacy at Rome brings many foreigners and much money, and consequent prosperity to Italy.

Finally, there are already two kings of Jerusalem in existence, both of them Roman Catholics, who might be unwilling to share this titular distinction even with the pontiff. The sovereigns in question are the emperor of Austria and the king of Spain, while the late king of Naples and the Two Sicilies also claimed this distinction prior to his dethronement.

According to the masterly "Guide to Diplomatic Practice," recently published by the Rt. Hon. Sir Ernest Satow, England's representative at the international tribunal of The Hague and her delegate to the second peace conference there in 1907, these titles are the "grands titres," as distinguished from the "titres moyens," and the "petits titres" of the monarchs of Spain and the dual empire. The "grands titres" are very seldom used, and when employed in connection with international treaties are in a measure nullified by the insertion of a clause in the document stipulating that the "grands titres ne tirent pas a consequence" (are of no consequence).

This is necessary, since the king of Spain's grands titres include that of king of Gibraltar, which in the case of a treaty with Great Britain would be inadmissible by the latter were it not for this saving clause, since Gibraltar has for nearly 200 years been in the possession of England. In the same way, the grands titres of Alfonso XIII. include that of king of the Two Sicilies, which would be equally embarrassing in the case of a Spanish treaty with Italy, in which latter country the kingdom of the Two Sicilies is now incorporated.

Sir Ernest's work is a most fascinating book and serves to call attention to the extraordinary importance attached, especially in times past, to matters of ceremonial and form. Thus, only a few years before the great revolution in France, at the close of the eighteenth century, the ill fated King Louis XVI. almost embroiled France in war with Russia by refusing to address Catherine the Great as "Imperial" and "Most Christian Majesty."

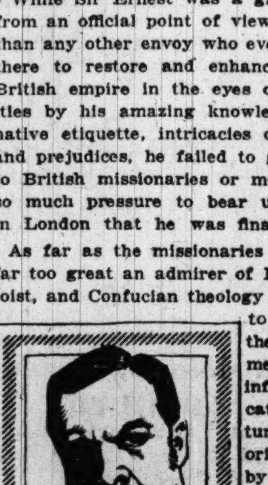
If Napoleon III. involved France in the Crimean war against Russia in 1854 it was largely because Czar Nicholas I., who regarded him as a conspirator and as a usurper, refused to accord to him the title of "brother," used by monarchs in addressing one another. Emperor Nicholas declined to style Napoleon anything but "friend," which led the French ruler to wittily remark to the Russian ambassador during a state ball at the Tuileries, that he appreciated the distinction, since one could choose one's friends but not one's brothers.

Sir Ernest recalls Macaulay's description of the congress at Ryswick, at which "the chief business" of the French and imperial plenipotentiaries was "to watch one another's legs. Neither of them thought it consistent with the dignity of the crown which he served to advance toward the other faster than the other advanced toward him. If, therefore, one of them perceived that he had inadvertently stepped forward too quick he went back to the door and the stately minuet began again."

Sir Ernest is one of the most remarkable officials on the active or retired list of the diplomatic service of the British crown. There is no man living who possesses a more perfect acquaintance with the far orient, of its people, of its traditions, of its lore, and of its ideas. His entire career has been spent in the far east, save for a brief spell in South America and Morocco. His knowledge of Buddhism, acquired in Japan and Siam, is so extensive that he is regarded by the highest dignitaries of this religion in the orient as one of its most learned doctors, and through his acquaintance with the Chinese classics, which is vastly superior to that of most of the Chinese literati, he was able to create a profound impression upon the Chinese authorities when British minister plenipotentiary at Peking.

Aside from the late Robert Hart, there has never been any white man so thoroughly equipped to understand and appreciate the peculiar workings of the oriental mind and point of view and thus to place himself in negotiation on the same plane as those with whom he was called upon to deal.

While Sir Ernest was a great success at Peking from an official point of view and contributed more than any other envoy who ever represented England there to restore and enhance the prestige of the British empire in the eyes of the Chinese authorities by his amazing knowledge of the niceties of native etiquette, intricacies of language, traditions and prejudices, he failed to give satisfaction either to British missionaries or merchants, who brought so much pressure to bear upon the foreign office in London that he was finally recalled.



As far as the missionaries were concerned, he is far too great an admirer of Buddhist, Taoist, Shintoist, and Confucian theology and culture to be able to view with approval the endeavors of white men, frequently of a far inferior standard of education, intellect, and culture, to overthrow those oriental beliefs merely by oft coarse and fierce denunciation. Sir Ernest has never been in sympathy with much of the missionary enterprise as hitherto conducted, claiming that if any serious attempt is made to convert the Chinese, the Japanese, and the Siamese, the men sent out as missionaries should be divines of brilliant learning, of acknowledged eminence in theological and oriental science, and of perfect breeding, so that they may be in a position to meet the great dignitaries of these Asiatic creeds and the leaders of far eastern thought, philosophy and faith upon a footing of intellectual equality.

CEREBRO-SPINAL MENINGITIS.

ONE result of our entrance upon war will be an increase in the prevalence of spinal fever. It has always been so. The army will suffer heavily, and from them it will spread to civil communities. Perhaps an indirect effect will be the discovery of means of preventing and curing this disease. There will be some increase in the amount of meningitis during the spring and summer, but the great increase will not come until the late fall. The number of outbreaks will increase as the winter progresses and the maximum will be reached about April, 1918.

A survey of English medical journals shows that next to venereal disease meningitis is engaging the attention of English sanitary authorities.

The incubation period of cerebro-spinal meningitis is very variable. It may not be longer than three hours or it may be eleven days. One English authority says that meningitis has no regular incubation period. The coccus gets into the nose and stays there a variable time. If it gets across the nasal membranes and into the bloodstream it is carried to the brain and spinal cord, and there sets up an inflammation at once. The so-called incubation period then is determined by the length of time the coccus lies in the nose and not by what happens after it gets into the blood. In this it is like pneumonia and the pneumonia coccus. When the coccus reaches the brain and spinal cord it sets up inflammation especially of the covering membranes—the meninges.

The disease starts usually with a headache and a coryza. Then comes fever, headache, stiff spine, general pain, and tenderness. If an attempt is made to bend the body forward pain is caused. A mother cannot take her child in her arms without causing it to cry. If the condition is somewhat advanced the head and back are bowed backward. In the face of an epidemic a child that protests against being held should be regarded with suspicion. Either meningitis or infantile paralysis may be present.

Ordinarily sick people like to curl up in bed. A person with meningitis will not curl up, but lies with his chin up—drawn away from his breastbone. Probably his knees will be drawn up. If the patient sits up and his knees are straightened out he will cry out with pain and bow his back.

Another important sign is pain and tenderness. The skin of the face and arms is tender to the touch. There is pain in the neck and backbone.

It is not natural for persons with any ordinary infection to have stiff spine, pain and tenderness in the back, neck, and skin generally. There is headache and backache in the onset of smallpox but there is no tenderness and the body can be bent forward without pain. Of course, there is pain and tenderness in rheumatism, but the inflammation generally shows what the trouble is.

Mental irritability and sensitiveness to light and sound are much more in evidence than in ordinary fevers. A little later on in the disease there may be an eruption. This eruption gives the disease the name spotted fever, though Rocky mountain fever and typhus are also called spotted fever by some.

The above symptoms are sufficient to warrant a strong suspicion of meningitis. It is for the results of laboratory tests to finally decide the question. First, the physician makes cultures from the nose according to the well known plan for diagnosing diphtheria. Next the blood is examined for leucocytosis. The leucocytosis of meningitis is about like that in pneumonia and appendicitis. It is quite unlike that in infantile paralysis and typhoid fever. He next inserts a needle into the lower end of the spinal canal and draws off some of the spinal fluid. This fluid, examined chemically, microscopically, and bacteriologically, is found to be very different from that of infantile paralysis or tuberculous meningitis. In fact, a naked eye examination of this fluid will usually show whether the case is one of cerebro-spinal meningitis or infantile paralysis. The old style treatment consisted in keeping the patient as quiet as possible in a dark room and meeting symptoms as they arose. Some physicians use warm baths. The backbone of modern treatment is drainage of the spinal fluid and injection of serum.

Drainage of the spinal fluid is helpful in itself. There are some who hold that the improved death rates where the spinal fluid is drained and serum is injected are due to the drainage and not to the serum.

Capt. James Wilson of the English royal army corps says: "To what extent the lumbar puncture and the serum respectively contribute to the result is open to question—we have the impression . . . that many of the beneficial results claimed for serum may have been due to a great extent to the drawing off of the cerebro-spinal fluid."

About one ounce of fluid is drawn off at a time. It is not infrequent to note an improvement of symptoms as a direct immediate result of drawing off the fluid. When serum is used the serum is injected at the same sitting as the drawing off of the fluid. The serum used at the beginning of the European war was not as efficient as that now in use. After the war had been under way some time the Rockefeller institute developed a better method of making serum than they had previously employed. But the best results from the use of serum is 75 per cent of cures, or a death rate of 25 per cent, and while that is better than the old death rate of 75 to 80 per cent, it is far from a satisfactory result. The authorities are agreed that the serum should be begun in the first days of the illness. In his estimate of the value of different vaccines, serums, and antitoxins McCoy says of anti-meningococcus serum:

"Some of the earlier reports on the use of this agent during the present war indicated that it had not proven satisfactory. At present, however, it is being used with success. The variability of different strains of meningococci encountered in various cases and in various outbreaks doubtless accounts in part for the failure to secure more uniform results."

Epidemic meningitis is especially liable to occur in camps in which large numbers of young men are brought together. The serum should be given early and persistently.

One reason for the very great interest in the disease in England now is on account of the severity of the disease. Up to a few years ago the death rate was 80. Eight out of every ten persons contracting the disease died of it. The death rate in England during the last two or three years has been around 60 per cent. About the best results ever attained in a large series of cases was one of 30 per cent in a series of 1,300 cases. The death rate is higher than that of infantile paralysis, smallpox, pneumonia, typhus, or any other of the more ordinary diseases. Like infantile paralysis, the disease is dreaded because of the after effects in many of those who recover. In a Herderberg epidemic 60 per cent of those who recovered became deaf mutes, 31 became deaf, and 50 per cent had some form of muscular incapacity. As a youth I lived in a community to which a body of soldiers had brought meningitis. Large numbers of people died. Of those who recovered many lost the sight in one eye—in fact, lost the eyeball—and some were made deaf.

There is no question that a coccus called the meingococcus is present and a cause in this disease. The English investigators are finding that there is a filterable virus present in addition to the meningococcus. This may explain why it is that the coccus is so often present in the noses of well people without producing the disease. It may be that the meningococcus cannot produce the disease unless it is helped out by this filterable virus, the exact nature of which has not been settled.

The infection is through the nose. Those who carry the cocci without becoming sick are known as carriers. If seventeen people are brought in contact with a case of meningitis and get a nose infection in consequence, one will develop meningitis—become a case—and the other sixteen will become carriers.

The length of time carriers remain infective varies. In one epidemic 70 per cent of the carriers were no longer infective at the end of a week, 83 per cent at the end of two weeks; 87 per cent at the end of three weeks; 98 per cent at the end of five weeks. One case was still infective at the end of four months.

In another epidemic 5 per cent of the carriers were not infective at the end of a week, 30 per cent at the end of two weeks; 40 per cent at the end of three weeks; 45 per cent at the end of four weeks; 61 per cent, five weeks; 68 per cent, six weeks; 80 per cent, eight weeks, and 10 per cent were infective for more than two months.

Most of the cases of spinal meningitis are due to infection contracted from persons who regard themselves as well. Whenever several thousand supposedly well soldiers are gathered together there will be among them one or more who is a meningococcus carrier.

The method of preventing the spread of meningitis is to quarantine all persons in contact with a case of it until such time as they cease to be carriers. This can be determined best by examining the noses bacteriologically. If it is not possible to do this it is moderately though not entirely safe to let the carriers out of quarantine after eight weeks.

The English have done a lot of work in efforts to find out what would get rid of cocci in the nose of a carrier. Wilson tried formalin, potassium permanganate, carbolic solution, and other remedies. "So far as we could discover all were equally ineffective. Insufflation of an antiseptic powder was also tried, but the results were not encouraging."

Demuchy examined the noses of 800 employés of a factory in which two cases of meningitis had developed. One hundred and seventy-nine of them had meningococci. He found that a solution of bicarbonate of soda in normal salt solution (one dram to a pint) had some effect in sterilizing the nose where these cocci were present. Stronger antiseptics did more harm than good.

Capt. Flack was of the opinion that the reason antiseptic sprays would not kill the cocci in the noses of carriers was because the cocci were in inaccessible locations in the nose. He, therefore, made use of breathing chambers saturated with antiseptic solutions in very fine sprays. He came to the conclusion that where there were but few cocci in the nose they would be killed by a few treatments in this inhalatorium. Where the nose was richly seeded with them breathing the fine steam in this room was of some but not much value.

It is the fact that meningitis is spread by carriers rather than by cases that makes it difficult to control.

UNDER WEIGHT.

Fred W. writes: [1] "I am a man 21 years old and weigh 131 pounds dressed in my street clothes; am 5 ft. 7½ inches tall without shoes; am of the small boned type, as I have but a 6½ inch wrist and an 8 inch ankle. How much should I weigh for my height? [2] What is the average height of men without shoes? [3] What is the average weight? [4] Are the men for the navy and army measured with or without shoes?"

REPLY.

1. 145 pounds. You are somewhere about 10 per cent under weight.
2. That no one can answer. It varies in different countries.
3. Same answer as that for 2.
4. Without shoes.

REQUIREMENTS AS TO VISION.

C. R. E. writes: "What is the percentage of vision required for enlisted men in the United States army? For officers? Are privates permitted to wear glasses?"

REPLY.

Circular 26 says of minimum visual requirements: For the line of the army and for the signal corps, 20-40 for the right eye and 20-100 for the left eye, provided that no organic disease exists in either eye. Recruits may be accepted for the line of the army when unable with the right eye to read correctly all of the letters on the 20-40 line, provided that they are able to read some of the lines on the 20-30 line.

2. For the ordnance department and for the hospital corps 20-70 in each eye correctible to 20-40 with glasses, provided that no organic disease exists in either eye. Circular No. 112 specifies the minimum visual requirements for men in the medical corps.

PAVING BALMORAL AVENUE.

Chicago, May 26.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly let me know when the city expects to repave Balmoral avenue from Clark street to Broadway.

E. A. PEARSON.

An ordinance for paving with asphalt a system of streets including Balmoral avenue from North Clark street to Broadway was sent to the council on April 30 and referred to the committee on streets and alleys and will probably be passed inside of three weeks from this date. After the passage of the ordinance all proceedings will be pushed as rapidly as possible so that the street may be paved this year unless the objections of property owners against the assessment may delay the proceedings.

M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

NO PROCEEDINGS TO PAVE ALLEY.

Chicago, May 26.—[To the Friend of the People.]—When will the alley south of Lexington street, between Hoyne avenue and Leavitt street, be paved?

G. S.

No proceedings have yet been started for paving the alley south of Lexington street between Hoyne avenue and Leavitt street. If the owners of property abutting the alley send a petition to the board they will consider the matter, and if needed, proceedings for the paving will be commenced as soon as possible.

M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

WILL PAVE WITH BRICK.

Chicago, May 26.—[To the Friend of the People.]—When will the alley, between Pierce avenue and Le Moyne street, Homan and St. Louis avenue, be paved?

JOSEPH LAIBL.

Proceedings have been started for paving with brick the alley between Pierce avenue, Le Moyne street, Homan avenue and St. Louis avenue, and will be pushed as rapidly as possible so that the alley may be paved this year unless the objections of property owners to the assessment delay the work.

DOGS PROHIBITED IN FOOD SHOPS.

Chicago, May 28.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Can anything be done to compel people to refrain from bringing dogs into grocery, butcher, and bakery shops. They run all around the stores, bringing dirt and fleas on their bodies, and are a general nuisance. The trades people seem helpless for fear of offending their customers who bring the dogs.

MRS. G. A. PARK.

An ordinance was passed on March 13 of this year making it unlawful for the owner or person in custody of a dog to permit it to enter a store, meat market, bakery, or other place where food stuffs are sold or on display. The penalty is a fine of $1 to $10.

KADAVER UND LEICHE.

Chicago, May 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In the name of common sense and every day decency I ask your permission to say a few words about the preposterous charge against the Germans that they use the bodies of the fallen to obtain from them fats, glycerin, fertilizer, etc. This silly lie is taken seriously even by the Literary Digest, which in its last issue [May 26] devotes to it a rather lengthy article. The evidence there brought together is so shaky that it can convince only those who do not need any proof whatever in order to be convinced.

The only exception consists in the words of a war correspondent in the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger of April 10: "We are passing the great corpse utilization establishment [Kadaververwertungsanstalt] of this army group. The fat that is won here is turned into lubricating oils, and everything else is ground down in the bones mill into a powder which is used for mixing with pigs' food and as manure. Nothing can be permitted to go to waste."

This translation by the London Times, which has been reprinted by many other papers, is correct, apart from the all-important rendering of Kadaververwertungsanstalt. Germans in our country and the German government called attention to the fact that Kadaver does not mean corpse, but only and exclusively the carcass of a dead animal, as everybody knows who is conversant with German. The Times retorted: "This statement is definitely and deliberately untrue," and quoted Meyer and Muret-Sanders' German-English dictionary for Kadaver-Leiche [corpse].

Now, it goes without saying that dictionaries of modern languages are very deceptive guides. A German dictionary of the more comprehensive kind has to record not only the signification of a certain word in the living language of today, but also its use in a literature extending over 400 years of linguistic change. In very many cases also the ways in which the word is employed in certain crafts, sciences, etc., must be indicated. So in numberless instances the people who need a dictionary most, get the least real help from its pages. In addition, even the best dictionaries contain many downright mistakes.

Leiche means corpse and only this, except when prefixed by Tier [animal] or the name of some animal [e.g. Pferdeleiche], or when the context clearly shows that a dead animal is to be understood. Kadaver, on the other hand, no matter what the dictionaries may say, nowadays never means anything but a dead animal. German is especially careful when these two words are the first members of a compound, as in our case.

We always have Leichenbegängnis [funeral], never Kadaverbegängnis; always Leichenpredigt [funeral sermon], never Kadaverpredigt, and so on through the lengthy list. Conversely, Kadaver, as the first part of a compound, can never mean corpse. Of course, when a human being is regarded as no human being at all, but as a beast, his dead body may, in a purely contemptuous sense, be called Kadaver, a usage which confirms my statement.

WILL NOT ESCAPE IF GOVERNMENT CAN PREVENT.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Kindly advise us through the columns of your valuable paper if those slackers taking out marriage licenses now and after June 5 are exempt from drafting in the army. So many now hastily get married or by some way rent or purchase land that they would be free from drafting. For the honor of our country I don't think it is right.

One of the questions on registration day ought to read: When were you married? Then the government would know at a glance if they wanted to evade drafting. If such are not drafted it will be an injustice to all single honorable men.

CITY HALL SLACKERS.

Chicago, May 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I was very much disappointed to notice your editorial urging an eight hour day for city hall employés. I am sure if the writer of this editorial really could see the inside conditions of the majority of the city hall employés who have to depend alone on the salary received from the city he would have written an editorial urging an increase in the salaries of city hall employés instead of heaping additional working hours on them.

CLIFFO

AMERICAN-JAPANESE RAPPROCHEMENT

By Doremus Scudder

A NEW Japan is being born. It is one of the miracles of the world war, like Russia's regeneration. The Terauchi government is a striking phase of the change. When Viscount Kato, Marquis Okuma's lieutenant, wrecked his party on the Gibraltar of China's everlasting patience, it was not the republic's diplomacy that was responsible. The new spirit evoked by the European struggle for democracy and international square dealing was the current that dashed his ship to pieces. His notorious demands simply did not jibe with the new world sentiment that had come to animate the allies. Why Kato, heir to Marquis Okuma's leadership of Japan's democracy, did not sense this is one of the unsolved mysteries of far east statecraft.

A second wonder equally inscrutable is Gen. Count Terauchi's clear intuition of what Viscount Kato utterly failed to see. Americans familiar with Japan trembled for China when the iron hand which had ruled Korea so inflexibly and in the main so justly, gripped the helm. But the man of war proved himself a man of statesmanlike vision. He saw that Japan was transforming China into her most implacable foe, and that the leadership in Asia, which his nation had been craving and dreaming about for a half century, was possible only along the road of friendly service.

Even India, whose good opinion Japan had sedulously cultivated, was growling at the dog in the manger spirit of Kato's demands. Doubtless also from both Britain and America gentle intimations reached the Japanese government that this truculent holding up of the young republic was likely to make trouble. Moreover, Terauchi's repudiation of Kato's foreign policy voiced the conscience of his nation. This showed him to be a shrewd interpreter of the mind of his people.

THE most notable movement in the far east since this warrior became premier has been the changing attitude of Japan toward America. No man on earth is so quick to sense the mind of the other fellow and reëcho appropriately as the Japanese. When, therefore, America's prejudice against Japan began to wane, like bell to push button, this nation responded in harmony. Probably no people ever tried more conscientiously or honestly to win another's friendship than these earnest far eastern folk have done during the last seven years. Did America dread an influx of Japanese laborers? Presto, the exit from the rising sun land shut inexorably and in the years since the gentlemen's agreement was made, not an immigrant, undesired by Uncle Sam, has gotten through. Were the prejudices of California stirred by the queer customs of the little brown men? A stream of lecturers, each bearing a name known throughout the empire, crossed the Pacific and dinned the gospel, "Learn American Ways," into the hearts of their countrymen. Was the chorus, "Japanese never can amalgamate" reëchoed by the newspapers? It was met by a movement starting in Hawaii and spreading to the main land which led the vast majority of immigrant Japanese not only to decide to make the United States their permanent home, but also to see to it that their children born in their adopted country were duly registered as Americans and trained for intelligent citizenship.

When a large company of persons start such a movement it affects the subconsciousness of those at whom it is aimed. So America began to alter her view of the Japanese insensibly. The fine crusade of the federal council of churches, with Dr. Gulick as its spokesman, attacked the dense ignorance of the United States on the subject of Japan and by illuminating the mind stirred the public conscience. Then a couple of strikes in California showed the labor unions there that Japanese workmen are ideal comrades in a battle for industrial justice. On top of this conviction, Bunji Suzuki, the head of Japan's only labor organization, came to America to fraternize with union labor and proved such an ideally good fellow that, as Mr. Ely, the labor editor of the San Francisco Bulletin, said in a personal letter: "As a result of your visits to America I honestly believe that all racial prejudice on the part of the workers of this country has been eliminated."

Meantime, Baron Shibusawa, Japan's Pierpont Morgan, had attacked the problem from another side. In a series of personal interviews with leading financiers throughout the United States, he had interested them in a policy of commercial coöperation between America and Japan for the friendly development of China's vast resources. As a result, men like Judge Gary have visited the far east and a large program is being quietly mapped out.

DURING the last six months America has fairly rushed forward with her good offices. First the great "Made in Japan" press banquet in Columbia, Mo., focused the attention of the empire's business men upon the real friendliness of American journalists. This was followed by the kaiser's last kick to upset the good relations between the Pacific neighbors, which led to the discovery of the studied attempt of the German government for years to embitter these two powers by originating the absurd canards concerning Japan's designs against the United States that have flooded our yellow journals. This revelation has led to many frank expressions in our press and has shown each nation why it was that some sinister force mystifying to each of them always inter about to be reëstablished. Next, the appointment of Mr. about to be reëstablished. Next, the apointment of Mr. Frank R. Rutter as commercial attaché has seemed to set our government's seal upon the policy of play together, advocated so ardently by Baron Shibusawa. Finally, California's barring of the movies which, doubtless as a part of Germany's studied scheme, have been circulated to foster popular prejudice against Japan, has convinced this country of the readiness of the Pacific coast to deal fairly with the Asiatic as nothing else perhaps could have done.

All these evidences that America is sick of being made the dupe of designing men, bent upon keeping the progressive west apart and is resolved to do justice to Asia, have had a mighty effect here on this side of the Pacific.

Clearly our nation is facing an unexampled opportunity in the far east and the excitements of fighting ought not to be allowed to hinder us from seizing and making the most of it, for the transformation already wrought by the war has left Japan in a singularly lonely situation. This nation's last stroke of medieval diplomacy—must we not now brand as medieval all of that antebellum international policy, concerned with balance of power, spheres of influence and land grabbing?—was her recent treaty with Russia. So long as the czar was the "Little Father" Japan could hope to muddle along in the old slough paths of ruthlessness in her relations with China. But with Russia a democracy China has absolutely no foe to fear.

It is hard for Americans to realize what a mighty stroke for humanity—Asiatic humanity—was struck when the duma and army joined hands. With the explosion which threatens to blow into kingdom come the present régime in the central powers, Japan will be the only remaining stronghold of bureaucracy among civilized nations.

THE plight of the ruling caste in Tokio then has become an impossible one. The country is menaced with questions, any one of which is enough to threaten revolution. The exploitation of labor, the extreme poverty of the mass of the people, the growing consumption of alcoholic liquor, the crushing burden of militarism, the relaxation of moral sanctions, the educational problem, all press at once for solution. And alliance with bona fide democracies in crushing out the last remnants of aristocratic privilege and in enthroning the people everywhere, is a constant rebuke of much that the makers of modern Japan have been building up with painstaking care.

Yet those who know the genius of this race best do not acutely fear a revolution. The Japanese statesmen are wise. Fifty years ago they swept away feudalism with little or no bloodshed, and it was done, too, on the principle of noblesse oblige. That will doubtless be the modus operandi now in transferring the bureaucratic systems into a bona fide democracy.

But the situation appeals to us for the exercise of the highest form of international good will. Japan craves and needs America's disinterested friendship. If granted to her unstintedly it will bind the Pacific nations together as nothing else possibly could. The call for nobleness in our relations with this people is mightily moving.

FORTUNATELY, at this juncture a case has come before the Circuit Court of Appeals in California, which focuses in a peculiar manner our opportunity to do Japan and the far east generally a service of incalculable value. The appeal of Mr. Takie Ozawa for naturalization is to be argued in May or June, and will establish the question whether or not Japanese are eligible to American citizenship. Of the personal character of Mr. Ozawa, it is enough to say that both the United States district judges before whom the case was brought in Hawaii went out of their way to express their high estimation of his character and fitness for exercising the rights of a citizen of the United States. His petition was denied by Judge Clemons in accordance with the formula, "A Mongolian is not white, a Japanese is a Mongolian, and as nonwhites cannot be naturalized, Japanese are barred."

But both of these major premises are questionable, the first because many persons of Mongolian race have been admitted as white into our citizenship, and the second because Aryan admixture makes the classification of Japanese as Mongolians unsound.

If by judicial decision this stigmatization of Japanese as nonwhites, while Syrians and Jews among Semites, Armenians and Parsees are ruled among the whites, can be relegated, as scientifically it should be, to the lumber room, and eligibility to naturalization, where not curtailed by statute, as in the case of Chinese, can be put upon the sound foundation of individual capacity for American citizenship, as constituting the only kind of whiteness, justly definable, the last remaining cause of friction between our government and Japan will have been removed, and the permanent friendship of the two nations established on the sure basis of human equality.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

JUNE

THORNS in blossom and a catbird singing to them; the scarlet tanager, a living flame in flights through the half robed oaks; meadow larks singing from the fields beyond the woods; phlox and wild geraniums coloring the edge of the viburnum and hazel thickets; wild strawberries in blossom; the chewink singing to the morning and the thrush singing to the sunset—June opens the door.

With the benignity of a graciousness which will make amends for the long time of expectation and doubt, of northeast winds, of cold rains and cold mists, of dulled hope and chilled thoughts of prospects, June opens the door, steps into life, and smiles.

The perfumes of all genial and sweet scented things which grow to intoxicate the perceptions and yet leave them placid and content, come out as June opens the door and the world is new born and life is glad. A period of chill, of doubt, is the friend of June, doubling, by delaying, the value of her coming.

With soft rains and bright sunshine, with song and perfumes, with blossoms and young leaves, smiling and benignant, placid and serene, June opens the door and for a while only the sands of contentment run through the hour glass.

"His Family" (Macmillan), by Ernest Poole.

"The Light in the Clearing" (Bobbs Merrill), by Irving Bacheller.

NONFICTION.

"God, the Invisible King" (Macmillan), by H. G. Wells.

POETRY.

Poems by Alan Seeger.

CHICAGO is finding a way to do its bit that no other city has tried out thus far. Through the Chicago public library a soldiers' library is being collected which will be distributed through the Y. M. C. A., which has the amusement concession at the great war game. And Chicago is doing it in a good old fashioned "do as you'd be done by" manner. When the idea was conceived of receiving books for the soldiers when they go to the front (perhaps they'll be used at the training camps as well) the wiseacres said that the library would get all of the garret dust in Chicago, that the books sent in would be of the Elsie Dinsmore type and that it wouldn't pay to take the trouble.

"We'll just see," the library said (it sees a lot out of its gray stone eyes and it knows people in real life as well as in books). The library announced that it would call for bundles of books which contained more than a dozen volumes, that books for the soldiers could be left at any of the branches of the library, at distributing stations, or at the main library. That wasn't more than two weeks ago.

Last Tuesday I went to see the soldiers' library. Unopened bundles and boxes were piled on the floor, they were unpacking as rapidly as they could, and already 3,000 books were on the shelves. I wish you could have been with me. The books were uniformly clean, well bound, and most of them books which would fill your soul with envy. There was Wells complete (not in a set, but single volumes from different sources) from "Old Worlds for New" to "Mr. Britling Sees It Through." Arnold Bennett, Booth Tarkington, Winston Churchill, Kipling—every American and English author of any renown, an album of photographs of the Grant family, obviously authentic and a treasure chest to a collector. There were books out of print, valuable first editions—everything that the donors had wanted themselves and practically nothing that no one would want.

In a few of the books was a blessing on the soldiers and an admonition to "please write." There was a note to the library: "Ask your friends to put their personal selves into their gifts. If it is only a pen dash under and a loved poem it will carry a double message of joy to many a reader. It is for us to make a library which will be the first and last of its kind—for war must be no more." That note came from somewhere in Iowa, and from somewhere in all of the states around us books have come.

There are many Bibles, dictionaries of all varieties, and fiction and fact of every kind except medical and law books. There are more copies of Ralph Connor's "The Doctor" than of any other book thus far, but "Queed" is a close second to it. Bundles of magazines were sent in, but the library cannot take magazines. They may be sent directly to the Y. M. C. A.

There is strangely little poetry, probably because it's a general theory that soldiers don't like poetry. As a matter of statistics the soldiers on the border last summer wore out more volumes of poetry than they did of fiction. Probably one-third of the books were absolutely new—still wrapped in their store coverings. There's something personal about giving a book that you love to travel into the trenches. It's one pretty intimate way of going yourself, almost as intimate as knitting socks that inspire Mr. Poilu to poetic jam like this lifted from a shelf in B. L. T.'s larder of preserved verse.

"Socks received. Some fit.
I wear one for a helmet, and one for a mit."

Corinne Lowe, whose "Confessions of a Social Secretary" (Harper's) you must surely have read with zest when it was appearing serially, is the fashion lady of ours and a fashioner of words worth reading. She is a Chicagoan by the grace of birth and of love for the lake, she says, so there's no one to blame but fate for taking her away to the east when she was little more than 2. After school at West Chester and college at Swarthmore she started in with a Philadelphia newspaper. Then she jaunted off to New York to write advertising copy. And now she's writing for the magazines and everything.

"A Student in Arms" (Dutton) has been one of the most popular of the "from the front" books in England. It is Donald Hankey's description of the wave of religion that has swept over the soldiers at the front no less than over the men and women at home. It has gone into a twelfth edition of ten thousand copies each in England. When he led his men into the battle of the Somme, you may remember, he kneeled down with all of his men and said, "When we go over the top it is either a wound and Blighty or death and the Resurrection." For him it proved to be death.

"Carry On" (John Lane) is a volume of letters in war time from Coningsby Dawson, the author of "Slaves of Freedom" (Holt), who is a lieutenant in the Canadian field artillery serving in France by virtue of volunteering and a Newark, New Jerseyite by virtue of geography. Don't confuse this "Carry On" with Ian Hay's continuation of "The First Hundred Thousand," which appeared serially in England under the title of "Carry On." The Ian Hay book hasn't been published yet in this country.

Margaret Deland's husband, Lorin F. Deland, the author of "Imagination in Business" (Harper's) and "At the Sign of the Dollar," died in Boston after an illness of several months. When I was in Boston last fall Mrs. Deland wasn't seeing anyone on account of her husband's severe illness and she hasn't been doing any work since then, so far as I know. Mr. Deland was a man of parts, a student of the drama, a football coach and theorist, an advertising expert, and a philanthropist.

"The Magpie's Nest" (John Lane) is Isabel Paterson's first novel, but it follows in time of publication "The Shadow Riders" of last year, which was called by the Atlantic Monthly "one of the finest Cisatlantic novels of recent years." "The Magpie's Nest," like "The Shadow Riders," is a story of the Canadian Northwest.

"Pippin" (Appleton) is Laura E. Richards' latest pleasant little tale. Mrs. Richards is the daughter of Julia Ward Howe, you remember.

DESTRUCTION of RHEIMS CATHEDRAL

By Sterling Heilig

FIRST, OUTSIDE REIMS, THEN PARIS, May 23.—"I fear that the North tower is about to fall." So spoke the architect of Reims cathedral. When, a week later, the Paris papers were allowed to quote them, all knew what it meant. The French public must be prepared, little by little, for the blow struck at its heart—the final destruction of the incomparable old basilica which stands for the purest splendors of French history, from Remi, Clovis and the Christianizing of the land, to Joan of Arc and the crowning of the kings. . . .

Thus, when a soldier has been killed, they prepare the family by a printed form notice: "Your son (or husband, or brother) has been seriously wounded."

Three days later the Paris papers were permitted to quote "L'Eclaireur de l'Est," still then printed in Reims: "The bombardment continues furiously against the cathedral district, with the use of their heaviest shells. It is impossible to estimate the number, even approximately. On Friday the shelling continued day and night. On Saturday a calm of a few hours, then the bombardment recommenced more violent than ever, notably between noon and 3 p. m. and 7 and 9 p. m. Sunday, a succession of smaller shells all day with fury."

All will, doubtless, be known before these lines can be printed. There have been days when 10,000 shells were counted, 7,700 shells, 4,350 shells. Reims was practically empty, yet an average of from six to eighteen persons were killed daily. One morning fifteen women were killed together like flies by poison gas shells in the street of the cloister beside the cathedral.

Now we come to the remaining question.

ON the battle front—miles and miles beyond—they found a German picture postcard, all trampled and soiled. It represents, in three colors, amid a city in red flames and yellow explosions, a Reims cathedral standing, purple and glorious, marvellously intact and spared.

A common German feldgrau, resting on his rifle, watches in the foreground. By the reverent expression of his face it is clear to see that if the valorous German knows how to fight he also knows how to appreciate and spare the marvels of art, history and faith. To make sure that the interpretation shall reach all minds, even the weakest, these words (on a flowered device) curl and flutter like a satin banner above the flame framed cathedral: "Den Deutschen ein Heiligthum!" ("A thing sacred for Germans!")

This is how the German government and high command explain Reims cathedral—and the cathedral of Soissons, Laon, Arras, Verdun and St. Dié to the more innocent and reverent elements of the German population, particularly country folks, that soldiers may mail the postcards home and prove their innocence.

For more robust consciences the explanation type is that of Maj. Gen. von Disfurth, in the Hamburg Nachrichten: "If all the glorious monuments ever created be destroyed it is of no consequence, so that by their destruction we promote German victory. The humblest gravestone of a German grenadier is more beautiful than all the cathedrals of Europe. Let neutrals and enemies cease their empty twitter. Let them cease to talk of Reims cathedral. Our troops must achieve victory!"

German artillerymen, however, know better.

CATHEDRALS are not merely damaged, as it were, by accident, because of their position in the midst of necessary cannon fire. For artillerymen who do the job, the high command comes down to tacks. Artillerie-Kommandant von Stecht is (or was) a great personage on the French front. When he fled in the recent retreat he left behind him the munition books of three heavy batteries "watching" Soissons (at a distance of eleven miles, with French armies and railroads in between!) I give two entries:

"April 14—The Dickel battery fired nineteen percussion and fuse shells on the cathedral. Aeroplanes report the tower and nave touched. In the nave the commencement of a fire was noted. Up to date have not been able to materially damage the tower.

"April 15—The Stenger battery, from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m., fired twenty-nine shrapnel shells on the cathedral tower, of which sixteen are reported reaching the mark."

The French government will publish the entire notebook in fac-simile, along with a mass of similar material after the war. In it will figure the letter of Artillery Capt. Engel, "rejoicing" in the "beautiful mark" of Arras cathedral; and it will appear only too clearly that the aim has been deliberate, methodical and purposed, and the motive rage, despite, blackmail and mercantile destruction—to terrorize, to wring the French civilian heart and ruin beautiful France as much as possible after the war!

The German high command will have difficulty, for example, to explain how it could aid German victory to destroy by long range guns the cathedral of St. Dié, the most venerable spot in all France for Americans. In the cloisters of St. Dié, the word "America" was first pronounced and printed, A. D. 1507, in a little book entitled "Cosmographiae Introductio," and published by the learned canons. In 1912 the American ambassador, the French president and a brilliant French and American party set up a commemorative tablet in the little sleepy French Lorraine town. At the Chicago exposition there was a special hall of St. Dié, with the little book open, at page 30, where you read: "There is a fourth quarter of the world, which Amerigo Vespucci has discovered, and which, for this reason, we call America."

"We have taken under our fire," says the German communique, "French batteries observed by us in Reims and environs!"

Batteries in Reims!

As for "environs," the cathedral is not in the environs, but in the center of the ancient crowded city!

As early as May 1, a private letter of the Archbishop of Reims, Cardinal Lucon, circulated in Paris. On May 5 the censorship permitted its publication. I quote:

"Friday—Infernal bombardment, 7,750 shells. . . .

"The cathedral is assassinated. The apse is massacred. Three flying buttresses went down today; most of the pinnacles are lopped off; the clere-stories of the apse and high walls are in great part blown to the ground. The walls have great breaches, which imperil their solidity. The towers have been gravely hit. Finally, the vaulted roof has fallen in in five places: in the south transept, in the chancel, which is a ruin, and in front of the pulpit.

"The baptismal fonts are crushed. The high altar, buried under the debris of the roof, is no longer visible. . . .

"Tuesday," continues the archbishop, "I was at work in my office. The house shook and the earth trembled at each 305 shell, which began again to fall in ten minute intervals. Each time I hastened to the corridor window to see, if possible, the result. What I saw was a thick cloud of black smoke enveloping the cathedral, and clearing away each time, very slowly, or scarcely at all. I still hoped that but few shells were falling actually on it. Alas! when towards 1 p. m. I was able to venture to the cathedral, in company with Mgr. Neveux, I was heart-broken! The destruction was far graver than I had dreamed possible! I returned desolate. . . .

"This morning (two days later) I returned to the cathedral in company with the architect. What a terrible, heart breaking spectacle! It is the image of desolation. . . .

"The corner of the south transept and the apse has been so blown in that one more shell either above or at the side will bring it all down—and with it all the arches which rest on the capital of this bundle of columns, one of the four pilasters upholding the vaulted roof. . . ."

Do you understand? Do you grasp? Do you appreciate the dosed and measured revelations for the great French republic?

The words of the cathedral architect—"I fear that the north tower is about to fall"—are like one of those notices they send to bereaved families that the son (or husband) "has been seriously wounded."

These extracts from the letter of Cardinal-Archbishop Lucon are like the visit of the priest which follows—to prepare France to receive the final, fatal tidings!

Adieu, Reims cathedral!

New American Motor Tractors Invade Europe to Turn the Peaceful Pursuit of Plowing Into a Weapon Against Germany.

American motors are playing an impressive role in Europe's fight with the food problem. The photograph above shows Henry Ford's new tractor turning over the first acre of French soil in a government organized competitive test held last month on the outskirts of Paris. The machine had not been uncovered until the opening day of the competition and was entirely unknown even to the Ford mechanics.

As a result of a similar test near London, the English ministry of munitions has just adopted this tractor in its entirety and is asking all manufacturers concerned to coöperate loyally in building the standardized product according to blueprints issued by Ford engineers.

The picture below is that of another new tractor type perfected and manufactured in the United States, which is being shipped to all parts of the world for work in the war farms campaign. It is also beginning to be widely used in this country and Canada.

22 Entries Made for Motor Derby; Many Newcomers

CHICAGO'S third annual Auto Derby, to be run at the speedway on June 16, bids fair to have the largest field of starters in the history of the local classic and eclipse the records of 1915 and 1916, on each of which occasions twenty-one cars were sent away by Starter Fred J. Wagner.

Although the entry blanks were not sent out until a week ago, a total of twenty-two nominations already has been received by the promoters, and there is every assurance that there will be as many again before the entry list closes at midnight Saturday. The field now includes the following cars and drivers:

Car—	Driver.
Frontenac	Louis Chevrolet
Frontenac	Gaston Chevrolet
Frontenac	Joe Boyer
Delage	Barney Oldfield
Delage	Jack Lecain
Delage	Jules Devigne
Hoskins Special	Dave Lewis
Omar Special	Omar Toft
Packard	Ralph De Palma
Stutz	Earl Cooper
Mercedes	Louis Fountaine
Duesenberg	Eddie Hearne
Duesenberg	George Buzane
Hudson	Ira Vail
Hudson	Ralph Mulford
Hudson	Billy Chandler
Hudson	Patterson
Newman Special	Billy Taylor
Crawford	McCord
Crawford	G. M. Ewan
Oldfield Special	Unnamed
Ogren	Otto Henning

Among the prospective entrants who asked for entry blanks but who as yet have not returned them with signatures attached are the Mercer team, which probably will nominate three cars with Pete Henderson, Joe Thomas and Walter Haynes as drivers; Fred Duesenberg, who is campaigning two cars this season and starring Tommy Milton; Andy Burt with the Erbes Special; Tom Alley, who has been supervising the construction of a Pan-American; Art Klein, with a Johnson Special; Billy Meyer, with the Pugh Special, and McBride, with the Olsen Special.

Of the twenty-two drivers who have been named as Auto Derby contenders eleven make their maiden start in the local classic. They are Joe Boyer, Gaston Chevrolet, Jack Lecain, Jules Devigne, Omar Toft, Eddie Hearne, Louis Fountaine, Patterson, Billy Taylor, McCord and Ewan. Only three drivers in this year's field participated in both the 1915 and 1916 Auto Derby—Louis Chevrolet, who finished seventh with a Delage year before last and was an also-ran in the Frontenac last season; Otto Henning, who drove a Mercer in 1915 and an Ogren in 1916 and was eliminated in both events by mechanical trouble, and Billy Chandler, pilot of the Ogren in the first classic and captain and relief driver of the Crawford team twelve months ago.

The local records of the other contenders follow:

De Palma—Second to Resta in 1916.
Lewis—Tenth with a Crawford in 1916.
Cooper—Fourth with a Stutz in 1915.
Vail—Sixth with a Hudson in 1916.
Mulford—Also ran with a Mulford Special in 1915; refused to drive in 1916 when race was run on Sunday.
Buzane—Failed to finish with Duesenberg in 1916.

Only five of the nineteen drivers who have won prizes in the Auto Derby of 1915 and 1916 are in this year's field. Of the missing fourteen, Harry Grant, Bob Burman, Joe Cooper, and Frank Galvin will never drive again, death having waved the checkered flag for them. Two of the other absentees, Jean Porporato and Josef Christiaens, are in war swept Europe. Dario Resta, twice winner of the Auto Derby, has retired temporarily. Gil Anderson and Eddie O'Connell have not fully recovered from injuries sustained last season. Eddie Rickenbacher is too busy with aviation to think of motor racing. Wilbur D'Alene is hunting in British Columbia. Jack Cable is a relief driver on the Hudson team, Fred McCarty has retired, and Tom Alley has not announced his intention of competing as yet, although he is billed to drive the Pan-American.

Consequently the veterans are in the minority this year and chances are bright for an Auto Derby neophyte to carry off premier honors and the big slice of the $21,000 purse.

Cracking Process Assures Fuel in Plenty; No Shortage, Says Expert

Motorists have been warned a good deal of late that the increasing cost of gasoline is simply a prelude to an actual famine in automobile fuel. Here's a different view of the situation—an authoritative one, too. The cracking process mentioned is a method by which the component parts of crude oil are separated under heat in accordance with their respective volatilities; it is being increasingly used in place of straight distillation.

By Walter F. Rittman.

[Chemical Engineer U. S. Bureau of Mines.]

THE market value of synthetic gasoline produced by cracking in the United States during 1917 will be sufficient to supply the navy with ten superdreadnaughts. In other words, one-fifth of the 3,000,000,000 gallons to be produced will be made by cracking.

By July 1 of the present year there will be in operation in the United States 4,000,000 automobiles. Financial men, in considering the investment value of motor stocks, have for several years been dwelling upon the saturation point, but despite this consideration the demand for machines still keeps well ahead of the 40 per cent average yearly increase of past years.

When the saturation point will be reached nobody knows. Responsible and successful automobile men maintain that the present increase in rate of production will keep up for years, and that after the present high prices of materials the price of cars can be so reduced that every family having an income over $1,000 may own a car. On this basis the United States will have in the neighborhood of 10,000,000 automobiles, two and one-half times the present number. Assuming an annual life of five years per machine 10,000,000 cars means an annual replacement number equal to 2,000,000, our present rate of production.

When one questions the correctness of the opinion of the automobile man who suggests the above figures one is answered with the statement that every prediction which the automobile man has heretofore made has been too conservative. An important consideration is the greatly increasing number of motor trucks necessary to replace the shortage in horses. As to the influence on this industry of the United States' entrance into the European war time will tell.

Only the steel, lumber, and clothing industries exceed the automobile business in importance today. Detroit, the center of this new industry, rose as a manufacturing center from sixteenth place in 1900 to sixth place in 1914. In the United States over 500 factories are today engaged in making different types of automobiles, and new companies of varying stability are announced each week. As a sidelight, it is interesting to observe the approximate annual upkeep involved in America's automobile bill, which is as follows:

Gasoline	$500,000,000
Tires	500,000,000
Accessories	300,000,000
Garage hire	150,000,000
Repairs	150,000,000

The number of automobiles in use in this country on Jan. 1 over the period of the last fifteen years is as follows:

Year.	Number of Cars.
1905	85,000
1910	400,000
1911	600,000
1912	677,000
1913	1,010,483
1914	1,253,875
1915	1,754,570
1916	2,225,000
1917	3,250,000
1918 [estimated]	4,750,000

In addition gasoline requirements are not limited to the above automobiles, for tremendous quantities are used in motor boats, motorcycles, farm engines, chemical manufacture, cleaning establishments, etc. The requirements per machine per annum vary with different users, some using an average of less than a gallon a day, whereas the public vehicle often uses as high as ten gallons a day. Statistics would indicate that the average consumption per car per annum approaches 500 gallons.

Of the various problems confronting the automobile industry, the motor fuel problem of the future has loomed up as the most important, but it would seem that this problem will temporarily at least be solved. Much discussion and attention is paid to the use of gasoline substitutes, such as alcohol, benzol, gasoline from natural gas, electricity, etc. All of these materials are valuable sources of power and the extent of their use is entirely a question of quantity produced, and price.

Alcohol is commercial when gasoline exceeds 35 cents per gallon. This price, however, is based on ante-war prices, as every one realizs that the present price of alcohol makes it prohibitive. Benzol, when mixed with gasoline, makes a superior type of motor fuel, and here again it is entirely a question of the supply available. The figures of the best informed people in this field indicate a supply of benzol and light oils available equal to 100,000,000 gallons, which it is observed will fulfill less than 10 per cent of our motor fuel requirements, even though none of the benzol and similar materials were used for explosives and other chemical purposes.

Casing head gasoline (gasoline from natural gas) is an item of considerable importance because it is so volatile and has such wide explosive limits that it can be blended with naphthas and thereby makes available for motor use materials which were not available. The production of this material has been as follows, but this production, it may be remarked, will hardly supply more than one-tenth of our fuel requirements:

Year.	Gallons.
1911	7,425,839
1912	12,081,179
1913	24,060,817
1914	42,652,632
1915	65,364,665
1916	125,000,000
1917	200,000,000

Much is heard of the kerosene carburetor, adn the patent office holds thousands of carburetor patents. Prof. Lucke of Columbia university rightly believes that in the development of a commercial kerosene carburetor it will not be a new invention, but a matter of a design utilizing parts from various patents or designs already developed that will solve the problem. Practically no consideration has been paid to what is perhaps the most important factor militating against the use of kerosene, that is, the question of explosive limits. The carburetors already invented surely embody all possible principles, so it would seem that from this time forward the problem is one of a design wherein ideas from different carburetors are brought together in a new form. A partial way out of the difficulty may be by reversion to the steamer type of automobile in which heavier oil is used to generate steam.

The crude oil production and the gasoline production in the United States, during a period corresponding to the automobile figures previously given, is shown as follows in barrels of 42 gallons:

Year.	Crude oil production.
1905	134,717,580
1910	209,557,248
1911	220,449,391
1912	222,935,044
1913	248,446,230
1914	265,762,535
1915	281,104,104
1916	292,300,000

Year.	Gasoline production.

1909	12,900,000
1914	34,915,000
1915	41,600,000
1916	54,760,000
1917 [estimated]	70,000,000

From these figures it will be observed that during the period from 1910 to 1917, when the number of automobiles increased eightfold, crude oil production grew but a little over one-third, and gasoline production increased four times, an order of magnitude comparable with the growth in production of automobiles. This increased production of gasoline from a relatively constant quantity of crude oil is obviously the result of taking a larger portion of motor fuel from the crude oil and calling it gasoline and of producing gasoline from heavier oils by cracking.

The question naturally arises as to how much further into crude oil the petroleum man can cut in order to increase the supply of motor fuel. We have all observed the Baumé gravity of gasoline decrease from the seventies to the fifties, which means an increase in the specific gravity from 0.700 to 0.778. But practical motor men today believe that, with the present automobile carburetor and engine gasoline containing heavier portions of the crude oil below 50 degrees Baumé does not work efficiently.

Scientific explanation of the fact can be found in a consideration of the explosive limits of various hydrocarbons. For every mixture of hydrocarbons and air, as produced in the carburetor, there is a proportion below which the mixture contains too small a percentage of hydrocarbons to explode. There is also an upper limit above which the mixture contains too large a percentage of hydrocarbons to explode. Between these two limits is the desired range in which the proper explosive mixture is formed.

For instance, a mixture of natural gas and air containing below 5 per cent of gas will not explode; also a mixture containing more than 11.5 per cent of gas will not explode. Hence, the possible explosive limits for mixtures of natural gas and air are between 5 and 11.5 per cent of gas. Similarly, the explosive limits for mixtures of gasoline vapor and air lie approximately between 1.4 and 6 per cent of gasoline vapor.

When the size and weight of petroleum molecules increase the boiling point is raised. In other words, the higher the molecular weight, the heavier and less volatile is the material. Furthermore, as the volatility of these hydrocarbons decreases, the limits for their explosive mixtures with air, below which nothing happens and above which there is a burning rather than an explosion, come closer and closer together.

Consequently as we go from lighter petroleum products, such as gasoline, to heavier petroleum products, such as kerosene, and up to materials boiling above 400 degrees F., the range for explosive mixtures of air and heavy hydrocarbon vapors becomes more and more narrow, until a point is reached where there is great difficulty in adjusting the mechanical parts of the carburetor, so that they deliver the proper explosive mixture.

For example, suppose a mixture of 5 per cent hydrocarbon vapor and 95 per cent of air is the only possible explosive mixture for the vapors of a certain substance, how difficult, if not impossible, it would be to adjust a carburetor to deliver accurately and continuously that exact mixture. The result then is that when this heavy material, with narrow explosive limits, is used for fuel, there is slow burning rather than explosion, and only a part of the combustion occurs in the cylinder where it can be utilized. Therefore, it is questionable whether an efficient carburetor for heavy kerosene can be devised.

Other suggested solutions of the motor fuel problem involve the use of oil derived from coal, shale, peat, and lignite. These will be immensely important sources of liquid fuel in the more remote future. Passing over the large supply of light oil possible from coal now burned without coking, which may amount to as much as a billion gallons of fuel per annum, there are immense shale deposits in America containing a volume of oil many times greater than that now known. Here the problem of obtaining motor spirits from the oil will arise again and the solution of it, as of our present problem, will necessitate cracking processes.

Then, as now, the demand for motor spirits will run ahead of the supply obtainable by straight distillation; and the logical solution of our present motor fuel problem will be the logical solution in future problems. The fundamental proposition is that when the demand for gasoline doubles or trebles, while the amount of petroleum remains

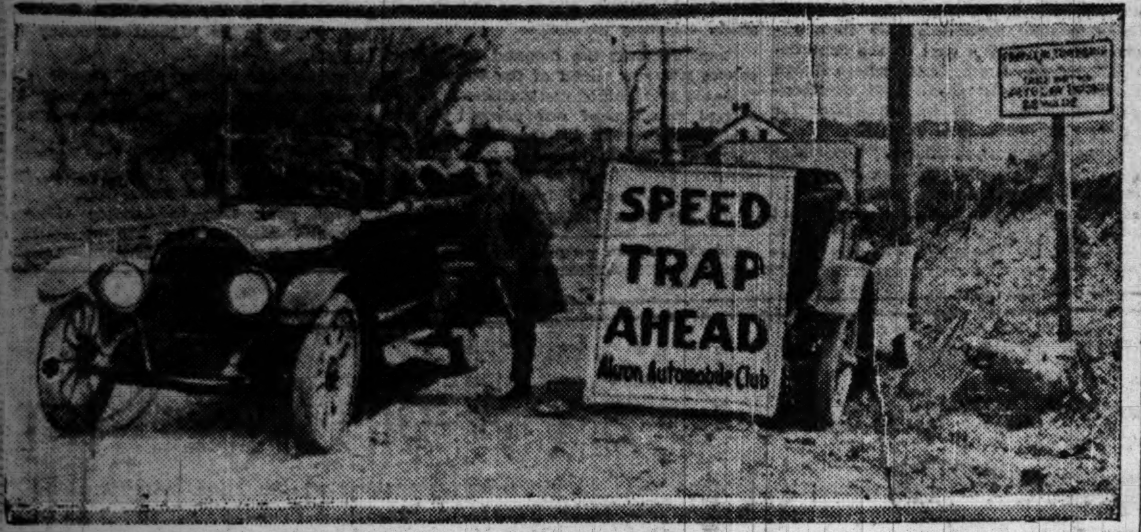
AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

A REGULAR GUY

When They Set Speed Traps Around His Town, He Gets Out, Camps at the Roadside, and Warns His Fellow Motorists.



Grover Reese, secretary of the Akron Automobile club, preaches and practices the gospel of being on the job. As a minor incident of his work he heard recently that a rural justice near Akron had set himself a nice little speed trap. What would you do in such a case? Well, Reese didn't. He painted a big sign, hung it on the back of his car, and spent four long, weary Sundays just standing there in the ditch by the watched road, warning tourists to be careful. Cases growing out of arrests were contested and the trapper finally driven to private life. You see, Reese used to be a newspaper man.

Motorists Face No Fuel Shortage, Says U. S. Expert

nearly constant, we must make more gasoline from a given volume of crude oil. The best evidence that this proposition furnishes the answer to our problem is the fact that cracking processes are now solving the problem. In other words, since 20 per cent of our gasoline is now being made by cracking, the price of gasoline would of necessity be much higher without this increased supply.

The chemical phenomena involved in the cracking of heavy oils into lower boiling oils have been discussed in considerable detail in bulletin 114, United States bureau of mines. Broadly speaking, and without consideration of relative merits, cracking processes may be classified under the five heads:

1. Liquid condition processes wherein oil is cracked as a liquid.
2. Gaseous condition processes wherein oil is cracked as a gas.
3. Processes wherein cracking is aided through the use of catalyzers.
4. Processes wherein oil is mixed with steam, hydrogen, or other materials.
5. Combinations of the above four methods.

The object of the present paper is not to discuss the technical nor the research side of cracking, but to indicate how real is this industrial operation today. During the present year, 1917, approximately 600,000,000 gallons of cracked gasoline are being produced in the United States. It is estimated by competent authorities that the production of cracked gasoline in 1918 will be 1,000,000,000 gallons, and that by 1920 more gasoline will be produced by cracking than by all other methods.

Many people have been disappointed because cracking processes have not reduced the price of gasoline materially, but fail to consider their tremendous benefit in keeping the price of gasoline from going 10 cents a gallon higher; 7,000 automobiles a day require a cumulative supply of motor fuels. Our crude oil production is not increasing. Kerosene carburetors as yet are not a factor. The entire load is falling on the shoulders of cracked gasoline, and cracked gasoline promises to make light of its load.

Exhaust Echoes

Without any particular blare of trumpets the Shaw Livery company is entering the automobile manufacturing field on a surprisingly extensive scale. In its comparatively small assembly room at 300 East Huron street more than 1,000 taxicabs were built by the concern in the six months ending May 1, and plans are now being made for a regular output of seven cars a day. Many of the machines, chiefly of the yellow cab type, are being used in New York, Boston, and other eastern cities. Because of its limited storage capacity the company can keep only six days' supply of parts on hand, making necessary a steady flow of shipments from the manufacturers.

G. W. Stratton distributor of the King in Chicago, reports that a seven passenger King has just completed 2,735 miles of continuous motor running in seven days and nights without any mechanical adjustment or repair except that due to a collision which nearly put the machine out of business. The test was made in 115 round trips between St. Paul and Minneapolis. Gasoline consumption gave an average of approximately thirteen miles to the gallon, and but 1¼ gallons of oil was used. The accident involved the replacement of a fan, but the engine was not stopped at any time during the run.

Classification of the automobile among the luxuries, made frequently of late in connection with the war tax problem, has aroused the righteous ire of the manufacturers. L. J. Ollier, director of sales of the Studebaker corporation, unburdens himself thus: "The automobile increases every individual's capacity to produce. Years ago it ceased to be a luxury, and now, in every section of the country, men in every walk of life look upon their cars as a necessity not to be dispensed with. A motor car is a time saver, a health giver, a business builder."

The LITTLE THINGS THAT HELP

Steady Light on Fords.

A simple, rugged controller has been devised for installation in Ford magneto lighting systems, with the idea of insuring full illumination at low speeds and no more current than the lamps can stand when the car is driven fast. The basic principle is a varying magnetic field connected with the throttle and operated automatically as the throttle is moved. An auxiliary device is provided to eliminate self-induction at low speeds. The lamps are wired in parallel, making each a separate unit, so that if one goes out the others burn as before. The device is easily installed and costs $5.

Take Your Wardrobe Along.

Automobile trunks are to be had nowadays in an infinite variety of designs. A refinement that has just appeared is a complete wardrobe trunk, with drawers, shoe box, coat hangers, and the like, built to be carried upright on the front end of the running board. A steel holder locks the trunk to the car and an enameled duck cover protects it from dust. A turn of a handle removes the trunk, permitting it to be carried bodily to your hotel room.

Tire Repairs En Route.

An ingenious outfit is offered for the making of permanent repairs on inner tubes immediately after they have been punctured. It consists of a clamp, a dozen patches, and a piece of sandpaper. Each patch is a complete vulcanizing medium in itself, having a tiny metal pan containing a combustible material which provides the necessary heat, and a piece of quick curing rubber on the other side of the pan. The pan is clamped over the puncture and the heat unit lit with a match, a cigar, or a cigaret stub. The repairing process, it is claimed, takes less than five minutes.

To Meet the Need of the Nation

THE farmers of this nation must have more efficient farming equipment to successfully meet the President's call for increased food production.

Only by an adequate equipment of tractor power can they supply the nation's need for food.

Only tractors can furnish the increased power necessary for immediate farm use—tractors are the only form of farm power which can be produced in a day. Horses or mules require years to grow to working age.

Tractors can be used night and day, while animal power must rest and sleep. Tractors operate on oil and save all the grain they raise for human food, while animal power eats part of the grain it raises. Tractors enable one man to do as much work as several men using animal power.

Avery Tractors—built in six sizes, a size for every size farm—have been proved successful by thousands of farmers in actual field use. Built and backed by an established company with a large factory and numerous selling and service branches. They will successfully help to produce the needed crops and prepare and haul them to market. They are being built in large numbers as rapidly as materials are secured.

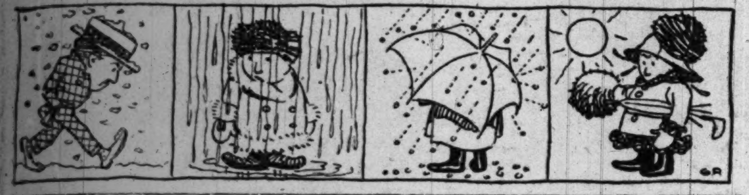
CHICAGO WEATHER.

The sun was bright, and warm the breeze,
The birds were singing symphonies,
The sky was blue, the grass was green,
The vista wore a snappy sheen.
I donned my kelly—straw and new—
My pongee suit of luscious hue,
And down to the loop I gayly blowed—
And then it snowed.

For winter weather then I dressed;
I wore my furs and paper vest,
My titillating "underneathes."
That look like wool and feel like fleas,
My arctics and my actor coat,
With "almost fur" around the throat;
Within the loop I then detrained—
Of course it rained.

O, then I swore I'd fool 'em yet,
And, swearing, got a cravenette,
Some rubber boots, an umberell,
A mackintosh—all sleek and swell;
A rubber lid to shield my dome,
And, thus prepared, I left my home.
But, O, Curse! Curse! Of course, I failed—
For then it hailed.

Once more, in overcoats and boots,
And rubbers, furs, and woolen suits,
And sweaters, muffs, and mackintoshes,
Um-ber-ellas and galoshes,
Mittens, gloves, and paper vest—
I went downtown—you know the rest—
You know what happened then, old scout—
The sun came out!



Why They Laugh in Vaudeville.

McVICKER'S.

Harry Rose: I just met a Boston highbrow—you know, one of those guys who has tried to pour a 6% education into a 5% brain. He said, "Thou should have thy hirsute adornment removed from thy face." I said, "Come again, please." He said: "Here's a nickel. Get a shave." So I went into a 5 cent barber shop. The barber shaved me so fast I thought he was trying to break a record. So I says to him, "What's your hurry?" He said: "I must get finished before the boss gets back. He doesn't allow me to shave customers yet." And I believe it.

After plying a razor over my face with the same delicacy of touch that a stonecutter would use in chiseling out a tombstone, the amateur barber said to me, "And what will you have on your face after I finish shaving you?" I said, "I'll be lucky if I still have my lips and part of my nose."

On account of the fashionable cut of my garments I am sometimes mistaken for a millionaire. Only the other day a spinster of very uncertain age approached me and said: "We're getting up a raffle for a poor tramp. Won't you take a ticket?" "No, mum," says I. "I wouldn't know what to do with a poor tramp if I won him. One in the family is enough."

And yet I manage to extract a great deal of fun out of living. The other evening I was at a surprise party. The party was given by the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick. I shudder to think what might have happened if they had been unfriendly, although I'm accustomed to ups and downs. I used to be an actor. I once appeared in a play called "The Iceman's Bride, or Warm Hearts But Cold Feet." I was supposed to elope with the bride, whereupon the husband shoots me. But the woman who played the bride was so excessively homely that instead of shooting me the husband should have rewarded me.

GRAVITATION.

THE proof that gravitation is universal lies in the revolutions of the celestial bodies around each other. When we see planets and stars faithfully describing curves with which we are familiar we are warranted in saying the same law governs in space as on earth.

Falling is another term to apply to two bodies drawn together by gravity. We live on the surface of a great sphere, never rising any appreciable distance above it; hence the objects which we see falling always strike the earth. In space, where celestial bodies are relatively mere points of force, two bodies in falling may not collide at all, for if there is the slightest motion of either out of a direct line between them they graze each other in passing and forever after whirl about in orbits.

An object freely falling on earth moves too rapidly to be easily observed, thus making it difficult to find directly the sort of path it follows. Some method must be devised which will permit it to fall slowly and yet offer no sensible resistance to its motion. A heavy ball rolling down an incline fulfills these conditions. No matter what the slope is, if it rolls one unit in one second, in two seconds it will go four units, in three second nine units, in four sixteen, etc.

To find the actual speed of a falling body the distance it travels in any second is multiplied by the ratio between the length of the incline and the height to which one end is raised. By this means it has been proved that a body falls sixteen feet in the first second.

When a ball rolls from a table it does not drop directly but describes a more or less curved path to the floor. On examination this path is seen to be the result of two separate motions, the uniform horizontal motion of rolling and the peculiar motion of falling. A cannon ball follows the same plan in its flight, rising against gravity, resting, and falling, all as it speeds on.

These two examples of the motion of projectiles are also examples of the orbits of celestial bodies, for the curves pursued by comets and planets differ in no way from the curve of a tossed stone, except in size. Every projectile attempts to revolve about the center of the earth as a satellite, but cannot, because the earth is in the way. Out in space, where there is plenty of room, we find all sorts of objects from tiny dust grains to flaming double stars revolving in the same kind of orbits as that of a stone when thrown into the air.

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville.

RIALTO.

Ruth Roye: In order to find out what the future had in store for me I just consulted a fortune teller. She said, "You will shortly marry a millionaire who will make you a princely allowance; $2, please." I said, "I'll pay you out of the allowance." Next I went to a palm reader. She examined my hand very carefully and then remarked, "You are very economical in some things." I said, "In what, for instance?" She said, "Soap and water."

Well, if I'm economical with soap there's a reason. A year ago I was getting so stout that the doctor advised me to give up cakes of every description. So, of course, I also had to give up cakes of soap. I remember it very distinctly, because things were a little quiet in the theatrical business at the time. So I applied for a position as saleslady in a department store. I was referred to the superintendent. He said, "What references can you give?" I said, "I have a letter of recommendation from my minister." He said, "That's very good as far as it goes, but we never require your services on Sunday."

Economy is a Factor

ECONOMY is simply wise buying.

It does not mean unnecessary sacrifice.

Economy is the very opposite of hoarding.

For the very term "economy" presupposes the purchase of necessities, of conveniences, of those things that make for business and personal efficiency.

Automobiles are necessities with many of us—professional men find them well-nigh indispensable.

Salesmen in various lines of business often find their efficiency greatly enhanced by the use of a motor car.

To the family it means health, strength and added vigor—it means increased happiness.

Anything that means all this is an economy.

Therefore, the question is one of what automobile to buy.

Studebaker is the largest producer of fine automobiles in the world.

Studebaker's great resources, Studebaker's great volume enable Studebaker to produce a better car at a lower price.

For this reason Studebaker cars are probably the greatest values on the automobile market today, dollar for dollar of their prices.

The Studebaker FOUR is the only 40 Horse Power, Four Cylinder, Seven Passenger car selling for less than $1,000.

The Studebaker SIX is the only 50 Horse Power, Six Cylinder, Seven Passenger car selling for less than $1,500.

In ratio to power Studebaker cars are very economical in their consumption of gasoline.

In ratio to weight and carrying capacity, they are very economical in tires—Studebaker owners frequently get from 8,000 to 10,000 miles on a single set of tires.

Studied accessibility reduces adjustment and repair costs to a minimum.

Studebaker's nation-wide organization of thirty-two direct branches and 6,500 dealers, assures your permanent service satisfaction.

Therefore, economy being a factor—if you want to buy wisely and well, it will pay you to investigate Studebaker before you decide what car to buy.

AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS by HIGH SPEED

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will be published.

I intend to start within the next few days on an automobile trip from Chicago to Washington, D. C., but as I have received conflicting advice regarding the best route to follow, am looking to High Speed to be set right. Would you advise following the Lincoln highway or first going to Indianapolis and then driving east from there? What I desire is the best route, regardless of the distance. Would I find the Indianapolis and eastern route sign boarded? Please state what highways should be followed.

SUBSCRIBER, Chicago.

Most of the Washington bound tourists seem to be following the Lincoln highway through Fort Wayne, Lima, Canton, Pittsburgh, and Bedford to Gettysburg and then going through Westminster to Washington. This is a good route, but in my opinion a much better one is found by driving south from Chicago and then striking east. Excellent roads are to be found practically all of the way. This route runs through South Chicago and Hammond to Dyer, where the Lincoln highway is picked up and followed through Merrillville to Valparaiso, 55.3 miles. Then leave the Lincoln highway and go through North Judson, Winamac, Star City, Logansport, 83.5 miles; Kokomo, Tipton, Noblesville, 66.9 miles; Newcastle, Richmond, 63.7 miles. Here the National Old trails road is met and followed to Washington. From Richmond the route continues through Dayton, Springfield, Columbus, 102.8 miles; Newark, Zanesville, 62.9 miles; Cambridge, Bridgeport, Wheeling, 72.4 miles; Washington [Pa.], Uniontown, 68 miles; Grantsville, Cumberland, 62.1 miles; Hagerstown, 64 miles; Frederick to Washington, D. C., 77.6 miles. This makes a total distance of 779 miles. The Lincoln highway route figures an even 800 miles. The route here outlined is well marked and easily followed.

Is there any way in which kerosene might be used for fuel in place of gasoline? Would one necessarily be obliged to have a new carburetor installed on the machine? In driving through a country where gasoline was hard to obtain what substitute could be used in an emergency?

HENRY BAYFIELD, Tulsa, Okla.

By installing a fuel tank with two compartments, kerosene may be used quite successfully. Such a tank should be fitted with a two way cock which could be operated from the dash. In one tank carry gasoline and in the other carry kerosene. The gasoline should, of course, be used for starting and for warming up the motor, after which the kerosene should be switched on. To obtain the best results with kerosene, the carburetor should be hot jacketed. In case one is unable to procure gasoline and can get kerosene, the addition of one pound of commercial sulphuric ether to five gallons of kerosene will make that fluid act almost the same as gasoline. The ether, which for emergency purposes could be included with one's equipment, should not cost over 50 cents at retail.

We have a number of automobiles which are exactly alike. The motors are the same. On all of them the No. 1 and No. 4 cylinders seem to get more oil than Nos. 2 and 3. The valve caps were taken off and I made a close inspection. The tops of pistons 1 and 4 were wet with oil, while the other two were dry. Can you explain what causes this? The motors have the splash system of lubrication. I might add that we experience a great deal of carbon trouble.

F. P. C., Chicago.

It is indeed strange that you are having the same trouble with all of the motors. The symptoms you describe clearly indicate that oil is working up past the pistons or through the valves, but I cannot understand why this occurs in all the motors, unless it is that they are defective. When oil shows upon top of the piston heads it means that the cylinders are scored, that the rings are worn, or that the slots of the rings have all worked around until they are in line, thus allowing the lubricant to get by. It is hardly believable, however, that a number of motors would be similarly affected. The carbon trouble is, of course, caused by the excessive amount of oil that collects on top of the cylinders or by the low grade of gasoline used. In these days of low test fuel, carbon rapidly collects and should be removed every month or so. I would suggest that you take the matter up with the makers of the motors and find out if the motors were improperly bored.

Which route are you recommending to tourists traveling between Chicago and Detroit, the one via Coldwater or the one via Battle Creek? What I want is the best route, regardless of the distance.

P. L. P., Chicago.

At the present time I am not recommending either of the routes you mention. Both of them have a number of bad stretches that take the joy out of a trip to Detroit. Some day, perhaps, the Michigan folks will build a good road between the two cities. Just now the best way is to go through South Chicago, Hammond, East Chicago, Gary, Michigan City, Rolling Prairie, New Carlisle, South Bend, 100.5 miles; Mishawaka, Elkhart, Goshen, Millersburg, Ligonier, Wawaka, Kendallville, Edgerton, Bryan, Archbold, Wauseon, 127.9 miles; Ottokee, Winameg, Jasper, Adrian, Tecumseh, Macon, Saline, Ypsilanti, Wayne, and Dearborn to Detroit, 94.7 miles. This makes a total distance of 323.1 miles. This route is from fifteen to thirty-four miles longer than the two main routes, but the tourist who uses it will reach Detroit with much more comfort and much less wear and tear on his car than if he took the shorter roads. The route above outlined consists of fine roads practically every mile of the way.

WAR MOTORING

One Argument Against Calling This Sort of Vehicle a "Pleasure Car."

Such Chicago motorists as may be skeptical as to whether touring cars are really used in war will find instruction in the above picture. It is a British official photograph taken on the western front in France and shows an English officer driving through mud and water up to the hub caps. At this time of the year few roads along the front are suitable for speeding, and to make a desired destination without a long series of breakdowns is an achievement of some distinction.

Even This 30,000 Will Not Be Enough

There will be 30,000 Smith Form-a-Trucks built this year—but even this huge production will not be enough. So if you have waited for further proof of the wonderful economy—efficiency—service value of this tremendous achievement in motor transportation, don't wait another day.

Over 18,000 users—over 450 lines of work—are all the proofs you need, and there is not a single Smith Form-a-Truck owner who will not say that he has cut delivery and hauling costs from 50% to 75%.

This year you not only get this wonderful attachment at the price of a good pair of horses, but you get it adapted to any Ford, Maxwell, Buick, Dodge Bros., Chevrolet or Overland Car. So you can select the power plant you like the best—have the most confidence in.

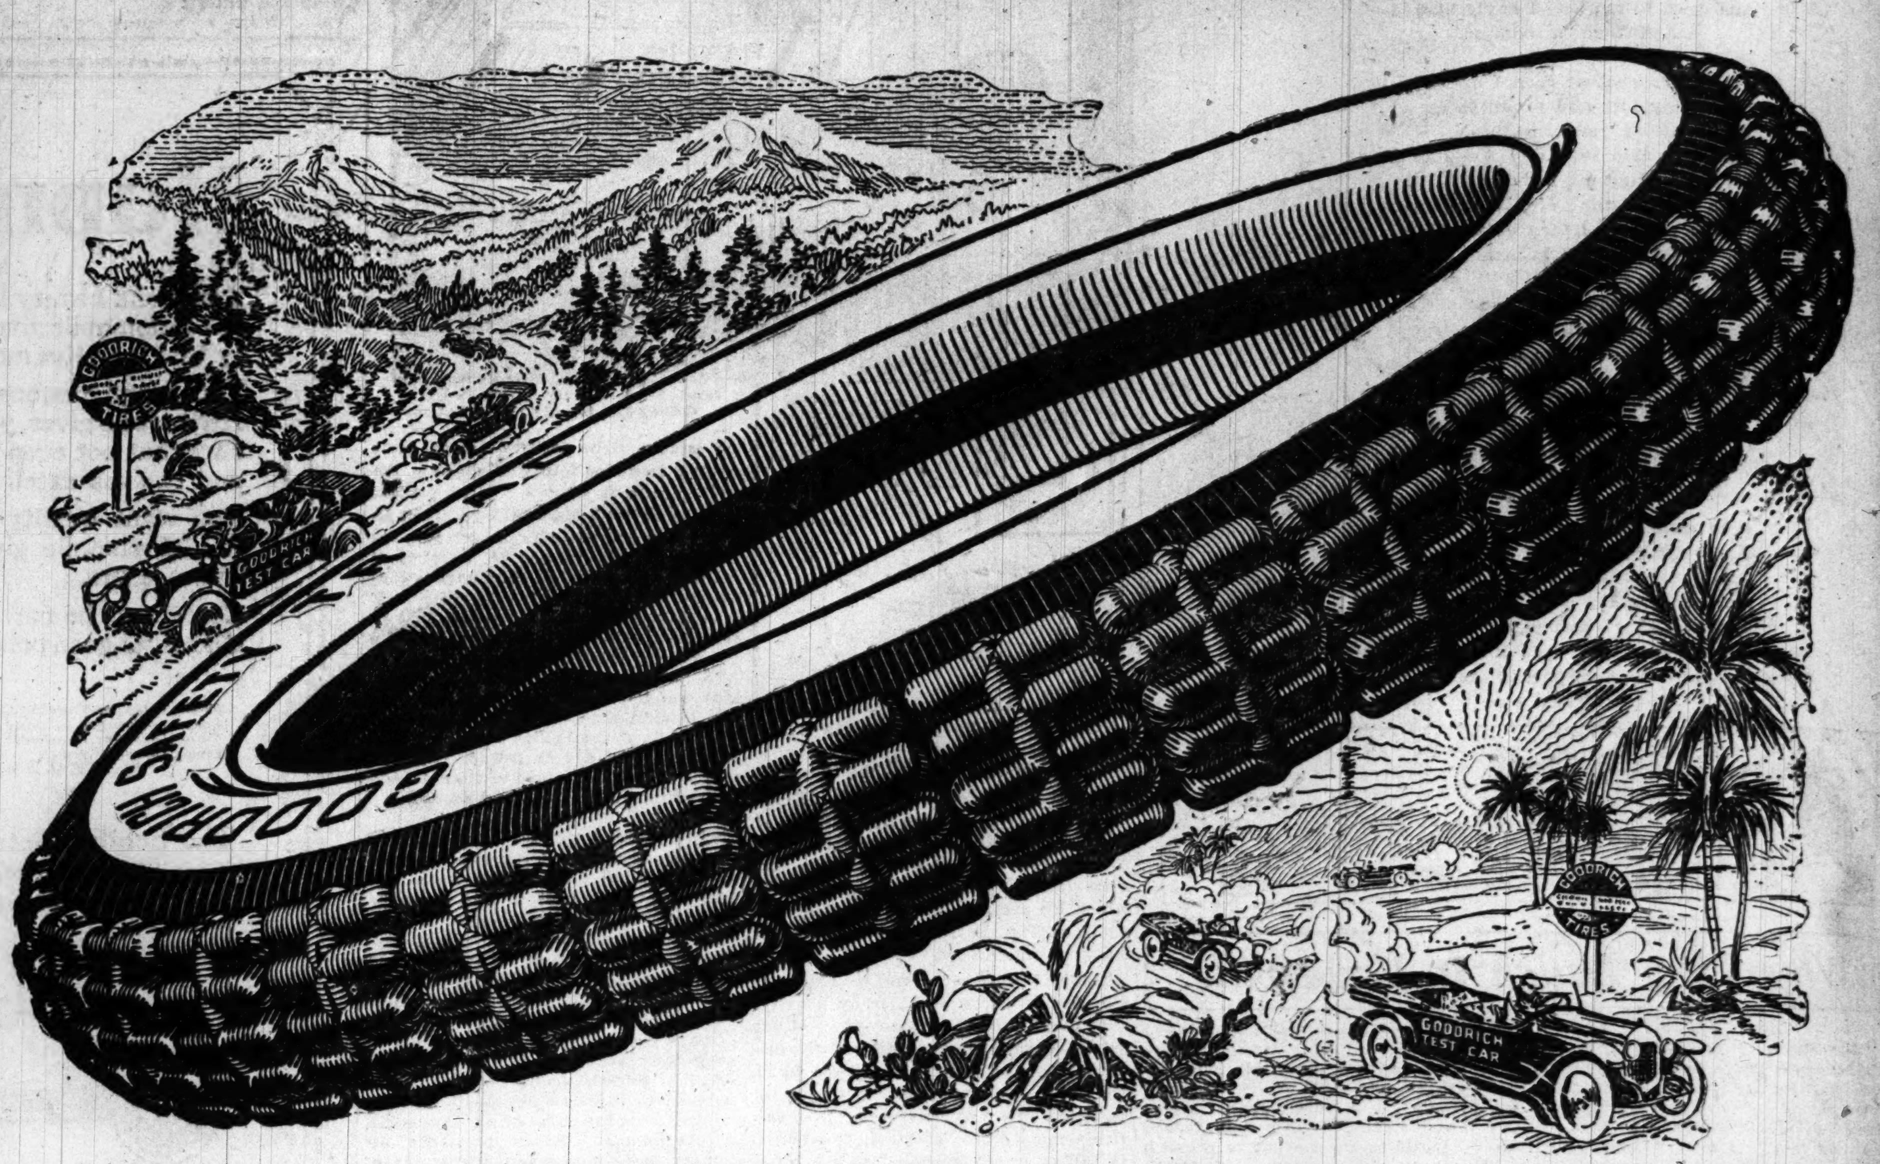
The Survival of the Fittest



GOODRICH

BLACK SAFETY TREAD TIRES

EVOLUTION climbs on the bones of the weak. Only THE STRONG, THE BEST, survive the TEST. As true of TIRES as of cave men.

Goodrich Black Safety Treads are the FIT fabric tires that have survived the relentless TEST of the Goodrich Test Car Fleet.

To produce them hundreds of tires have been worn to the quick over millions of miles of the worst roads of America.

Goodrich never sells you an experiment. Be it a Goodrich rubber mat, a garden hose, or a Goodrich tire, it must prove itself by wear and tear test worthy of the Goodrich name.

A cruel test of tires—that test of Goodrich's Test Car Fleets.

Tested The Country Over

Six corps of heavy cars, light cars, hard running cars—take Goodrich Tires and maul their MERIT against teeth of sand, rock, and gravel. Two sets of drivers, speeding them sixteen hours a day, hammer them week after week on the anvil of the road.

Wherever climate and roads can test and tell something about tires, a Goodrich Test Car Fleet is grinding the TRUTH out of Goodrich tires.

While the Atlantic Fleet crunches through the hills and valleys of New York and New England, the Pacific Fleet hammers the granite highways of the Western coast.

While the Dixie Fleet braves the sun of the South, the Lake Fleet ploughs the sand stretches of Minnesota.

While the Prairie Fleet scours the roads around Kansas City, the Mountain Fleet battles the rocky trails of Yellowstone and Glacier Parks.

Throughout miles of roughing it, which run into millions, over roads which cross-hatch the map of the United States, Goodrich learns the TESTED VIRTUES of its tires.

Thus it settles the durability and resilience of the UNIT MOLDED TIRE—the unbroken curing Goodrich has always maintained was the BEST construction for fabric tires. Thus it settles the wearing strength of Black Tread, the toughest rubber known.

ALL THIS IS THE BEST IN TIRES BECAUSE IT HAS SURVIVED THE TEST.

Ford Car Tires of Heroic Size
GOODRICH "Three-Seventy-Five"

The tire sensation of 1917, made exclusively by Goodrich, designed expressly for Ford Cars, is a burly tire, 31x3¾ in., built in Safety Tread only, to fit 30-inch rims.

Its extra rubber and fabric means less stress and strain on the tire and your car, hence ECONOMY, in longer-lived tires and longer-lived cars.

These handsome tires, at little more cost, make a DE LUXE FORD CAR.

SALESMEN—THERE IS A GREATER DEmand for producing, experienced salesmen and saleladies at large salaries than for any other class of earners.

Do you really want to be one of this type? Do you believe that these large earners are born big producers or, as has been proven, do these men and women become successful because they are educated?

The opportunity for you is here. It does not require you to give up your present position. You can attend our evening school three nights a week from 7:30 to 9. During these hours we teach you all the elements of selling from A to Z. This school is not one of theory—it is one of actual practice.

Only successful, experienced salesmen, physicians, lawyers teach the ethics that graduate you with the knowledge that will admit of your leaving your inside employment and not only getting into outside healthy employment but also of becoming a big earner. Our ordinary sales persons average better than $75 per week.

We do not want you to come in unless you are fully determined to become a big earner. No hasbeens, drinkers, or plasurites need apply.

It is necessary that you register at once, as only a limited number can be accommodated.

We also have a few part-time positions open—where we can pay a small salary to start.

Apply 8:30 a. m. to 9 p. m. Open Sunday from 8:30 to 5 p. m.

"JUNE BARGAINS."

Can you afford to stay in a cooped up flat when there are brand new houses—complete throughout, with gas, electricity, modern plumbing, hardwood floors, etc.; ready for you to move right into?

You can own one of these beautiful homes with a very small payment down.

$100 to $500.

SOME LESS MODERN, BUT SUBSTANTIAL HOMES, AS LOW AS $50 DOWN—YOUR RENT MONEY DOES THE REST.

Each house is on a wide lot—some on quarter and half acres, well drained and suitable for gardening. We will plow and prepare your gardens at actual cost and take a personal interest in getting you located without delay.

We will also take your lot or half acre in exchange as first payment on a house and will give free use of additional ground until sold.

DO NOT WAIT FOR ANOTHER YEAR.

This is particularly a home neighborhood, with good schools, churches, and markets in abundance; really a delightful combination of city and country life.

It would be impossible to reproduce these houses at the present prices, ranging from $1,250, $2,450, $4,500.

THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY.
DO NOT MISS IT.

Take any car line crossing Irving Park-blvd. and transfer west to either office, or phone "Kildare 7866" for information.

BRAIN NOT BRAWN

will win the great world war. Your brain and not your brawn will decide your life battle.

THINK AND WIN!

Now, here's something to think about. The real estate market is about to awaken from a short period of depression; activity is becoming more apparent every day. We have a few customers in the United States that are about to spend about $10,000,000,000 for American merchandise. You will get your share of that money; we will get ours. We are all about to enjoy the greatest period of prosperity that any nation has ever experienced.

NOW, HERE'S A TIP FOR YOU!

Buy some real estate now—while it's cheap. Buy it around the Howard "L" Terminal, where it's best. Wilson-av. Terminal real estate made many poor men rich—they permitted their brain to think; they had the courage to "back up" their thinking by prudent investment. The history of Wilson-av. will fade into insignificance when, in a few years, the story of Howard Terminal real estate money making is told—it will read like a romance.

Buy some of it now, while it's cheap. MAKE A PROFIT FROM THOSE WHO HESITATE.

Let us send you a list of our "money makers." Let us know how much you have to invest—whether it's a few hundred dollars or several thousand—we will show you how to multiply it.

THINK AND ACT NOW!

ONLY ONE ANSWER

The American attitude toward the food supply has always been one of indifference, its sources or its wastes and abuses. But now, as the time approaches, our minds dwell anxiously on what the harvests may bring forth, and well they may.

NO LONGER are we a nation with only its own needs to consider, but we must feed the nations with whom we have joined hands in this world war. Their cause is our cause and their soldiers are now our soldiers, just as much as if they wore our uniforms and carried our flag. No longer is it a matter of generosity, profit, or policy, but it is an absolute necessity. Not only must we do it for this year and next but perhaps for ten years—at all events, until the war is over and for several years thereafter, until the nations have resumed normal production.

THERE IS ONLY ONE answer. We must greatly increase production. Each acre cultivated must be made to produce more, more acres must be brought under cultivation, and to accomplish this tens of thousands of men with brains and industry are required. Such an opportunity comes but once in a lifetime. Those who are enlisting are doing their full share, but how about those who are not? The excuse "I never had a chance" can no longer be offered, and if you do not take advantage of this wonderful time for farming you must admit that you totally lack the nerve to be a success, or the desire to serve your country when you can do it such great good with profit to yourself at the same time.

MY PROPOSITION IS arranged to meet the circumstances of all. If you have the means you can buy a splendidly improved farm with fine buildings in Southern Michigan—I have more than 50 such from $50 to $125 per acre—or you can buy as little as 10 acres of unimproved land which you can develop yourself for truck, fruit, and poultry, or 40, 80, or 160 acres for general farming and stock raising. Of the unimproved lands I have more than 50,000 acres at from $15 to $25 per acre, and these I sell on very small monthly payments if you desire, or terms to suit.

THE NEXT EXCURSION to the lands is June 5th. PRIVATE CARS. Round trip from Chicago, including berth, meals, and auto trips over the land, $12.95. Don't wait, but ACT NOW! Join us on this trip.

WRITE FOR my free booklet with 115 illustrations on the unimproved lands in Mason, Manistee, Wexford, Kalkaska, and Antrim Counties, or come in and let us tell you about the lands and show you stereopticon views and samples of 1916 crops. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

OR IF YOU are in a position to buy a fine improved farm in Southern Michigan—a real bargain, near a good town, with live stock, tools, etc., ready to move on at once—write for special information about this and for my improved farm list.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Texas.

FOR SALE—NEW FARM OPPORTUNITY IN ONE OF THE GREATEST STATES IN THE UNION. A new line of the Santa Fe is tapping a rich and fertile prairie section of Northwest Texas, near the Oklahoma line, where already many farmers have MADE GOOD in a big way with wheat, hogs, and live stock. Here, if you ACT NOW, you can get first choice—get in on the ground floor of a great opportunity. You can get in AHEAD of the railway—ahead of the people whom the railway will bring—ahead of those who act more slowly than you do. This is the chance of a lifetime for a man of moderate means. A certain number of thrifty, farseeing farmers can acquire good land at an astonishingly low figure and on long, easy terms. If you have confidence that a great railroad, like the Santa Fe, would only recommend what it considers a good thing, and because it wants to see new territory developed and wants newcomers to PROSPER and PRODUCE—then write me TODAY for particulars about this district. Mild climate, social advantages, schools, churches, telephones, good roads. Everything there but enough men with their families. Will you be one of the fortunate first comers to reap the advantages of a section that has been minutely inspected by a Santa Fe agricultural agent and pronounced RIGHT? Write me NOW and let me send you a copy of the special illustrated circular we are getting out. C. L. SEAGRAVES, 1105 Railway Exchange, Chicago.

FOR SALE—BY OWNER, THREE HUNDRED thousand acres of land situated in various counties in Texas. Some small farms with improvements thereon, on shell roads and near cities. Plenty of water, good houses and barns, railroads and stations on some of the tracts; all for sale on the most liberal terms. Ninety per cent of this land will grow almost any kind of a crop, especially foodstuffs.

2,619,439 Answers to Tribune 'Want Ads'

A total of 2,619,439 letters—2,619,439 answers to Tribune "Want Ads"—were handed across The Tribune Want Ad Counter to Tribune Advertisers during 1916. That was an average of over 50,000 every week, more than 17 letters every minute in every 8-hour business day.

And bear in mind that this tremendous total of replies did not come from the use of large display advertisements but from the modest "Want Ads" that occupy but little space and only cost a trifle. Nor does this total of over two million and a half replies represent all the answers that Tribune "Want Ads" brought. It's only part of them. It's only those that came addressed to box numbers in The Tribune office. The others that were mailed direct to advertisers would make at least as many more.

The amount of business done last year through these small "Want Ads" is almost beyond computation. It runs into millions upon millions of dollars. Every minute of every working day had its quota of results. The businesses of every different kind that were disposed of, the houses and apartments by the thousands that were rented, the houses and apartments, stores and factories, city lots and farms and ranches that were sold, the automobiles that were sold, the rooms that were rented, the household goods disposed of, the good positions found—the scores on scores of different kinds of business deals brought to successful consummation by Tribune "Want Ads" make up a total volume almost impossible for the mind to grasp.

Your share in this great business, running into millions upon millions, is waiting for you. The "Want Ad" dividends this year will be even greater than they were last year, because the circulation of The Tribune is so much greater than it was last year. Let Tribune "Want Ads" solve your problems. Let them help you pile up profits. There's hardly a human want they cannot help you fill.
